ERRATA ET ADDENDA.

I. PROLÉGOMÈNES.

Page IX. Il y est dit que Corisopitum, la capitale des Cornouaillais armoricains, fut fondée par des Cornovii expulsés de l'île par les Saxons. Dom Le Gallois suppose, et non sans vraisemblance, que cette expulsion fut le résultat d'une invasion antérieure des Pictes et des Scots.

Page XVII. Le duc Beppolen est représenté comme ayant dévasté par le fer et par le feu quelques parties du pays Rennais. Il faut lire du pays Vannetais, car Rennes appartenait aux Francs, au VIe siècle.

Page XXXI. « La paroisse de Bain, » lisez Bains. Le plou de Bains, dans lequel était située l'abbaye de Redon, appartenait au diocèse de Vannes, tandis que Bain ne cessa jamais de faire partie de l'évêché de Rennes.

Page XL. Fausse désignation de charte dans la note 1. Il faut lire « p. 67, ch. LXXXIX, » et non pas p. 68, ch. XC.

Page XLIII. Même genre d'erreur, note 3; il y faut lire « p. 186-187, ch. CCXXXVIII-CCXXXIX, » et non pas p. 181-187.

Page CXXVI, ligne 19. Par une erreur inexplicable, on a imprimé doyenné de Guer, au lieu de doyenné de Beignon. (Voir l'évêché de Saint-Malo, sur la carte.)

II. DATES.

Page 24, ch. XXX, 2 mars 859. — Peut-être faut-il lire : « 2 mars 860, feria VI, luna XXVI. »

Page 30, ch. XXXVI, la date du mois est omise, il faut lire : « le 18 février 858. »

Page 204, ch. CCLIII, lisez « ann. 870, » et non 864-870.

III. POUILLÉS.

Page 500. Nous avons déjà relevé plus haut une grosse erreur : la paroisse de Molac ne doit pas être placée dans le doyenné de Péaule, mais bien sur le territoire de Rieux, comme nous l'avons dit p. 501 du même pouillé.

Page 529. Par suite d'un report de lignes opéré pendant la mise en pages, le titre CAP-CAVAL a été déplacé, de sorte que ce doyenné a été diminué de plusieurs paroisses qui sont attribuées au doyenné de Cap-Sizun, lequel ne se compose que des paroisses suivantes : Plogoff, Cleden-Cap-Sizun, Goulien, Esquibien, Primelin, Beuzec-Cap-Sizun, Meillan, Poullan, Pouldergat, Ploaré, Guengat.

OBSERVATIONS

AU SUJET DE LA MARCHE DES LÉGIONS DE CÉSAR ALLANT ATTAQUER LA VÉNÉTIE.

Les savants auteurs de la nouvelle carte des Gaules font suivre à l'armée romaine, depuis Nantes (Condevincum) jusqu'à la presqu'île de Rhuys, une route à peu près impossible. En effet, en se rendant de Nantes vers Penestin, presque en ligne droite, les légions s'engageaient parmi les tourbières dites de la Grande-Brière; puis elles devaient passer la Vilaine à son embouchure, c'est-à-dire dans un endroit où le fleuve est très-large, très-profond et difficile à franchir. Ce n'est pas tout : arrivés sur l'autre rive, les Romains étaient obligés ou de passer le bras de mer qui s'étend de Penerff jusqu'au territoire d'Ambon, ou bien, pour éviter l'obstacle, de marcher vers le sud-est et de suivre alors la route beaucoup plus facile que nous avons indiquée sur notre carte. Nous prions le lecteur de vouloir bien comparer les deux itinéraires avec une carte moderne du département du Morbihan.

POST-SCRIPTUM.

Après une dernière révision de mes Prolégomènes j'ai pu y relever quelques erreurs qui m'avaient d'abord échappé :

1° Page XCIII, au mot Toul, il faut lire : même signification que POUL.

Dans mes Prolégomènes, page CXCVII, j'ai omis de placer Langast et Landébia parmi les enclaves de ce diocèse en Saint-Brieuc [1]; Rimou et Saint-Rémy-du-Plain n'ont point été non plus compris parmi les enclaves de Dol en Rennes.

[1] Langast et Landébia sont cités parmi les enclaves de Dol en Saint-Brieuc, dans le pouillé de Dol. Voyez plus loin p. 552.

INTRODUCTION

BIOGRAPHIE DE GUILLAUME GRUEL.

§ I.

Famille de Guillaume Gruel (XIVe-XVe siècle).

La Chronique d'Arthur de Richemont, par Guillaume Gruel, figure dans toutes les grandes collections de mémoires sur l'histoire de France ; mais les éditeurs sont unanimes à reconnaître leur complète ignorance sur la vie de ce biographe, dont le travail, qualifié d'apologie, n'est consulté qu'avec la plus grande défiance. Après avoir insinué timidement qu'il devait être Breton, on affirme peut-être avec quelque témérité qu'il habitait, en 1427, la paroisse de Saint-Étienne à Rennes[1] ; un manuscrit de sa chronique lui donne le titre de gentilhomme ordinaire de la maison du connétable de Richemont[2] ; enfin, MM. Vallet de Viriville et J. Quicherat prétendent, avec raison, il est vrai, mais sans fournir la preuve de leur assertion, que Raoul Gruel et Guillaume étaient frères[3], tandis que M. Petitot nie l'exis-

3. Article de M. Vallet de Viriville sur Raoul Gruel, dans la

tence de textes établissant cette parenté, que M. Cosneau, le dernier historien de Richemont, admet sans la considérer comme absolument certaine[1]. En ajoutant à ces indications isolées quelques détails tirés uniquement de la Chronique de Richemont, l'on aura le sommaire complet de ce que l'on sait actuellement sur Guillaume Gruel et sa famille. De patientes recherches nous ont permis, malgré l'extrême rareté des documents, d'arriver à des conclusions plus certaines et d'élargir ce cadre trop restreint.

Le nom de cette famille, originaire de la Bretagne orientale[2], apparaît dans les actes dès le XIVe siècle, et les Gruel, gens de petite noblesse, fournissent alors à l'Église et aux armées ducales plusieurs moines et écuyers, dont nous ne connaissons guère que les noms. En 1320, nous trouvons parmi les moines de Saint-Méen un Raoul Gruel, qualifié de « prieur des plaids[3]. » En 1398, Frère Simon Gruel représente le monastère de Saint-Melaine dans un procès porté devant le Parlement de Bretagne, siégeant à Rennes[4]. Dans le même siècle, un Guillaume Gruel figure dans la montre d'Olivier de Montauban, faite à Dinan, le 16 janvier 1357[5]; il porte le titre d'écuyer : nous sommes donc en présence d'une famille noble. C'est sans doute le même que l'on voit quelques années plus tard, en juin 1363, au service de Maurice Mauvinet[6]. On lit dans le Dictionnaire d'Ogée, à l'article Quédillac[1], qu'en 1400, le domaine de la Bodinaye appartenait à un personnage de ce nom. Au mois de mai 1418, un autre Guillaume fait partie des hommes d'armes désignés pour accompagner le duc Jean VI dans son voyage à la Cour de France, et il reçoit douze livres pour ses gages du mois d'avril. En octobre, il lui est fait un nouveau paiement pour le même objet, et il doit toujours suivre le duc lorsque celui-ci ira vers le Roi pour travailler à rétablir la paix[2]. Quand, à la fin de 1424, Richemont, revenu à des sentiments plus patriotiques et désireux de profiter des bonnes dispositions du Roi de France à son égard, se rendit à Angers, où se tenait la Cour, il emmena une nombreuse escorte, dans laquelle on remarque un Raoul Gruel qui fait partie de la maison même du futur connétable, et un Guillaume Gruel placé sous les ordres de Guillaume de Montauban[3]. Avant de poursuivre cette étude, il nous faut identifier ces Guillaume Gruel, ainsi mentionnés à diverses reprises au XIVe et au XVe siècle.

Albert Le Grand, dans ses Vies des saints de la Bretagne[4], distingue deux Guillaume Gruel; l'aîné, auteur d'une chronique de Jean le Conquérant, ouvrage qui nous est inconnu, et le jeune « chroniqueur des ducs François Ier, Pierre II, Artus III et François II; » pour l'histoire de la bienheureuse Françoise d'Amboise, il a emprunté à ce dernier plusieurs mentions contenues « ès chapitres 57, 59 du livre I; 42, 45, 46, 47 et 48 du livre III; 10, 16, 17, 18 et 21 du livre IV[5]. » Ce renvoi se réfère, croyons-nous, à un manuscrit perdu de la Chronique de Richemont, qui ne nous est pas parvenue ainsi subdivisée; la période qu'elle embrasse correspond en effet au règne de quatre ducs, mais commence à Jean VI pour finir à la mort d'Arthur III. C'est peut-être par une déplorable erreur qu'Albert Le Grand attribue à Guillaume le jeune une chronique de François II, et ne parle pas de celle de Jean VI : il est clair que chacun des livres qu'il indique comprend l'histoire d'un duc; or, d'après sa citation, il n'aurait rien emprunté au livre II, contenant précisément l'histoire du duc Pierre, époux de Françoise d'Amboise, dont il a raconté la vie. En outre, on trouve dans la notice consacrée à cette princesse au moins deux mentions qui paraissent tirées de la partie de notre chronique correspondant au règne de Jean VI; la première, se rapportant aux années 1430 et 1431, a trait aux difficultés survenues alors entre le seigneur de Thouars et Georges de la Trémoille, et aux premières négociations entamées pour le mariage de Françoise d'Amboise; la seconde relate la maladie et la mort de Jeanne de France, duchesse de Bretagne, arrivée en 1433[1]. Il est fort présumable que les deux chapitres presque consécutifs du livre I, auxquels Albert Le Grand renvoie dans sa citation, contenaient les deux mentions que nous venons de signaler, et que par suite ce livre I renfermait, non l'histoire de François Ier, comme il le dit par erreur, mais celle de Jean VI, l'ouvrage entier s'arrêtant à la mort d'Arthur III.

Celui qu'Albert Le Grand appelle Guillaume Gruel le jeune est donc, à notre avis, le chroniqueur de Richemont. Quant à Guillaume l'aîné, il vivait certainement encore au commencement du xve siècle, puisqu'il a écrit l'histoire de Jean le Conquérant, mort seulement le 1er novembre 1399, et c'est sans doute le personnage désigné par Ogée comme possesseur, en 1400, d'une métairie à la Bodinaye, paroisse de Quédillac. Il est absolument impossible de déterminer quels liens de parenté pouvaient exister entre ce Guillaume Gruel l'aîné et son homonyme mentionné en 1357 et 1363[1]; mais il est bien certain qu'on ne peut les identifier l'un avec l'autre. En effet, la métairie de la Bodinaye appartenait encore, en avril 1427, à un Guillaume[2]; en 1441, elle est dans les mains de Raoul Gruel[3], selon toute vraisemblance, fils du précédent, et certainement frère du biographe de Richemont, comme nous le démontrerons. Or, il n'est pas très vraisemblable que le père de Raoul et de Guillaume Gruel, celui-ci étant encore vivant en 1474, fût, dès 1357, en âge de porter les armes.

En résumé, il faut distinguer trois personnages de cette famille ayant porté le même prénom au XIVe et au XVe siècle : Guillaume Ier, que nous connaissons par les montres du 13 janvier 1357 et du 5 juin 1363; Guillaume II, probablement le chroniqueur de Jean le Conquérant, celui qu'Albert Le Grand appelle l'aîné; enfin Guillaume III le jeune, qui seul nous intéresse particulièrement. Nous n'avons plus à nous occuper de Guillaume Ier.

On trouve une liste de nobles presque identique, dressée la même année, mais par d'autres commissaires, dans la publication suivante de M. Henri des Salles, Évesché de Saint-Malo, anciennes réformations... Paris, 1864, in-8o, p. 52.)

En 1418, comme en 1424, nous sommes encore en présence de Guillaume l'aîné[1]. A la première de ces deux dates, le chroniqueur de Richemont était certainement trop jeune pour figurer dans une compagnie d'hommes d'armes; de plus, il ne dit pas un mot dans sa biographie des préparatifs faits pour le voyage de Jean VI à la Cour de France, événement qui avait cependant une certaine importance. On pourra nous répondre que cela ne rentrait pas dans son sujet, puisqu'en 1418 Richemont était prisonnier en Angleterre, et on fera remarquer que pour le voyage de ce dernier à Angers, en 1424, le chroniqueur ne garde pas le même silence; il donne même une liste des seigneurs formant le cortège de Richemont et il n'oublie pas le sire de Montauban, dans la compagnie duquel se trouvait précisément le Guillaume Gruel mentionné dans l'acte du 6 octobre 1424. Cette coïncidence entre le texte édité par D. Morice et le récit même de notre chroniqueur mérite de fixer l'attention; cependant il ne faut pas y attacher trop d'importance; Gruel s'est en effet chargé de résoudre cette difficulté, et, dans l'appel qu'il fait en terminant son livre à la bienveillance de ses lecteurs[2], il avoue très sincèrement n'avoir appris que par ouï-dire les événements antérieurs à l'élévation de Richemont à la dignité de connétable; ce n'est donc pas lui qui se trouvait, lors du voyage d'Angers, dans la compagnie du sire de Montauban, mais bien Guillaume Gruel l'aîné. Il est probable que ce dernier était mort lorsque le chroniqueur du connétable commença à prendre des renseignements et à réunir des notes pour le travail qu'il composa plus tard; c'est la raison pour laquelle il n'en parle pas dans cette partie de son récit, où il mentionne plusieurs fois Raoul Gruel, évidemment l'un de ceux qui vécurent « en la compaignie » de Richemont avant qu'il fût connétable et qui trans-mirent à son biographe des renseignements, fort concis du reste, sur cette période, notamment sur le voyage d'Angers.

On trouve dans les registres des réformations de la noblesse de Bretagne d'autres mentions que l'on doit encore appliquer à ce Guillaume l'aîné. C'est lui qui est signalé en 1427 comme propriétaire de la métairie de la Bodinaye à Quédillac[1]; à la même époque, il résidait à Rennes, en la paroisse de Toussaints[2], et avait en outre un hôtel, franc de fouage, dans la paroisse de Saint-Étienne-lès-Rennes[3]. Les résultats de l'enquête des réformateurs montrent que la famille de notre chroniqueur était d'une noblesse incontestable. Guillaume l'aîné, qui abandonna sans doute la carrière des armes à l'époque où Richemont devint connétable, mourut probablement avant 1441, puisqu'en cette année sa métairie de la Bodinaye appartenait à Raoul Gruel[4].

Raoul, seigneur de la Motte-Boutier[5], du chef de sa femme, est le personnage le plus considérable de cette famille, et il paraît avoir joui de tous temps d'une certaine faveur auprès d'Arthur de Richemont. Comme jusqu'en 1425 il est le principal inspirateur du récit de Guillaume le jeune, nous croyons utile de résumer ici les renseignements que nous avons pu réunir sur sa vie, ce qui nous aidera en outre à déterminer ultérieurement les moyens d'information dont notre chroniqueur disposait.

5. La Motte, domaine situé à Pleugueneuc, Ille-et-Vilaine, arr. de Saint-Malo, cant. de Tinténiac.

En voyant la métairie de la Bodinaye passer des mains de Guillaume l'aîné dans celles de Raoul, nous avons été porté à croire que celui-ci était fils du premier. En 1474, Guillaume le jeune est exempté de payer les droits de rachat dus au duc par suite de la mort de messire Arthur Gruel, « son neveu[1]; » cet Arthur, qu'il ne faut pas confondre avec son fils aîné, qualifié seigneur de Saint-Jean et de la Motte et qui vivait encore en 1487, étant le fils aîné de Raoul Gruel et de Marie Boutier sa femme, il en résulte que Raoul est le frère de Guillaume, et sans aucun doute son frère aîné, puisqu'il est mentionné dans la chronique comme témoin oculaire dès 1420, tandis que Guillaume ne parle de lui-même qu'en 1434[2]. Le titre de chevalier qui lui fut conféré, le Morice, II, 1724.) En 1473, il est dispensé par le duc de payer les droits de rachat dus après la mort de sa mère Brigitte Boutier. (Bibl. nat., Collection de Bretagne, ms. fr. 22318, p. 1030.) En 1480, il est poursuivi par l'évêque de Saint-Brieuc pour excès commis dans le palais épiscopal (ibid., p. 628), et arrêté pour ce fait au mois de mai de l'année suivante (ibid., p. 629). Au commencement de 1481, il fait partie de cinquante lances placées sous les ordres de Bertrand du Parc. (Preuves de D. Morice, III, 389.) Il devient lui-même capitaine de vingt lances en 1486 (ms. fr. 22318, p. 549), et prête serment au duc l'année suivante, en qualité de capitaine de Ploërmel. (Preuves de D. Morice, III, 542.) En 1513, un Arthur est encore signalé comme seigneur de la Haye-Boutier, domaine de la paroisse de Rozlandrieux, dans l'évêché de Dol. (Bibl. municipale de Nantes, ms. fr. 54756, t. II, fol. 28 v°. Rozlandrieux, Ille-et-Vilaine, arr. de Saint-Malo, cant. de Dol.) Ce dernier personnage ne figure pas dans notre Tableau généalogique, parce que nous n'avons pu découvrir la place qui lui appartient. Nous avons laissé de côté pour la même raison Eustache Gruel, dont notre chroniqueur signale (p. 136) la bravoure au siège de Montereau, rôle relativement important qu'il joua dans diverses négociations entreprises par le connétable suffiraient pour indiquer qu'il était le chef de la famille.

Les Gruel étaient vassaux des seigneurs de Montauban, dont ils devinrent plus tard les alliés par le sang[1]; c'est dans leur maison que Raoul remplit d'abord les fonctions auxquelles étaient tenus les jeunes nobles vis-à-vis de leur suzerain. En 1420, Guillaume de Montauban[2] le donna, en qualité d'écuyer tranchant, au comte de Richemont, alors prisonnier du Roi d'Angleterre. Deux ans plus tard, il menait à bonne fin la difficile négociation, qui amena le mariage de son nouveau maître avec Mme de Guyenne, sœur du duc de Bourgogne, et veuve du Dauphin Louis; il assista en personne à ce mariage, célébré le 10 octobre 1423, à Dijon[3]. La même année, il recevait une double mission auprès des Cours de France et de Bourgogne[4]. En 1424, il faisait le voyage d'Angers dans la suite de Richemont[5]. Pendant les conférences qui précédèrent le traité d'Arras (1435), Richemont députa vers le duc d'Orléans, alors à Calais, Henri de Villeblanche et Raoul Gruel, chargés de s'enquérir des intentions du célèbre prisonnier[6].

Raoul se montre aussi brave guerrier qu'habile diplomate, puisqu'en 1439, il est armé chevalier sous les murs en 1437. Le Compte de Guillaume Ripault (Pièce just. XXVII) mentionne deux fois Eustache Gruel.

d'Avranches. Il accompagne, en 1442, le connétable dans le Midi et prépare son second mariage avec Jeanne d'Albret[1]. A partir de cette époque, il n'est plus mentionné dans la chronique rédigée par son frère; mais il n'en continue pas moins à bien servir son maître. En effet, devenu capitaine de Solidor, et chambellan, il reçoit, à la fin de 1457 et au commencement de l'année suivante, plusieurs présents et pensions de Richemont, qui a ceint la couronne ducale. Arthur III donne en outre à son fidèle serviteur une marque de faveur spéciale en consentant à être le parrain de son petit-fils Arthur Gruel[2].

A une date qu'il est impossible de déterminer exactement, Raoul épousa Marie Boutier, dame de la Motte, fille de Jean Boutier et de Raoulete de Senedavi; il en eut trois fils : Arthur, qui est le père du filleul de Richemont, Robert et Charles; les deux derniers ne laissèrent pas de postérité[3]. Nous ignorons la date de la mort de Marie Boutier; mais nous savons que, le lieu de sa sépulture ayant fait l'objet d'une contestation de la part de Guillaume de la Barre, seigneur de la Colombière, celui-ci dirigea contre l'abbé de Beaulieu et Arthur Gruel des poursuites dont nous ne connaissons pas le résultat[4]. Raoul mourut au commencement de 1463, avant le 16 mai[5].

Ajoutons, en terminant, que sa descendance s'éteignit au commencement du XVIe siècle, et que l'on y rattache à tort un Claude Gruel, seigneur de la Frette, que l'on trouve mentionné dans un acte de 1596, conservé aux Archives nationales[6].

§ II.

Guillaume Gruel biographe du connétable de Richemont.

(Né vers 1410, mort entre 1474 et 1482.)

Nous ne savons rien de précis sur la jeunesse de Guillaume, frère puîné de Raoul, et auteur de la Chronique d'Arthur de Richemont, quoiqu'il ne soit pas tout à fait aussi inconnu que M. Petitot veut bien le dire[1]. Il parle rarement de lui-même dans son œuvre, et c'est toujours d'une manière très brève. En ajoutant à ces renseignements par trop concis ceux que nous offrent les rares documents qui mentionnent notre chroniqueur, nous allons essayer de donner sur sa vie quelques nouveaux détails.

Né dans les dix premières années du xve siècle, il fut sans doute élevé, comme Raoul, dans la maison des seigneurs de Montauban, dont il parle souvent dans la première partie de son récit. Vers 1425, c'est-à-dire cinq années après son frère, il entra au service de Richemont, devenu connétable de France. C'est ce qui ressort clairement du passage qui termine la chronique, passage dans lequel il se présente comme témoin oculaire à partir de cette époque et déclare n'avoir plus besoin de chercher ses renseignements auprès de ceux qui étaient « en la compaignie » de Richemont « avant qu'il fust connestable[2]. » Dès lors, il suit son nouveau maître dans la plupart de ses expéditions militaires. A la fin de 1434, entre le 17 octobre et le 13 décembre, fête de sainte Lucie, Guillaume, préposé, avec deux autres hommes d'armes, à la garde de Robert de Saarbruck, damoiseau de Commercy, prisonnier sur parole, s'acquitta, paraît-il, assez mal de sa mission ; car le sire de Commercy, mécontent des procédés des gens d'armes du connétable, oublia, comme cela lui arrivait trop souvent, ses solennelles promesses, et trouva moyen d'échapper à ses trop confiants gardiens. Guillaume, ainsi pris en faute, ne manque pas de faire ressortir, à juste titre, d'ailleurs, la mauvaise foi de son prisonnier [1].

En juin 1435, on le trouve près de Richard, comte d'Étampes, l'un des frères de Richemont; la comtesse d'Étampes ayant mis au monde un fils, qui devint plus tard duc sous le nom de François II, Guillaume fut chargé de porter cette heureuse nouvelle au connétable, alors sur le point de se rendre au congrès d'Arras [2]. Il ne l'accompagna certainement pas dans ce voyage; car il n'eût pas manqué de donner de plus amples détails sur le rôle de Richemont dans les longues conférences qui précédèrent la conclusion du traité. Il resta, croyons-nous, avec les troupes françaises qui guerroyaient aux environs de Paris, puis se rendit à Parthenay, la principale des seigneuries du connétable et son séjour habituel lorsqu'il n'était pas en campagne. L'expression « s'en vint veoir madame de Guyenne, » que la chronique applique à Richemont, donne à entendre que Guillaume précéda son maître à Parthenay ; la mention des passages multipliés de la comtesse d'Étampes par cette ville ne peut laisser de doute sur le séjour qu'y fit alors Guillaume Gruel [3].

Quel rôle joua-t-il ensuite dans la campagne de l'Ile-de-France et de la Champagne, qui amena la reddition de Paris et des places voisines? La chronique et les documents ne nous apprennent rien sur ce point. Cependant il assista à la plupart des faits d'armes de cette époque ; les détails précis et circonstanciés qu'il donne dans cette partie de son récit sont là pour le prouver. En 1440, durant le siège de Meaux, Richemont, maître de la ville, mais non de l'île du Marché, confia la garde du pont qui reliait l'une à l'autre à des écuyers de sa maison, au nombre desquels se trouvait Guillaume[1]. La rapidité avec laquelle il passe sur les événements militaires qui signalèrent la campagne du Bourbonnais et de l'Auvergne, entreprise par le Roi et le connétable contre les seigneurs coalisés, indique que Gruel n'assista en personne qu'aux débuts de la Praguerie. La mention de la mort du seigneur de Rostrenen, si singulièrement encadrée dans le contexte, nous porte à croire qu'il résidait alors à Paris[2]. Il est bon de remarquer que Mme de Guyenne y était arrivée le 24 décembre 1438[3], et n'avait probablement pas quitté cette ville depuis lors. Gruel fut-il à cette époque attaché à sa personne? Le fait ne nous paraît pas invraisemblable ; toujours est-il que, dans son testament du 14 janvier 1442, elle n'oublia pas de lui faire un legs assez considérable[4]. En cette même année, il suivit dans le Midi le Roi et le connétable qui se rendaient sous les murs de Tartas pour empêcher cette place de tomber dans les mains des Anglais, et, sept mois à peine après la mort de Mme de Guyenne, il assista, ainsi que Raoul son frère, au mariage de Richemont avec Jeanne d'Albret, célébré à Nérac, le 29 août[5]. Gruel énumère les chevaliers et écuyers de la suite du connétable qui furent présents à cette solennité, et c'est dans ce passage précieux que le chroniqueur, jugeant son travail assez avancé pour avoir quelque prix, revendique l'honneur de l'avoir composé. Il quitta l'armée royale en même temps que Richemont, rappelé en Bretagne pour assister à l'entrée solennelle à Rennes du nouveau duc François. Gruel recevait alors dix écus de gage par mois à titre d'écuyer du connétable[1].

Quelques années plus tard, en 1450, nous le retrouvons prenant une part active à la campagne de Normandie; à Formigny, il combat à côté du connétable, puis est commis à la garde des otages après la reddition des villes de Caen et de Cherbourg[2]. La conquête de la province étant terminée, le Roi en confia le gouvernement au connétable de Richemont, qui y séjourna la plupart du temps, de 1451 à 1455[3]. Pendant la même période, Gruel resta vraisemblablement à Parthenay; remarquons, en effet, la nuance des termes employés dans la chronique : il dit ailleurs[4] que Richemont laissa à Paris Mme de Guyenne fort malade et « s'en alla à Parthenay; » or, on sait qu'alors Gruel se trouvait à Paris. Au contraire, dans le passage qui nous occupe[5], il met toujours, en parlant des voyages faits par Richemont de Normandie à Parthenay, « puis s'en vint à Parthenay; » cette expression, plusieurs fois répétée à quelques lignes de distance, indique clairement que Gruel ne suivit pas alors le connétable, ce que l'on eût d'ailleurs pu conclure de l'extrême brièveté des renseignements qu'il a donnés sur le séjour de Richemont en Normandie, la cessation des hostilités ne suffisant pas à expliquer une telle concision.

Il ne fait plus dès lors aucune mention de lui dans sa

chronique ; cependant nous pouvons encore suivre ses traces pendant quelque temps, grâce à des textes publiés par D. Morice dans les Preuves de son Histoire de Bretagne, et à des extraits de la collection manuscrite dite de Bretagne, conservée à la Bibliothèque nationale. De même que Raoul, il resta près de la personne de Richemont, devenu duc[1], et reçut alors plusieurs marques de bienveillance. Arthur III, voulant confier les villes de son duché à des hommes sûrs et dévoués, institua, le 5 octobre 1457, divers capitaines de places, parmi lesquels nous retrouvons bon nombre des compagnons d'armes de Guillaume, et il n'oublia pas ce dernier qui fut nommé capitaine de Dol[2]. Il conserva néanmoins le titre d'écuyer résidant, et recevait en cette qualité une pension du nouveau duc, au commencement de 1458. Le 10 juillet de cette même année, il fut chargé, avec le sire de Châteauneuf, de faire passer les montres qui devaient avoir lieu dans l'évêché de Dol, le 1er septembre suivant[3]. La situation des capitaines de Dol était assez difficile, l'évêque et le duc se disputant le droit de pourvoir à la garde de la place[4] ; nous savons, il est vrai, qu'en mai 1456, l'évêque Alain, cardinal de Sainte-Praxède, reconnaissait que la garde de la ville et du château appartenait au duc, qui avait en outre divers autres droits[5] ; mais,

Dans la première moitié de 1458, Jean Le Chevrier, « se disant scelleur de l'évêque de Dol, » ayant manifesté certaines prétentions que Gruel refusait d'admettre, il en résulta un différend que Macé de la Monneraie, lieutenant de Dinan, fut chargé d'examiner par lettres du 10 juillet de cette année[1]. Guillaume eut-il gain de cause? Nous ne le savons pas; mais il ne conserva pas longtemps ses fonctions de capitaine, car on voit que, dès le 10 janvier 1459, il est remplacé par Jean Chauvin, chevalier, qui prête alors le serment accoutumé[2].

Le 16 mai 1463, il fut exempté du paiement des droits de rachat dus par suite de la mort de Raoulete de Senedavi, belle-mère de Raoul Gruel. A quel titre Guillaume était-il débiteur en cette circonstance? Sans doute comme gardien des enfants de son frère décédé[3]. Il eut plus tard à remplir le même office auprès de ses arrière-neveux; car, ainsi que nous l'avons dit plus haut, en 1474, il fut encore exempté de droits semblables à payer après la mort de son neveu Arthur[1].

A partir de cette époque, le nom de Guillaume Gruel disparaît complètement des actes et de l'histoire. Aussi ne pouvons-nous déterminer qu'approximativement la date de sa mort. Disons d'abord que nous ne pouvons accepter celle de 1504, qui est donnée, sans preuves à l'appui, par M. Potier de Courcy, dans son Nobiliaire et Armorial de Bretagne[2]. A notre avis, Guillaume était mort depuis longtemps; en effet, le chanoine Le Baud, qui a écrit avant 1482 sa première Compilation des cronicques... des Bretons, met à profit le travail de Gruel avec une liberté qu'il n'aurait certainement pas eue si ce dernier avait été là pour revendiquer la propriété de son œuvre; nous aurons d'ailleurs à revenir en détail sur cette question[3]. Qu'un Guillaume Gruel soit mort en 1504, nous ne le contestons pas, ce nom paraît avoir été assez répandu : on trouve des Gruel dans le Perche, en Normandie et jusqu'en Dauphiné[4]; mais il ne s'agit pas, à cette date, du chroniqueur de Richemont, qui mourut, selon toute probabilité, peu après 1474 et avant 1482.

§ III.

Lieu d'origine, situation sociale et relations de Guillaume Gruel.

La famille de Guillaume était vraisemblablement originaire de Quédillac en Bretagne, localité distante de deux lieues environ de Montauban, où se trouvait le domaine de la Houssaye-Gruel, qui était, au xve siècle, nous ne savons par suite de quelles mutations, passé entre les mains de Jean Le Léonnais[1]. Cependant, si les Gruel avaient aliéné la terre à laquelle était attaché leur nom, ils en avaient conservé une autre à Quédillac même, celle de la Bodinaye, dont nous avons déjà eu l'occasion de parler, et ils possédaient deux hôtels, l'un à Rennes et l'autre à Saint-Étienne-lès-Rennes; de plus, Raoul acquit, par son mariage avec Marie Boutier, la seigneurie de la Motte, à Pleugueneuc[2], paroisse située à sept ou huit lieues au plus de Quédillac. Nous avons déjà indiqué les rapports féodaux qui devaient exister entre la famille de notre chroniqueur et les seigneurs de Montauban[3]. Raoul gagna sur le champ de bataille le titre de chevalier; Guillaume, qui, dans certains manuscrits de sa chronique, est rangé parmi les gens de « grant faczon[4], » ne semble pas avoir obtenu le même honneur. En effet, dans les énumérations d'écuyers nouvellement créés chevaliers sous les murs de Sillé-le-Guillaume, en 1434, à la prise de Montereau, en 1437, et près d'Avranches, vers Noël 1439[1], ils sont tous qualifiés par Gruel de « missire », titre qu'ils ne portent pas auparavant dans la chronique ou dans les textes[2]. Raoul Gruel, plusieurs fois mentionné avant 1440, est appelé pour la première fois « missire » à cette date, où il reçut l'ordre de la chevalerie, titre qu'il conserve dans la suite du récit. Or, on ne voit pas que Guillaume ait été armé chevalier, ni qu'il soit traité comme tel dans les actes ; c'était seulement un écuyer noble.

2. C'est sans doute le même domaine qu'Ogée (Dict. hist. et géogr. de la province de Bretagne, nouv. édit., II, 298) indique sous le nom de la Motte-Gruel, comme appartenant, en 1500, à Charles Gruel; la terre de la Motte-Boutier, qui n'est plus signalée à cette dernière date, était devenue la Motte-Gruel en passant dans la famille de notre chroniqueur.

Il a consigné, dans sa chronique, à diverses reprises, les noms de plusieurs de ses compatriotes : Eustache de la Houssaye, Jean Le Léonnais, Olivier Labbé, Jean Riou, qui tous possédaient des manoirs à Quédillac, les Le Vayer, propriétaires de la métairie de Champeaux à Saint-Étienne-lès-Rennes[3]. Le centre des relations de cette famille est dans la partie de la Bretagne orientale comprise entre Rennes, Pleugueneuc et Saint-Méen, cadre dont Quédillac et Montauban occupent le centre.

Les mariages de Raoul et d'Arthur son fils, le premier avec Marie de la Motte-Boutier, le second avec Brigitte de la Haye-Boutier, rattachaient la famille de notre chroniqueur aux seigneurs de Montauban, de Beaumanoir et de la Hunaudaye[4]. Guillaume avait donc dans le sein même de sa famille des relations avec des personnages dont le nom revient souvent dans son récit, et qui sont autant de témoins oculaires, auprès desquels il a pu prendre des renseignements exacts et de la plus haute valeur. En outre, tous ces chevaliers et écuyers peu connus qu'il énumère parfois sont ses compagnons d'armes, et, lorsque l'âge et les fatigues de plusieurs campagnes l'obligèrent à abandonner la carrière militaire, il dut conserver avec eux les rapports suivis que fait naître ordinairement une longue confraternité d'armes, et réunis ils aimaient sans doute à se rappeler les dangers courus en commun, les victoires remportées et les villes gagnées. Guillaume put alors rectifier, d'après leurs récits, des erreurs que des souvenirs confus ou des notes incomplètes avaient introduites dans sa narration, combler quelques lacunes de son travail, et écrire, sous la dictée de ces vieux guerriers, une histoire militaire presque complète de la première moitié du XVe siècle.

COMPOSITION ET SOURCES DE LA CHRONIQUE D'ARTHUR DE RICHEMONT.

LIEU ET DATE DE COMPOSITION DE LA CHRONIQUE.

Il est assez difficile de déterminer d'après le contenu de la chronique le lieu où elle a été rédigée; Gruel cite un très grand nombre de villes situées dans les régions les plus diverses, sur lesquelles il possède des renseignements généralement exacts; on ne peut par suite ranger son travail parmi les chroniques purement locales, ni en tirer des conclusions précises pour la question que nous venons de poser. Cependant il est présumable que Guillaume a passé la fin de sa vie dans un des domaines que sa famille possédait dans la Bretagne orientale[1]. Est-ce à Rennes, ou à Quédillac? Nous savons qu'en 1441 la métairie de la Bodinaye, située dans cette dernière localité, était entre les mains de Raoul Gruel[2]; aucun texte ne nous dit exactement à qui appartenaient, dans la deuxième moitié du XVe siècle, les possessions des Gruel à Rennes; néanmoins il est possible que Gruel habitât cette dernière ville lorsqu'il commença à rédiger sa chronique; en effet, donnant à l'année 1422 des détails assez étendus sur la reconstruction des fortifications de Rennes faites par les conseils de Richemont, il termine la description des travaux accomplis par ces mots « comme

1. Gruel ne cite pour ainsi dire pas une seule localité de l'ouest de la Bretagne, qu'il ne paraît pas connaître.

povés veoir, » qui semblent indiquer que le chroniqueur les avait alors sous les yeux[1]. Remarquons en outre qu'il ne manque jamais de signaler l'entrée solennelle des nouveaux ducs de Bretagne à Rennes[2].

Il conçut le projet de composer sa chronique bien avant de l'exécuter, et dut prendre au jour le jour de nombreuses notes qu'il n'eut plus ensuite qu'à réunir dans un ordre chronologique plus ou moins rigoureux. Il est évident qu'il mit ces notes en œuvre seulement après la mort d'Arthur III; plusieurs passages dispersés de la chronique ne laissent aucun doute à cet égard, notamment le début : « Cy commence la cronique de très hault et très exellant prince de bon memoire Artur..... qui regna trop petit en Bretaigne, car il ne fut duc que quinze moys[3]. »

Gruel a donc commencé son travail après le 26 décembre 1458; il était certainement terminé avant 1482, puisque Le Baud l'a intercalé dans la Compilation qu'il présenta vers cette époque à Jean de Derval, seigneur de Châteaugiron[4]. Mais il nous semble possible de restreindre notablement ce laps de temps. Il faut remarquer en effet que Gruel ne dit rien du rôle néfaste joué par Arthur de Montauban dans le différend, qui s'éleva entre le duc François et son frère Gilles et qui aboutit à l'assassinat de ce dernier[1]. Cette réserve, qui montre l'attachement de Gruel pour ses anciens maîtres, nous porte à croire que cet épisode fut relaté à une époque où Arthur de Montauban vivait encore, c'est-à-dire avant 1468. Évidemment Gruel connaît toutes ces choses « qui furent données à entendre » au Roi et au duc François. Il se tait, par prudence d'abord, pour ne pas s'aventurer sur un terrain fort épineux; il est facile de constater qu'il ne jouit pas de la même liberté que Le Baud et Albert Le Grand, qui nous montrent Arthur de Montauban animé alors d'une grande perversité; ensuite Gruel devait avoir quelque répugnance à rappeler les méfaits d'Arthur, dont la famille touchait de si près à la sienne, et qui, devenu à la fin de sa vie moine célestin, fut bientôt promu archevêque de Bordeaux. En outre il pouvait craindre de déplaire à Jean de Montauban, qui mourut en 1466[2].

Vers la fin de son récit, Gruel fait une allusion, d'ailleurs assez brève, aux difficultés qui surgirent entre le duc Arthur III et « l'evesque de Nantes, nommé Guillaume de Malestroit, » prélat que l'on trouve appelé « le plus mauveis ribauld traître que vous veistes oncques[3]. » Guillaume de Malestroit, évêque de Nantes en 1443, se démit de cette dignité au commencement de 1462, époque où il fut nommé archevêque de Thessalonique; il mourut au Mans le 17 août 1492[4]. Or il faut remarquer que Gruel prend la précaution de spécifier l'évêque de Nantes dont il s'agit, d'où l'on pourrait présumer que Guillaume n'occupait plus le siège de Nantes au moment où le chroniqueur écrivait. Une autre remarque qui est encore plus digne d'attention, c'est que Gruel n'eût sans doute pas osé, même sous l'égide d'autrui, appeler « ribauld traître » un prélat occupant le siège épiscopal de Nantes, c'est-à-dire un des personnages les plus considérables de Bretagne. La disgrâce que dénote l'éloignement de Guillaume de Malestroit en 1462 pouvait seule permettre une telle hardiesse d'expression.

En résumé la chronique du connétable de Richemont, commencée après la mort de ce dernier, écrite certainement entre 1459 et 1482, a été très probablement terminée après 1462 et avant 1466, date de la mort de Jean de Montauban.

§ II.

Sources de la chronique.

Gruel ne cite aucune source écrite; faut-il le croire sur parole lorsqu'il affirme avoir vu lui-même la plupart des faits dont il nous a transmis le récit, et avoir eu connaissance des autres par des rapports de témoins oculaires? Il n'est pas besoin de démontrer tout l'intérêt que présente la solution de cette question pour déterminer la valeur historique de la biographie du connétable. Sommes-nous en présence d'un travail original écrit entièrement par un contemporain et sous la dictée de contemporains, ou bien n'est-ce qu'un ouvrage de seconde main, basé sur des chroniques antérieures, une sorte de compilation dans laquelle l'écuyer de Richemont aura intercalé çà et là quelques souvenirs personnels? Les analogies frappantes qui existent entre sa chronique et certains passages de la partie correspondante des Croniques annaulx et de la première Compilation du chanoine Le Baud donnent à cette question une importance capitale; mais le peu de renseignements que l'on possède sur l'origine, les sources et la date de la rédaction des Croniques annaulx, le silence que garde P. Le Baud sur les annales bretonnes, dont il a tiré la fin de sa première Compilation, en rendent la solution embarrassante. Ces deux ouvrages, il ne faut pas l'oublier, ne sont que des compilations, des assemblages de chroniques ou d'extraits de chroniques plus ou moins bien reliés entre eux, tandis que Gruel revendique hautement l'honneur d'avoir écrit son ouvrage à l'aide de ses souvenirs et de ses informations personnelles : ce qui établit déjà une présomption en faveur de l'originalité de la biographie du connétable.

Examinons d'abord les liens qui unissent les Croniques annaulx et la chronique de Gruel.

Les Croniques annaulx, dont nous ne connaissons que des fragments (de 593 à 1463), publiés par D. Lobineau [1], étaient un recueil d'extraits, principalement en latin, de chroniques anciennes, de chartes et même de légendes, qui aurait été formé vers 1464 [2]. Mais de ce que cette compilation s'arrête en 1463, on n'en peut conclure avec certitude qu'elle ait été faite dès l'année suivante ; la date de 1464, attribuée à la formation de ce recueil, est donc purement hypothétique et ne peut nous arrêter dans notre argumentation. Pour constater l'étroite parenté qui existe entre les Croniques annaulx et l'œuvre de Gruel, il suffit d'y lire la relation de la campagne de Richemont dans le Maine et la région voisine; la version latine des Croniques annaulx reproduit littéralement le passage de Gruel [3]. Quel est le texte original? On serait porté à croire au premier abord que Gruel est le traducteur, puisque nous savons qu'il n'a connu qu'indirectement les événements de cette époque; cependant il n'en est certainement rien. Il est évident en effet que le compilateur des Croniques annaulx traduit un texte français qu'il a sous les yeux ; son vocabulaire de latiniste n'étant pas très riche, il est obligé de reproduire des mots français dont il ne trouve pas l'équivalent en latin ; c'est ce qui lui arrive la plupart du temps pour les noms propres et même, ce qui est important à remarquer, pour des noms communs, par exemple, dans ce cas « cepit d'assault Sillé... » Assurément, si le compilateur avait eu le choix dans l'expression de cette idée, il n'eût pas intercalé le mot « d'assault » au milieu de sa phrase latine ; s'il le fait, c'est parce qu'il veut rendre entièrement la pensée exprimée par son devancier, c'est parce qu'il agit en traducteur consciencieux, qui sacrifie l'élégance et la correction à l'exactitude. Cette partie des Croniques annaulx est donc la version latine d'un texte français, qui sans doute n'est autre que la chronique de Gruel, composée entre 1462 et 1466. Dans quelle mesure le compilateur a-t-il utilisé la biographie de Richemont, il est impossible de le dire d'une manière précise, puisque nous n'avons que des extraits des Croniques annaulx ; mais il nous suffit d'avoir montré que très probablement son ouvrage, loin de compter parmi les sources de la chronique de Gruel, n'en est, au moins dans le passage ci-dessus indiqué, qu'une traduction d'ailleurs très fidèle.

3. Gruel, p. 9, 10; Croniques annaulx dans l'Hist. de Bretagne de D. Lobineau, II, 366, 367.

Arrivons maintenant à l'examen des rapports que nous avons signalés entre la première Compilation de Le Baud et notre chronique. Les renseignements sont un peu moins rares ; nous savons que Pierre Le Baud composa sa Compilation des cronicques et ystoires des Bretons avant 1482, puisqu'il en fit hommage à Jean de Derval, seigneur de Châteaugiron, mort le 31 mai de cette année[1]. D. Lobineau reproduit dans son Histoire de Bretagne[2] une miniature tirée de l'ancien manuscrit de cette compilation, qui représente Le Baud à genoux offrant son livre à Jean de Châteaugiron, assis et entouré de quelques dames et seigneurs. Puisque nous sommes amené à parler de cet ancien manuscrit, signalé par D. Morice[1] comme se trouvant de son temps à la Bibliothèque du Roi, disons que, contrairement à l'opinion exprimée par Gaillard[2], l'indication donnée par D. Morice devait être exacte : si le manuscrit de la première Compilation de Le Baud sortit pour un temps de la Bibliothèque du Roi, il y est rentré et se trouve aujourd'hui classé sous le n° 8266 du fonds français (supplément) ; après le texte de l'ouvrage[3], on trouve la miniature reproduite dans l'Histoire de Bretagne de D. Lobineau.

Nous n'énumérerons pas ici tous les points de contact que nous avons remarqués entre la Compilation de Le Baud et la chronique de Gruel; il est facile de s'en rendre compte à l'aide des extraits que nous donnons dans nos pièces justificatives[4]. Dès 1847, M. J. Quicherat n'avait pas hésité à considérer la biographie du connétable de Richemont comme la source principale de la partie correspondante de l'ouvrage du chanoine Le Baud[5]. A vrai dire, les deux auteurs sont contemporains, ils ont écrit à une dizaine d'années d'intervalle; mais, à priori, entre un compilateur comme Le Baud et un biographe spécial comme Gruel, il n'est pas permis de refuser au second le titre d'auteur original. Les passages communs aux deux auteurs offrent ce caractère particulier qu'ils concernent tout spécialement la Bretagne. Ainsi Le Baud ne dit pas un mot de la prise de Giac par le connétable, épisode raconté avec assez de détails par Gruel[6]; même silence de Le Baud pour les événements étrangers à la

Bretagne, qui remplissent les chapitres XLII-XLVIII[1]; l'intervention de la Pucelle le fait sortir de sa réserve ordinaire pour tout ce qui rentre dans l'histoire générale; il omet presque entièrement le chapitre LI[2], puis les chapitres LIII, LV, LVI, LVII[3], et d'autres concernant la campagne de l'Ile-de-France qui aboutit à la prise de Paris, événement que le compilateur breton ne fait guère que rappeler en passant. Ces indications, que nous pourrions multiplier encore, tendent à montrer dans quelle mesure et d'après quelle méthode Le Baud a utilisé la chronique de Gruel, qui n'est d'ailleurs pas la seule source mise en œuvre par le compilateur dans cette partie de son récit. Quelquefois il date d'une manière plus précise l'événement raconté par son devancier : il nous apprend ainsi l'année du mariage de Jeanne de France avec le duc de Bretagne[4], celle de la révolte de Saint-Brieuc[5]. Si l'on admet que Gruel est le plagiaire, comment expliquer qu'il ait omis ces dates et plusieurs autres? Il est bien plus vraisemblable de croire que Le Baud, compilant plusieurs chroniques antérieures, a complété les renseignements contenus dans la biographie du connétable; mais, en général, lorsque celui-ci est directement mis en scène dans les événements concernant spécialement la Bretagne, Le Baud ne fait que paraphraser la chronique de Gruel. Nous demanderons à ceux qui pourraient conserver quelque doute sur ce fait de citer la chronique à laquelle Le Baud a emprunté la fausse date de 1421 (pour 1422) qu'il assigne à la mort de Henri V, roi d'Angleterre, et à celle de Charles VI; évidemment ce ne peut être qu'à l'œuvre de Gruel, qui a précisément commis cette erreur[6]. Dans la seconde Histoire de Bretagne que Le Baud entreprit plus tard sur l'ordre de la Reine Anne, duchesse de Bretagne, il eut soin de rectifier cette date[1]. Donc, même pour la partie de son récit antérieure à 1425, Gruel n'a pas utilisé de sources écrites, et sa chronique a été traduite dans certains passages des Croniques annaulx, mise en œuvre et parfois copiée presque littéralement dans la première Compilation de Le Baud.

Rien ne s'oppose à ce que nous ajoutions foi à l'affirmation de Guillaume Gruel, lorsqu'il divise lui-même sa chronique en deux parties au point de vue des sources : la première entièrement inspirée par la tradition orale et s'étendant jusqu'à la nomination de Richemont connétable de France, en 1425; la seconde écrite, sinon entièrement, au moins en majeure partie, par un témoin oculaire.

Dans la première partie, le récit de la bataille d'Azincourt est sans doute l'un de ceux que Gruel apprit de la bouche même de Richemont[2]. Le chroniqueur nous le donne bien à entendre lorsqu'il raconte que, vers le milieu de 1436, son maître, passant par Azincourt, au retour d'un voyage dans les états du duc de Bourgogne, « devisa à ceulx qui là estoient comme la bataille avoit esté[3]. » Il serait téméraire d'affirmer que la scène de la « decongnoissance » provient de la même source : Richemont, fait prisonnier à la bataille d'Azincourt, retrouva en Angleterre sa mère qu'il n'avait pas revue depuis sa première jeunesse; cette longue séparation empêcha son fils de la reconnaître; l'épisode est rapporté en termes fort touchants par le chroniqueur. Il ne resta auprès de Richemont, pendant son séjour en Angleterre, qu'un seul serviteur nommé Catuit[4]. Le fait même de la mention de ce personnage permettrait peut-être de le considérer comme l'inspirateur de ce récit. Gruel n'ayant pu se procurer d'autres détails sur la captivité de Richemont, sa chronique présente une lacune de près de cinq années dont il n'est nullement question. Selon toute apparence, il a connu par son frère Raoul la plupart des événements qui suivent jusqu'à 1425; en effet, celui-ci, faisant partie depuis 1420 de la maison de Richemont[1], se trouvait par suite en rapport constant avec lui; à partir de cette année jusqu'au voyage de Richemont à Angers[2], il n'est pas mentionné moins de cinq fois. Ces fréquentes citations, le rôle important que la chronique lui attribue dans les événements de cette période nous le désignent clairement comme l'inspirateur des chapitres XVII à XXV.

Dans la seconde partie de la chronique (1425-1458), Gruel nous apparaît presque toujours comme un témoin oculaire, et s'il mentionne quelque événement sur lequel il ne possède que des renseignements de seconde main, il le fait avec une brièveté caractéristique. Nous ne serions pas surpris qu'il eût eu à sa disposition, outre ses propres notes et les communications de ses compagnons d'armes, certaines pièces d'archives, notamment des rôles d'hommes d'armes et des lettres émanant du connétable. Si l'on rapproche, en effet, les renseignements contenus dans une lettre adressée par Richemont aux habitants de Lyon, le 28 juillet 1425, de l'énumération des seigneurs qui se joignirent à lui pendant son différend avec le Roi, on peut supposer que Gruel a eu connaissance soit d'une copie de cette lettre, soit encore, ce qui serait aussi vraisemblable, d'un rôle contenant les noms des gens d'armes qui vinrent alors se ranger sous la bannière de son maître[3].

2. Ibid., p. 34.
3. Cf. Gruel, p. 37, et la lettre du 28 juillet 1425, dans la Revue

Nous devons signaler également certaines analogies que nous avons remarquées entre quelques passages de l'œuvre de Gruel et les chroniques de Berry et de Mathieu d'Escouchy. La campagne entreprise par le connétable en mars 1434 est racontée parfois en termes presque identiques dans la chronique de Gruel, et, d'une manière plus abrégée, dans celle de Berry[1]; mais celui-ci ne donne aucun détail qu'on ne rencontre dans l'œuvre du premier, dont le récit est en outre plus complet. Si l'on admettait que l'un des deux chroniqueurs a eu connaissance du travail de l'autre, évidemment ce passage de la biographie du connétable devrait, et par son étendue et par les matières qui y sont traitées, être considéré comme la source originale. Cependant il ne faut peut-être pas trop s'étonner de la ressemblance dont nous venons de donner un exemple, puisque les deux chroniqueurs étaient bien souvent témoins oculaires des faits qu'ils ont rapportés, et que de plus le premier, en sa qualité de roi d'armes de France, et le second, comme écuyer du connétable, se trouvaient dans une situation également favorable pour suivre de près les opérations militaires.

Le chapitre XXXII de la chronique de Mathieu d'Escouchy nous paraît en majeure partie extrait, non du Recouvrement de Normandie par Berry, que M. de Beaucourt indique avec raison comme la source générale utilisée dans cette partie[2], mais de la chronique de Gruel, notamment le récit des voyages du connétable vers le duc de Bretagne, de d'histoire nobiliaire, directeur M. Sandret, 1882, p. 457, et en tirage à part dans les Lettres du connétable de Richemont, publiées par M. de Beaucourt, 1883, gr. in-8°, p. 5.

la fortification de Saint-Aubin[1], des courses faites aux environs de Fougères, de la prise de Saint-James de Beuvron et de Mortain, enfin de l'attaque dirigée sur Tombelaine[2].

On remarque une grande concordance entre les différentes relations du « recouvrement de Normandie »; mais, si nous reconnaissons l'auteur de l'ouvrage qui porte ce nom comme un témoin oculaire, nous ne pouvons accorder le même titre à Mathieu d'Escouchy, qui a dû, à notre avis, utiliser, non seulement le travail de Berry, mais aussi la biographie de Richemont, spécialement pour le récit de la bataille de Formigny et de la prise de Vire. Parmi les mentions caractéristiques communes aux chroniques de Gruel et de Mathieu d'Escouchy, nous citerons : 1° l'arrivée pendant la nuit à Saint-Lô d'un messager envoyé au connétable par le comte de Clermont[3]; 2° la présence d'un moulin à vent dans l'endroit occupé par Richemont sur le champ de bataille[4]; 3° le soin pris par le connétable et le comte de Clermont de faire enterrer les morts[5]; 4° le séjour des deux comtes à Saint-Lô pour « eulx refreschir[6] »; 5° bien que Mathieu d'Escouchy fixe à 4,000 francs et Gruel à 4,000 écus la rançon de Henry de Norbery, capitaine anglais de Vire, il y a des analogies d'expression entre les deux auteurs[7].

Puisque Gruel nous a signalé à diverses reprises sa présence dans la campagne de la Basse-Normandie, nous n'avons aucune raison pour hésiter à le reconnaître, après cette étude comparative, comme auteur d'une œuvre entièrement originale qui paraît avoir été discrètement utilisée dans la Chronique de Mathieu d'Escouchy.

Dans le commencement du XVIIe siècle, Théodore Godefroy, comprenant l'importance de l'œuvre de Gruel, en donna une première édition[1], d'après un manuscrit qui lui fut communiqué par le savant Peiresc[2]. firent dresser le duc de Coislin[1] et Baluze[2], ne la mentionnent pas. La Bibliothèque historique n'en parle pas davantage[3]; cependant c'est assurément cet ouvrage qui est la source de l'erreur commise par MM. Œttinger et P. Levot; en effet, l'article placé immédiatement avant celui qui est consacré à la vie du connétable de Richemont mentionne une Histoire du vaillant chevalier Artus...[4] sous le titre même attribué dans la Bibliographie biographique universelle et dans la Biographie bretonne à la première édition de la chronique de Gruel. Or, bien que nous n'ayons pu retrouver l'ouvrage auquel il est fait allusion, nous pouvons affirmer qu'il ne s'agit pas de la biographie de Richemont; les termes mêmes de ce titre l'indiquent suffisamment. Il n'est pas possible qu'un éditeur ait jamais songé à publier la chronique de Gruel sans mettre en tête de son volume le nom de Richemont et son titre de connétable de France. Le « vaillant chevalier Artus » auquel est consacré l'ouvrage de 1521-1522, c'est le célèbre héros de la Table-Ronde au VIe siècle, dont la vie a donné lieu à tant de fables. On s'explique difficilement que MM. Œttinger et P. Levot aient fait cette singulière confusion; car, parlant du même ouvrage dans un autre article, auquel ces deux bibliographes se réfèrent évidemment en attribuant à cette édition la date de 1521[5], le rédacteur de la Bibliothèque historique prend la peine de nous avertir qu'il est question d'un roman[6]. Nous ne croyons pas, comme lui, que ce soit une histoire fabuleuse d'Arthur Ier, mort assassiné en 1203. Il existe en effet à la Bibliothèque nationale[1] un récit des exploits du héros fameux qui, le premier, illustra au VIe siècle le nom d' « Artus ». Or dans ce volume, après le titre[2] proprement dit, deux gravures et une table des 89 chapitres dont il se compose, le titre de départ, placé au recto du premier folio numéroté, porte : « Cy commence le premier chapitre de l'histoire du vaillant et preux chevalier Artus, filz du duc de Bretaigne[3]. » Le desinit est conçu dans les mêmes termes[4], qui sont, il faut le remarquer, presque identiques à ceux par lesquels on désigne la prétendue édition de 1521 ou 1522. Pour nous, le volume que nous avons examiné à la Bibliothèque nationale doit être une édition de l'ouvrage signalé dans les deux articles de la Bibliothèque historique que nous avons cités, ouvrage qui n'a rien de commun avec la chronique de Gruel.

On pourrait nous opposer les termes employés par Th. Godefroy dans le titre de son édition Histoire ... de nouveau mise en lumière[5]. Ces expressions indiquent seulement que Th. Godefroy vient de donner au public un ouvrage qui n'a pas été composé par lui, mais par un auteur antérieur ; l'éditeur a la bonne foi d'avertir, d'une manière trop peu explicite peut-être, qu'il ne fait que reproduire le travail d'un autre : tel est le sens véritable de cet intitulé.

L'expression « mise en lumière, » qu'on lit dans le titre d'un manuscrit de notre chronique[1], pouvait fort bien se trouver aussi en tête du manuscrit de Tournai, de sorte que Th. Godefroy n'aurait fait que la reproduire en la modifiant légèrement.

Puisque nous avons été amené à parler de ce titre, faisons remarquer que les deux dates extrêmes attribuées à la chronique par le premier éditeur (1413-1457) sont également inexactes; elle comprend la vie entière du connétable et va du 24 août 1393, date de sa naissance, jusqu'au 26 décembre 1458, époque de sa mort. Si, comme le fait remarquer Lenglet[2], le récit offre beaucoup de concision jusqu'en 1413, cette brièveté n'a pas lieu de surprendre et s'explique par la jeunesse même de Richemont; il ne faut donc pas faire croire que son biographe n'a écrit qu'une œuvre incomplète.

Nous allons maintenant apprécier la valeur de cette première édition, avec d'autant plus de soin qu'elle a été l'unique source de toutes celles qui ont été publiées dans la suite.

Le manuscrit que Th. Godefroy utilisa appartenait certainement à la même famille que le manuscrit de Nantes qui a servi de base à l'établissement de notre texte[3]; on ne peut juger par l'édition s'il était aussi correct dans la forme que ce dernier; pour le fond du récit, il présentait à peu près les mêmes inexactitudes. Th. Godefroy, n'ayant eu qu'un seul manuscrit à sa disposition, ne put en corriger les mauvaises leçons; aussi a-t-il contribué à répandre plusieurs erreurs dont Gruel ne saurait être rendu responsable. C'est ainsi que dans tous les ouvrages généraux, même dans la Nouvelle Biographie générale de Didot[4] et le Diction- naire des dictionnaires, publié actuellement sous la direction de M. P. Guérin[1], on lit que Richemont fut duc de Bretagne le 22 septembre 1456 (pour 1457), et mourut le 26 décembre 1457 (pour 1458).

Th. Godefroy a certainement apporté au texte de son manuscrit des modifications qui ne sont pas toujours heureuses. Nous ne lui ferons pas un grand reproche d'avoir imprimé « Artus troisiesme », alors que son manuscrit portait certainement « deuziesme[2] », Richemont étant, comme on sait, le troisième duc de Bretagne de ce nom ; mais, pourquoi écrire « Artus » pour « Artur[3] », bonne leçon que donnait son manuscrit, comme celui de Nantes[4] ? Il est regrettable de voir le prénom de Richemont ainsi défiguré par pure fantaisie. L'éditeur ne se fait pas faute de substituer un mot à un autre lorsque le sens de la phrase lui paraît exiger un changement qui, en réalité, n'est aucunement nécessaire[5]. Il remplace les termes trop archaïques, à son gré, par des périphrases inutiles qui ne servent qu'à modifier la physionomie du texte sans l'éclaircir[6]. Croyant le compléter, il y ajoutera une mention[7], changera les mots et arrivera parfois à faire de graves contresens[8]. Ainsi, d'après lui, les Anglais qui occupaient Vire en Normandie auraient été obligés, lors de la reddition de cette place aux Français, en 1450, de donner 4,000 écus pour la rançon de leur capitaine Henry de Norbery, fait prisonnier antérieurement à la bataille de Formigny, quand, en réalité, ce furent les Anglais qui reçurent cette somme en exécution d'une des clauses du traité de reddition[1]. Nous pourrions citer encore d'autres méprises de ce genre[2].

En outre, que d'omissions à signaler, la plupart fort courtes, il est vrai, mais qui, dans des cas spéciaux, peuvent avoir des conséquences regrettables! L'édition de Th. Godefroy ne fait pas mention de la mort de Charles VI, mention qui ne nous est fournie que par un seul manuscrit[3]. En supprimant, quelques lignes plus loin, une longue liste d'écuyers qui assistèrent au premier mariage de Richemont, il nous laisse ignorer qu'un Gruel (Raoul) fut présent à cette solennité, ce qui est utile à connaître pour déterminer les sources de cette partie du récit[4]. N'est-il pas intéressant de savoir que, selon notre chroniqueur, Arthur de Richemont était autorisé par Charles VII à prendre l'avis des ducs de Bourgogne et de Savoie avant d'accepter l'épée de connétable[5]? Pourquoi omettre ailleurs un membre de phrase où est spécifié le nombre des hommes d'armes qui, sous les ordres du connétable, secoururent la place de Sillé-le-Guillaume[6]? Pourquoi cette suppression arbitraire de tant de noms de personnes[7] et de lieux[8]? Nous n'entreprendrons pas de donner ici une liste, assez fastidieuse d'ailleurs, des autres omissions et incorrections qu'on relève dans cette édition, attendu que nous signalons les plus importantes dans les notes qui accompagnent notre texte[9].

L'édition de Th. Godefroy a été réimprimée trente-neuf ans plus tard, par son fils Denys, dans son Histoire de Charles VII[1], sous ce titre inexact : Extrait d'une histoire particulière d'Artus III, duc de Bretagne et connestable de France, contenant ses mémorables faits depuis l'an 1393 jusques à 1457. Nous ne savons pour quel motif Denys Godefroy donne le titre modeste d'Extraits au texte qu'il réédite. On y trouve, en effet, l'œuvre entière de Gruel, mais bien défigurée. Théodore avait déjà rajeuni nombre d'expressions archaïques ; son fils achève cette inutile besogne; de plus, la fréquente répétition des titres de « monseigneur », « messire » gêne le nouvel éditeur qui les supprime. Que n'a-t-il mis tant de soin à combler les lacunes du texte de 1622, et à rectifier l'orthographe de certains noms propres par une nouvelle collation avec son manuscrit, enfin à redresser ces erreurs chronologiques qui rendent parfois la chronique de Gruel dangereuse à consulter ! Il est permis de se demander quel but il se proposait en reproduisant ainsi l'édition antérieure sans amélioration ou éclaircissements.

Le texte mutilé de D. Godefroy a été réimprimé à la fin du siècle dernier dans une collection bien oubliée aujourd'hui, nous voulons parler de la Collection universelle des mémoires particuliers relatifs à l'histoire de France[2]. L'éditeur, louant sans réserve la suppression « d'une multitude de répétitions, de dénominations purement honorifiques, dont la monotonie dans l'original est dégoûtante, » a préféré bien à tort le texte de D. Godefroy à celui donné par son père. Il est regrettable de trouver un jugement aussi erroné à côté d'appréciations fort justes sur le caractère de Richemont et sur la valeur historique de sa biographie[3]. A la suite de ce texte si défectueux, l'éditeur a placé quelques extraits des chroniqueurs contemporains, extraits beaucoup trop courts, il est vrai, mais qui révèlent néanmoins un commencement de critique historique. Pour contrôler une chronique, il ne suffit pas de la comparer avec celles de Berry, de Jean Chartier et des autres historiographes généraux du règne de Charles VII : c'est aux textes originaux, aux chartes qu'il faut surtout recourir, et aussi aux petites chroniques locales qui ont une supériorité incontestable pour le récit des événements qui se sont passés dans la région qu'elles concernent.

L'édition de D. Godefroy n'a pas eu depuis lors les honneurs immérités de l'impression ; mais le texte publié par Th. Godefroy a été reproduit plusieurs fois, et toujours avec des altérations de plus en plus grandes.

Les savants qui, dans la première moitié de ce siècle, publièrent nos grandes collections de chroniques n'eurent garde d'omettre l'œuvre de Guillaume Gruel. MM. Petitot[1], Michaud et Poujoulat[2], Buchon[3] placèrent la vie du connétable de Richemont à côté des chroniques de Monstrelet, de Mathieu d'Escouchy, du Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris et des autres annalistes de cette période. Depuis Th. Godefroy jusqu'à M. Buchon, les éditeurs ont mis tous leurs soins à rajeunir le texte de la biographie de Richemont ; et, s'ils rencontrent quelques termes, difficiles à transformer ou à expliquer, ils simplifient la question en les supprimant. Ajoutons en terminant que M. J. Quicherat a publié dans son Procès de Jeanne d'Arc[4] le très court fragment de la

MANUSCRITS.

1° Manuscrit de Nantes ou ms. N.

M. P. Levot, dans l'article de sa Biographie bretonne, consacré à Guillaume Gruel, signale une excellente copie de sa chronique à la bibliothèque de Nantes[1]. Ce manuscrit, placé dans le catalogue de M. E. Péhant[2] sous le n° 48383, est aujourd'hui le n° 966 des manuscrits de cette bibliothèque.

C'est un beau manuscrit du XVe siècle, sur vélin, in-4° de 66 fol., d'une écriture très régulière; l'initiale du premier mot de chaque chapitre est en or, avec dessin d'ornement sur fond bleu et rose pâle à l'intérieur et à l'extérieur des panses; les titres des chapitres sont écrits à l'encre rouge et les alinéas sont également indiqués par un signe à l'encre rouge; la reliure est en maroquin rouge avec hermines sur les plats et des tranches dorées. Au fol. 1 r° on voit, en tête de la chronique, les armes de Bretagne avec la devise « em buhez a ma vi. » Immédiatement au-dessus, une main moderne a ajouté, nous ne savons pour quel motif, la date de 1460; rien ne permet d'affirmer que la chronique fût alors composée; ce ne peut donc être la date de transcription du manuscrit.

Les trois quarts du fol. 9 r° sont restés en blanc : le copiste se proposait sans doute d'y représenter la prise de l'épée de connétable par Richemont, indiquée dans la page précédente. Des places ont aussi été laissées pour des miniatures qui n'ont pas reçu d'exécution aux fol. 53 r°, 58 v°, 63 v°. Dans la marge du fol. 42 v° et au bas du fol. 59 v°, on voit un dessin qui paraît figurer une main tenant une plume. Au fol. 51 r°, on a ajouté en marge la mention suivante : « Guillaume Gruel autheur de ces cronicques. » On ne connaît ni le nom du copiste, ni la provenance de ce précieux manuscrit. Il est assez naturel de trouver les armes de Bretagne en tête de la chronique de Richemont; on n'en peut tirer aucune conclusion sur la destination de cette copie, la seule qui présente les formes orthographiques du XVe siècle; considérée à ce point de vue, elle doit reproduire assez exactement le texte original. On y trouve les leçons « ay », « ai » pour « oy », « oi » : Crepi en Valays[1], Blays[2], Dun le Ray[3], Pontaise[4].

2° Manuscrit de Tournai ou ms. T.

Dans ce manuscrit, aujourd'hui perdu, le texte commençait ainsi : « Chronique du très haut et très excellent prince Artur 2. de ce nom, extraict de la ligne de Bretagne, en son vivant comte de Richemont, seigneur de Partenay, connestable de France, et en la fin de ses jours duc de Bretaine 2. et ne fut duc que 15. mois[5]. » Il appartenait au commencement du XVIIe siècle à D. de Villers, chanoine et chancelier de l'église cathédrale de Tournai. Le 29 novembre 1618, celui-ci offrit[6] au savant Peiresc, conseiller au Parlement de Provence, de le lui communiquer, en l'engageant à faire imprimer l'œuvre de Gruel; sa proposition fut acceptée, comme on le voit, par une lettre de Peiresc, datée de Paris, 7 mai 1619, dans laquelle, après avoir entretenu le chanoine de Villers de plusieurs objets de curiosité que celui-ci lui avait prêtés, il ajoute : « J'ai reçu la boitte de vos antiques et votre Arthur[1]. » Peiresc, à son tour, transmit ce manuscrit à Théodore Godefroy, qui l'eut à sa disposition environ un an et en exécuta une copie de sa propre main. Le 20 juillet 1620, Peiresc, rentré en possession du manuscrit, le renvoyait au chanoine de Villers[2]. Après la mort de ce dernier, le texte de la chronique de Gruel passa, avec ses autres livres, dans la bibliothèque de la cathédrale de Tournai, où il se trouvait en 1641, lorsque Sanderus publia son catalogue des manuscrits de Belgique[3]. Que devint-il ensuite? Nous l'ignorons : il est encore signalé dans la Bibliothèque historique de la France, en 1771[4]; mais l'auteur parlant d'après le témoignage de Sanderus, rien ne prouve que le manuscrit du chanoine de Villers fût encore à cette époque dans la bibliothèque de la cathédrale. Nous avons acquis la certitude qu'il ne s'y trouve plus actuellement; il n'existe pas davantage dans la bibliothèque de la ville, ni dans celles de Mons, et de Bourgogne à Bruxelles, qui possèdent des volumes provenant des anciennes bibliothèques de Tournai.

3° Manuscrit de Théodore Godefroy.

Entre le 7 mai 1619 et le 20 juillet 1620, Théodore

Godefroy transcrivit le texte du manuscrit de Tournai[1]. Nous n'avons pu retrouver cette copie; cependant au fol. 518 r° du volume 240 du fonds Godefroy, à la bibliothèque de l'Institut, on lit dans une table des matières : « 1 Histoire du connestable de Richemont ; » mais la chronique de Gruel manque dans le volume même. Bien que l'on possède les deux éditions de Théodore et de Denys Godefroy, la perte du manuscrit exécuté par le premier est néanmoins très regrettable : on eût pu sans doute y découvrir, à côté des modifications faites par l'un et l'autre, une reproduction plus fidèle du texte du manuscrit de Tournai, dont nous déplorons également la disparition.

4° Manuscrit français 18697 de la Bibliothèque nationale ou ms. S.

Ce manuscrit, qui provient de la collection du chancelier Séguier, est un in-fol. en papier, de 209 fol., plus 1 fol. bis (le fol. 93), avec reliure en parchemin ; les fol. 1-23 manquent. Au commencement se trouve la table des chapitres de la chronique de Gruel et des autres matières contenues dans le volume; cette table, d'une écriture plus récente que celle du texte, a été ajoutée après la mutilation du manuscrit ; car elle ne mentionne pas les matières de la partie absente. Au bas de ce même fol., qui n'est pas compris dans le numérotage, est collée une petite note imprimée qui renferme l'histoire de ce manuscrit : « Ex Bibliotheca Mss. Coisliniana, olim Segueriana, quam Illust. Henricus Du Cambout, Dux de Coislin, Par Franciæ, Episcopus Metensis, etc., Monasterio S. Germani à Pratis legavit. An. M. DCC. XXXII. »

La plus ancienne mention de ce texte se trouve dans le Catalogue des manuscrits de la bibliothèque de défunt monseigneur le chancelier Séguier[2], publié sans nom

1. Cf. ci-dessus, p. xliv.
2. Édité à Paris, chez François Le Cointe, 1686, in-12.

d'auteur. A cette époque, il passa sans doute, avec les autres livres du chancelier, à son petit-fils, Henri-Charles du Cambout de Coislin, évêque de Metz, de 1697 à 1732. Celui-ci, qui était aussi abbé de Saint-Germain-des-Prés, déposa tous ses manuscrits, avant 1720, dans la bibliothèque de cette abbaye et, par acte du 1er mai 1731, les légua aux religieux[1]. La chronique d'Arthur de Bretagne forma le volume 300 de la « Bibliotheca Coisliniana San.-Germanensis[2]. » L'ancien n° 1600, que l'on trouve sur le premier fol. non numéroté, indique sans doute la cote que ce manuscrit porta lorsque, après 1735, les Bénédictins distribuèrent les volumes de Séguier dans leurs collections.

En 1794, elles furent transportées à la Bibliothèque nationale, où la chronique de Gruel forma le manuscrit 1056 du fonds Saint-Germain français, puis, nous l'avons dit, le n° 18697 du fonds français.

La biographie de Richemont, qui va du fol. 23 r° au fol. 120 v°, a été transcrite entièrement par la même main dans la fin du XVIe siècle; l'écriture aux liaisons enchevêtrées est assez difficile à lire. Le texte primitif a été corrigé et annoté au moins par quatre personnes.

Le principal correcteur est celui qui a transcrit, aux fol. 121 et 122 r°, une liste d'évêques de Nantes jusqu'à l'épiscopat d'Amaury d'Acigné, en 1462[3]. C'est le seul qui ait retouché le texte même de la chronique; nous aurons à revenir[4] sur le travail de ce personnage, dont nous regrettons de ne pouvoir donner le nom : nous avons retrouvé son écriture dans le ms. latin 6003 de la Bibliothèque nationale, et dans le n° 3912 de la bibliothèque de l'Arsenal[1]. Il a transcrit, dans le ms. latin 6003, à la suite du Chronicon Briocense[2], une épitaphe d'un roi des Bretons, une liste des ducs de Bretagne jusqu'à François II, composée en 1470, une liste de rois anglais, de ducs normands et une « Chronologia Angliæ; » ces différents documents sont suivis de la signature de d'Argentré. Cette circonstance pourrait faire croire que le ms. 18697 a peut-être été copié, ou au moins revisé pour Bertrand d'Argentré[3], qui, d'après son Histoire de Bretagne, paraît avoir connu, non seulement la première Compilation de Le Baud, traduite par lui en latin[4], mais aussi la chronique de Gruel; nous n'en voulons pour preuve que l'énumération des hommes d'armes faits chevaliers à la prise de Montereau[5], passage qui ne se trouve ni dans la première Compilation de Le Baud, ni dans l'Histoire de Bretagne que celui-ci composa ensuite[6]. De plus, il faut remarquer que d'Argentré a mis en tête de son Histoire de Bretagne une liste d'évêques de Nantes[7], ce qui révèle chez lui et le correcteur du 18697, qui en a ajouté une à la suite de la chronique de Gruel, une même préoccupation.

D'un second personnage émanent la note marginale du fol. 98 r° : « Guillaume Gruel, autheur de ce livre, » et le titre même de la chronique[8]. Ces deux additions ont été

La deuxième note du fol. 90 r°, relative à la mort du bâtard Alexandre de Bourbon[5], est l'œuvre de celui qui a mentionné, au fol. 122 v°, les difficultés survenues à cause du droit de présentation à l'évêché de Nantes, droit que la duchesse Anne revendiqua expressément dans le traité de son mariage avec Louis XII.

5° Manuscrit français 5037 de la Bibliothèque nationale ou ms. C.

Nous retrouvons le texte de notre chronique à la Bibliothèque nationale dans le ms. fr. 5037; c'est un petit in-fol. en papier, de 306 fol.; la biographie du connétable comprend les fol. 43 r° à 119 v°, qui sont d'une écriture du commencement du XVIe siècle. Il fit d'abord partie de la collection de Jacques-Auguste de Thou[6], magistrat et historien, qui mourut à Paris, le 7 mai 1617, laissant une bibliothèque de la plus haute valeur. Notre chronique figure dans le catalogue de ses manuscrits qui fut dressé au mois de novembre de cette année[7], par Pierre et Jacques

Dupuy, et imprimé en 1679, après avoir subi diverses modifications, par les soins de Joseph Quesnel[1]. Jacques Dupuy, le dernier survivant des deux frères, mourut le 17 novembre 1656, léguant ses manuscrits à M. de Thou[2]. Celui-ci, quelques années plus tard, résolut de se débarrasser de ces précieuses collections; il vendit, en 1679, ou en 1680, les imprimés et les manuscrits modernes au président à mortier Charron de Ménars, et les manuscrits anciens à Colbert[3]. Le volume renfermant la chronique de Gruel suivit le sort de ces derniers et entra dans la bibliothèque de l'illustre ministre, où il porta le n° 1810[4]; de là il passa, cinquante-deux ans plus tard, avec les autres manuscrits de Colbert, dans la Bibliothèque royale, qui reçut ces richesses considérables le 11 et le 12 septembre 1732[5]; il fut alors classé sous le n° 9675[33], et fait aujourd'hui partie du fonds français. Ce manuscrit ne présente, comme le suivant, aucune division en chapitres.

La Bibliothèque nationale possède un troisième exemplaire de la chronique de Gruel dans le ms. fr. 5507 : c'est un petit in-fol. de 61 fol., contenant la vie de Richemont, plus 7 fol. non numérotés, dont 4 au commencement et 3 à la fin. La majeure partie de ce manuscrit en papier, relié en parchemin, est d'une écriture du commencement du XVIIe siècle; il provient de la collection de Jean Bigot, dans laquelle il portait le n° 209[1]. Une note marginale du fol. 1 r° nous apprend que Bigot l'avait reçu, en août 1642, de M. Ménart, d'Angers[2]; il est déjà signalé, en 1739, par Montfaucon[3], comme faisant partie de la Bibliothèque royale sous le n° 9902[2].

Sur la garde du plat recto se trouve une étiquette avec les armes du propriétaire du manuscrit et la mention « Johannes Bigot »; à droite, une autre main a écrit : « Artus 3, duc de Bretaigne. » La disposition matérielle de ce manuscrit montre clairement que le cahier renfermant les fol. 1 à 22 v° a été réuni après coup au second cahier qui contient à lui seul tout le reste de la chronique et a été écrit en entier par la même main. Le premier cahier est l'œuvre de deux copistes différents : l'un a transcrit les fol. 1 à 20 v°, l'autre les fol. 21 et 22, correspondant à deux fol. non numérotés et laissés en blanc, qui sont placés immédiatement avant le texte de la biographie de Richemont.

On lit au haut du fol. 34 r°, à gauche, cet avertissement écrit par un autre que le copiste : « Ce cahier doit être mis au millieu de l'autre; » l'intercalation a été faite avant la reliure, car le texte se suit bien. Au fol. 52 r°, l'auteur de la précédente note a mis : « Hic la distinction du grand cahier séparé pour le plier plus commodément. » Il n'y a pas de division en chapitres dans ce manuscrit; mais de nombreuses places blanches, paraissant attendre des titres, indiquent qu'elle existait dans l'original, dont il dérive, ou que le copiste se proposait d'en ajouter après coup.

7° Extrait de Du Chesne à la Bibliothèque nationale ou ms. D.

Le volume 70 de la collection Du Chesne, à la Bibliothèque nationale, contient, aux fol. 114 et 115, de courts extraits de la chronique de Gruel. L'abréviateur transcrit d'abord à peu près textuellement les passages qu'il juge utile de noter; puis il place succinctement sous une date les faits les plus importants. Immédiatement après la mention de la mort de Richemont, il a copié les noms des souscripteurs du traité d'alliance conclu, à Rennes, le 27 juin 1449, entre le duc de Bretagne et les ambassadeurs du Roi de France, après la prise de Fougères par François de Surienne[1], et une brève mention relative à la bataille de Poitiers en 1356[2].

§ III.

Classification des manuscrits.

Les manuscrits de la chronique de Gruel, que nous possédons, ont été rédigés à des dates assez différentes; avant de les utiliser, il faut nécessairement se demander quelles

1. Cf. le traité du 27 juin 1449 dans D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1453.

2. Dans la suite de notre étude et dans les notes de notre édition, nous indiquerons par une seule lettre chacun de nos mss. Le ms. de Nantes sera indiqué par la lettre N; le ms. 18697, provenant de Séguier, par S (dans les extraits de ce ms. que nous donnons dans nos notes, nous avons imprimé en italiques les corrections faites au texte primitif); le ms. 5037 (de Colbert), par C; le ms. 5507 (de Bigot), par B; l'extrait de Du Chesne, par D; le ms. 8266 de la Compilation de Le Baud, par L; parfois aussi nous faisons mention du ms. de Tournai, T.

sont leur origine et leur valeur. Il est évident, en effet, que, si les trois manuscrits de la Bibliothèque nationale ne sont que des copies prises les unes sur les autres, elles seront une maigre ressource; si, au contraire, on y trouve des transcriptions diverses d'originaux plus anciens, aujourd'hui inconnus, on aura l'espoir de relever dans l'une certaines variantes qui éclairciront le texte ou combleront les lacunes des autres. Nous allons donc les examiner à ce point de vue.

Les manuscrits de notre chronique peuvent se ranger en deux familles. La première comprend le ms. N et celui de Tournai, représenté par l'édition de Th. Godefroy; ce sont incontestablement les meilleurs textes et, spécialement pour la graphie, le premier a une valeur considérable. La seconde famille se compose des mss. S, C, B et D, auxquels on ne peut avoir recours que pour rectifier certaines erreurs historiques, sans tenir compte des variantes graphiques qu'ils peuvent fournir.

1re Famille : Manuscrits N et T.

Si l'on compare le texte du ms. de Nantes avec celui qui a été donné par Th. Godefroy, on remarque une grande analogie entre les deux. On y retrouve exactement les mêmes dates, ainsi qu'une collation minutieuse nous en a donné la preuve, et, quand il y a divergence entre les manuscrits, la copie de Nantes et celle de Th. Godefroy sont d'accord. Nous avons signalé, il est vrai, un certain nombre de lacunes dans cette édition; mais elles ne permettent pas de supposer que le ms. T fût moins complet que l'autre : l'absence de plusieurs mentions s'explique par leur peu d'importance, et une omission volontaire de Th. Godefroy; pour toutes les autres, et ce ne sont pas les moins nombreuses, on peut croire que l'éditeur les a laissées de côté soit par négligence, soit parce qu'il n'est pas parvenu à les lire ou à les comprendre.

Voici d'ailleurs quelques traits caractéristiques communs

au ms. N et à l'édition de Th. Godefroy, représentant le ms. T ; ils offrent sur plusieurs points les mêmes variantes de texte, les mêmes lacunes et additions, enfin des dates qui diffèrent de celles qui sont fournies par les autres manuscrits.

Citons quelques-unes dès principales variantes de texte : N : « L'an mil CCCCXXXV, ou moys de jugn; » Th. Godefroy : « Au mois de juin ; » cette mention est ainsi modifiée dans S, C, B : « ... la vigille de Sainct Jehan[1]. » « L'an et moys que desus, environ la Saint Jehan; » cette variante, que l'on retrouve dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy, devient dans S : « En celuy an mil quatre cens trancte cinq, le quinziesme jour du moys de juing, » et dans C et B : « En celuy an, mil IIII^{c} XXXV, environ le XVe jour de juign[2]. » Le texte N dit, à propos du mariage du connétable avec Jeanne d'Albret : « Et fut le jour de la decollacion Saint Jehan Baptiste, » leçon adoptée par Th. Godefroy, tandis que les autres manuscrits fournissent une légère variante[3]. Enfin, alors que, dans le passage où Gruel fixe l'époque des négociations entamées pour le troisième mariage de son maître avec Catherine de Luxembourg, le ms. N et l'édition Th. Godefroy donnent : « Puis ou commencement de l'esté, mil CCCC XL cinq, fut parlé..., » on lit dans les mss. S, C, B : « Puys en la fin de l'esté fut parlé...[4]. »

Les deux textes, dont nous voulons montrer l'étroite parenté, sont les plus complets de ceux que nous possédons, et nous n'avons par suite à y signaler qu'un petit nombre de lacunes. Ni le ms. N, ni l'édition de Th. Godefroy ne mentionnent la mort du Roi de France[5]. On y chercherait vainement la date précise de la levée du siège de Gerberoy, donnée par les mss. S, C, B[1]. Par contre, ils fournissent seuls deux indications, dont l'une détermine la situation topographique de Sainte-Neomaye[2], et l'autre fixe l'année où, selon Gruel, le connétable de Richemont vint à Tours vers le Roi qui attendait une ambassade envoyée par le Roi de Hongrie[3]. Mais c'est surtout la parfaite concordance chronologique de ces deux textes qui montre jusqu'à l'évidence leur commune origine. Dans plusieurs cas, ils diffèrent sur ce point des mss. S, C, B. Ainsi, les textes de la première famille placent la mort de Jeanne, duchesse de Bretagne, en 1432, alors que les autres manuscrits attribuent cet événement soit à l'année 1431, soit à l'année 1433[4]. Nous les retrouvons en complet désaccord avec ces derniers sur l'époque de l'envahissement et du pillage de la Champagne par les troupes non soldées du connétable[5]. Ils placent en 1444 l'expédition du Dauphin Louis en Allemagne, alors que les manuscrits S, C, B donnent l'année 1445[6]; en 1446 (anc. st.), la reddition du Mans par les Anglais, que les autres manuscrits attribuent à 1447 (anc. st.)[7]; en 1447, au lieu de 1448, l'assemblée des seigneurs à Chinon, mentionnée dans notre chapitre LXXXIV[8]; en 1448 (anc. st.), au lieu de 1449 (anc. st.), la prise de Fougères par François de Surienne, dit l'Aragonais[9]; enfin, la date de la mort de Richemont est tout à fait caractéristique; on lit, non sans une vive surprise, que cet événement arriva le 26 décembre 1457, alors qu'en réalité ce fut le 26 décembre 1458, leçon qui nous est fournie par les manuscrits de la seconde famille[1].

Nous avons suffisamment montré l'analogie frappante qui existe entre le ms. N et l'édition de Th. Godefroy ; cette analogie est si grande que nous avons cru, pendant quelque temps, avoir retrouvé à Nantes l'ancien manuscrit de Tournai, aujourd'hui disparu des bibliothèques de cette ville[2]. Cette hypothèse ne manquait pas d'une certaine vraisemblance. En effet, d'après les érudits belges, lors de l'invasion française en 1794, tous les manuscrits et les livres de la bibliothèque de la cathédrale de Tournai furent saisis ; un grand nombre se trouvèrent dérobés ou détruits. N'était-il pas permis de supposer que le manuscrit de la chronique de Gruel, enlevé par quelque républicain breton et historien, rentra ainsi dans le pays, pour lequel il offre un si grand intérêt ? Malheureusement, c'était là une illusion que nous avons dû perdre ; car, si les mss. T et N doivent être rangés dans la même famille, ils présentent dans cértains passages des variantes caractéristiques, qui ne permettent pas de les identifier l'un avec l'autre. Voici quelques-unes des variantes que nous avons relevées dans le texte du ms. T, fourni par Théodore Godefroy, et dans le ms. N : T : « Et fit-on de grandes courses sur le pays obeissant à monseigneur de Bourgongne; » N : « ... sur le païs non obeissant à monseigneur[3]. » T : « Et y mit Josselin de la Belloseraye...; » N : « Et y mourut...[4]. » T : « L'an que dessus environ le premier jour de may...; » N : « L'an que desus monseigneur. » La mention du premier jour de mai se retrouve dans les mss. C, B, et n'est pas une addition de Th. Godefroy[5].

T : « C'est à savoir Olivier de Bron, et bien trente lances; » N : « ... et bien xx lances[1]. » T : « ... Guillaume de Launay, Henry de Launay, Olivier de Néel ; » N : « Guillaume de Launay, Olivier du Val[2]. » Enfin, on remarque que l'on trouve dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy la mention du mariage en secondes noces du duc Jean le Vaillant avec la fille du prince de Galles, mention qui fait défaut dans le ms. N[3].

Il nous faut donc arriver à cette conclusion que, si le manuscrit de la bibliothèque du chapitre de Tournai n'a pas été détruit lors de l'invasion française, il fut soustrait au pillage par des mains prévoyantes et se trouve aujourd'hui dans quelque bibliothèque privée, où nous n'avons pu faire porter nos recherches.

2e Famille : Manuscrits S, C, B et D.

On a déjà pu constater[4] que les ms. S, C, B se distinguent par la chronologie et par plusieurs traits communs des mss. T et N. Nous pourrions ajouter beaucoup d'autres preuves à celles que nous avons déjà présentées ; une particularité les caractérise tout spécialement et permet, sinon de les rattacher à un original commun, au moins de les ranger avec certitude dans la même famille : la mention de la mort du capitaine écossais Bouays Glavy, au lieu d'être placée, comme dans le ms. N, sous l'année 1439, se trouve reportée à l'année 1440, et, dans ces trois textes, le passage concernant Bouzon de Fages est reproduit sous chacune de ces deux dates[5]. On y relève en outre plusieurs lacunes identiques[6] et des variantes communes[7].

Il nous reste maintenant à signaler les caractères particuliers de chacun des mss. de la seconde famille.

1° Manuscrit S.

Si l'on compare ce texte avec celui des mss. C et B, on remarque d'abord une grande différence entre l'orthographe du premier et celle des deux autres. Tandis que ceux-ci présentent parfois, mais avec beaucoup moins d'exactitude que le ms. N, des formes et des expressions que l'on a coutume de rencontrer dans les écrits du xve siècle, telles que « o » signifiant « avec, » « paour, » « Saint Paoul, » « missire, » « pluseurs, » etc., le ms. S offre un texte remanié à ce point de vue, et, pour ne citer qu'un seul exemple, nous signalerons la troisième personne du singulier de l'indicatif imparfait, « falloict, pouvoict, » qui est toujours écrite avec un c. En outre, le ms. S, dont le seul avantage est d'être beaucoup plus complet que les textes C et B, s'en distingue encore par de nombreuses variantes dans le fond même du récit[1]; mais le trait caractéristique de ce texte consiste dans la mention de la mort de Charles VI, qu'il nous a seul transmise. Comme nous l'avons dit, il a été revisé avec beaucoup de soin et plusieurs lacunes ont été comblées. Il y a des corrections qui rappellent manifestement un texte de la première famille; nous ne donnerons ici que deux exemples. Nous citerons le passage dans lequel le correcteur a modifié le texte primitif en remplaçant la leçon « grand frere » par celle-ci : « grand Feré, » qui ne se trouve que dans le ms. N[2]. Le second exemple n'est pas moins caractéristique : il s'agit d'un messager envoyé par le Roi à Richemont; dans les mss. C et B et le texte primitif de S, ce messager est appelé « Mathelin de la Tour; » le correcteur a préféré

2. Gruel, p. 136.

la leçon que nous retrouvons dans le ms. N, « Ouachelin[1]. »

Celui qui fut chargé de collationner le ms. S accomplit son œuvre consciencieusement; les additions qu'il a dû faire au texte primitif sont nombreuses[2], et quelques-unes étaient indispensables à l'intelligence du récit[3]. Dans bien des cas, il prend la peine d'écrire les mots plus lisiblement[4], et avec des modifications graphiques : c'est ainsi qu'il remplace « Fouyers » par « Foix[5] », « Braisé » par « Brézé », « Tellay » par « Teillay », « Bron » par « Broon[6] » et « Chignon » par « Chinon[7] ». Il n'est pas toujours bon lecteur et commet de regrettables méprises, par exemple lorsqu'il met « Han » pour « Heu[8] ».

Il est inutile de nous arrêter plus longtemps à l'étude de ces corrections, dont nous n'avons pas eu à faire usage, puisque dans la plupart des cas elles contiennent un remaniement du texte primitif, dont les formes graphiques sont déjà bien éloignées de celles du XVe siècle.

2° Manuscrits C et B.

Ces deux manuscrits présentent une si grande analogie qu'il serait superflu de consacrer à chacun d'eux une étude spéciale. Le ms. C a été, selon toute vraisemblance, transcrit au commencement du XVIe siècle sur l'original qui servit plus tard pour l'exécution de la seconde partie du ms. B. De plus, sans être trop affirmatif sur une question aussi délicate, nous ne serions pas éloigné de penser que le premier des deux cahiers dont se compose ce dernier manuscrit[1] n'est qu'une simple copie de la partie correspondante du ms. C; pour cette partie, en effet, on relève exactement les mêmes lacunes[2] et les mêmes variantes[3] dans l'un et dans l'autre. L'on s'explique assez facilement la différence entre certaines leçons : l'examen du texte C montre, par exemple, que les copistes du premier cahier de B, qui ne semblent pas avoir fait leur travail avec beaucoup de soin, ont fort bien pu lire dans le ms. C « Cosiliers » au lieu de « Arsiliers[4] », et « Sainct Simiers » au lieu de « Saint Miers[5] »; cette dernière faute résulte d'une mauvaise lecture du texte C; le transcripteur aura pris pour une s le premier jambage de l'm. Les négligences de ces copistes sont nombreuses, et ils ont omis quelques noms propres dont la lecture ne présentait pas une bien grande difficulté[6]. Le copiste du second cahier a mis plus d'attention dans l'exécution de sa tâche; il a même évité des erreurs de transcription commises par le copiste de C, que nous voyons confondre, par une distraction singulière, Charles VII avec « Henri le Rai[7] ». Cette partie dérive certainement d'un manuscrit de la seconde famille[8], mais non du texte C lui-même, puisque, outre diverses variantes, nous avons constaté dans celui-ci une lacune qui n'existe pas dans le ms. B[9].

9. Ibid., p. 184, note 4.

Aux omissions que nous avons déjà signalées dans ces manuscrits [1], il faut ajouter celles qui sont indiquées dans les autres notes de notre texte [2]. Cependant on y relève des mentions que l'on chercherait vainement dans le ms. S. Telles sont la mention du mariage du duc Jean le Vaillant avec la fille du prince de Galles, qu'on ne trouve que dans ces deux textes et dans l'édition de Godefroy [3], celle du séjour de Richemont à Nérac en 1442 avant de se rendre à Castel-Jaloux [4], deux autres, dont l'une rappelle la présence des seigneurs de Lohéac et de Derval au siège de Beuvron [5], et la seconde un voyage de Richemont, de Parthenay à Tours [6].

3° Extrait de Du Chesne ou ms. D.

On doit rattacher à la seconde famille de nos manuscrits l'extrait de la chronique de Gruel contenu dans le volume 70 de la collection Du Chesne; son étendue peu considérable et la concision avec laquelle l'abréviateur mentionne les faits qui ont attiré son attention le rendent peu important. Cependant il est utile de constater qu'il place aussi la mort de Richemont à sa date exacte, c'est-à-dire en 1458, ce qui ne permet pas d'en chercher l'original dans le ms. N. De plus il ne semble pas dérivé du texte S, qui donne la fausse date de 1431 pour la mort de la duchesse Jeanne [7], ni du ms. B, qui ne mentionne pas le nom du gouverneur de Richemont, nom que l'on trouve dans cet extrait [8]. Par contre, le texte, aussi bien que la chronologie, est généralement en parfaite harmonie avec celui du ms. C. Or l'on voit dans ce dernier, comme à la suite de l'extrait D, et la liste des souscripteurs du traité d'alliance conclu à Rennes le 27 juin 1449 entre le duc de Bretagne et les ambassadeurs du Roi de France[1], et la mention concernant la bataille de Poitiers[2]; d'où nous n'hésitons pas à conclure que l'abréviateur a fait son travail à l'aide du ms. C.

§ IV.

Établissement du texte de la chronique.

Aucun des manuscrits que nous venons d'étudier n'est l'original de la chronique d'Arthur de Richemont. M. Fr. Sacher prétend, il est vrai, que Th. Godefroy a donné son édition « d'après le manuscrit de G. Gruel[3]; » mais nous sommes convaincu que M. Sacher n'a jamais vu le manuscrit dont il parle, et que son assertion est purement arbitraire. On ne peut en effet déduire rien de semblable de la note que l'on trouve à la fin du texte de Th. Godefroy[4], et qui indique comme source le manuscrit du chanoine de Tournai; or, nous ne pensons pas qu'il existe une autre indication plus précise sur ce point. Que le manuscrit du chanoine de Villers fût très ancien, c'est possible : il remontait peut-être, comme le ms. N, au xve siècle; mais ni l'un ni l'autre ne représente exactement le texte que Le Baud eut entre les mains, et dont quelques bonnes leçons ont été recueillies seulement par les mss. S, C, B, directement, ou par l'intermédiaire d'autres copies. Le soin matériel avec lequel le ms. N est exécuté dénote une transcription et non un original, les lacunes et autres erreurs que l'on y rencontre prouvent que cette copie n'a pas été faite sous les yeux du chroniqueur lui-même. Dans le texte édité par Th. Godefroy, il y a, nous l'avons vu, un assez grand nombre d'erreurs[1]; les unes doivent être imputées au chroniqueur lui-même; mais les autres, et ce ne sont pas les moins graves, sont l'œuvre de copistes inattentifs. Nous devons donc faire la part de l'auteur et celle des copistes, et rendre au travail de Gruel sa physionomie première et sa valeur propre, en un mot établir, autant que possible, le véritable texte de sa chronique.

L'établissement d'un texte historique comprend une critique de la forme et une critique du fond : la première consiste dans une étude paléographique ayant pour but de rechercher le manuscrit qui donne les meilleures leçons; la seconde montre le degré d'exactitude des renseignements fournis par le chroniqueur, les erreurs qu'il a commises et leur origine. Des quatre manuscrits que nous possédons actuellement, celui de Nantes, de beaucoup le plus ancien, est incontestablement le meilleur au point de vue graphique; aussi n'avons-nous pas hésité à le prendre pour base de notre édition. Ce manuscrit, le plus correct dans la forme, est aussi le plus exact et le plus complet pour le fond du récit. Néanmoins il offre de rares lacunes qu'il faut combler et quelques leçons fautives que nous devons rectifier à l'aide des autres manuscrits.

La comparaison des variantes que présentent les différents textes, avec les données fournies par les documents et les principaux chroniqueurs contemporains, déterminera la leçon qui devra être préférée et sera la base de l'établissement de notre texte. On pourrait contester cette méthode si l'on admettait que les mss. S, C et B, qui fournissent plusieurs bonnes leçons, ont été revisés systématiquement par les copistes. Mais, alors, comment expliquer que toutes les erreurs de la chronique, notamment les fautes de chronologie, n'aient pas été corrigées? parmi celles qui subsistent, il en est qui ne pouvaient passer inaperçues dans un examen un peu sérieux. En outre, comme nous le verrons, plusieurs des variantes de ces manuscrits sont inexactes et ne peuvent par suite être attribuées à un correcteur. On doit rejeter l'hypothèse d'une revision et reconnaître que la diversité des leçons provient de l'attention et de l'habileté plus ou moins grandes des copistes. Nous allons donc essayer de justifier plusieurs corrections et additions que nous avons apportées au texte du ms. N.

On lit au premier folio du ms. N que le duc Jean le Vaillant épousa en secondes noces Jeanne de Navarre. C'est là une erreur résultant d'une omission que l'on s'explique assez facilement par la répétition de la préposition « o »; après avoir transcrit le premier « o », le copiste aura passé immédiatement au membre de phrase suivant le second « o ». On sait, en effet, que, peu après la mort de Marie d'Angleterre, le duc Jean le Vaillant épousa, en 1366, Jeanne, fille de Thomas Holland, comte de Kent, morte en 1384[1]; Jeanne de Navarre, avec laquelle il se maria, le 11 septembre 1386, fut donc, non sa seconde, mais sa troisième femme. Le ms. S[2] reproduit, il est vrai, la leçon du texte N; mais C et B, et l'édition de Th. Godefroy offrent la mention omise ailleurs[3].

Le ms. S signale seul la mort de Charles VI; comme ce fait est rapporté dans la Compilation de Le Baud en termes presque identiques, il devait donc se trouver aussi dans l'ancien ms. de la chronique de Gruel qu'il utilisa avant 1482[4].

S'il fallait en croire le ms. N, Jeanne de France, duchesse de Bretagne, serait morte à la fin de septembre 1432; mais c'est évidemment une fausse leçon; en effet, le ms. S donne, en toutes lettres, « l'an mil quatre cens trante et ung, » et les mss. C, B « l'an mil quatre cens trente trois[1]. » Or, si l'on considère que cette dernière date, la seule exacte[2], est reproduite non seulement dans la Compilation de Le Baud[3], mais aussi dans l'extrait de Du Chesne[4], on n'hésitera pas à reconnaître que Gruel est exempt d'une erreur que lui ont fait commettre quelques copistes et les éditeurs.

En 1435, Gruel fut chargé d'annoncer au connétable de Richemont la naissance de François d'Étampes; les mss. S, C et B[5] nous apprennent qu'il reçut cette mission « la vigille de Sainct Jehan ». Cette date précise, fournie également par le texte de Le Baud, peut être adoptée, puisque François, fils de Richard de Bretagne, comte d'Étampes, seigneur de Clisson, et de Marguerite d'Orléans, naquit effectivement le 23 juin[6]. Gruel fut dépêché le jour même vers Richemont, qui se trouvait sans doute encore à Parthenay[7]. Malheureusement l'abréviateur de Du Chesne qui mentionne cet événement n'indique que l'année. Mais la date du 15 juin fixée par les mêmes manuscrits pour le départ des ambassadeurs envoyés au congrès d'Arras doit être écartée[8]. Le contexte montre en effet que Richemont ne se mit en route qu'après avoir appris la naissance de François d'Étampes; le plein pouvoir donné par Charles VII à ses envoyés est daté d'Amboise, 6 juillet 1435[1] : Richemont et les autres députés ne quittèrent cette ville qu'après avoir reçu ce mandat officiel, pour gagner, par Reims, Laon, Saint-Quentin, Cambrai, la ville d'Arras, où ils arrivèrent le 31 juillet[2]. Nous admettrions volontiers que la leçon « 15 juin » résulte d'une mauvaise lecture, et est mise pour « 25 juin ».

Les mss. S, C, B nous permettent d'ajouter encore à notre texte la date précise, à laquelle fut levé le siège de Gerberoy, « et fut le jour de Sainct Nicolas de may ». La saint Nicolas d'été, jour de la translation des reliques de ce saint, tombe le 9 mai; la levée du siège eut en effet lieu vers cette époque[3].

Le siège de Chauvency, la défaite et la mort de Geoffroy Morillon, d'Alain Giron et de Pierre Daugi ne sont pas des événements de l'année 1440, comme l'indiquent les textes de la première famille. Monstrelet[4] commet aussi une erreur énorme en les rapportant à l'année 1436; ils eurent lieu après le 5 avril, date de Pâques 1439, et avant le 23 juillet de la même année[5]. Or c'est précisément l'année indiquée par les mss. S, C et B qui nous permettent ainsi de décharger notre chroniqueur d'une faute nouvelle.

La singulière entrevue qui eut lieu entre le connétable et le prieur des chartreux de Paris[6] n'est pas racontée avec la même étendue dans tous les manuscrits : N et S, les plus complets sur ce point, contiennent après le dialogue quelques lignes qui le résument sous la forme indirecte. Cette seconde partie manque dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy ; on n'en peut conclure qu'elle fît aussi défaut dans le ms. T ; il est fort possible que Th. Godefroy ait supprimé ces quelques lignes qui sont la simple répétition de ce qui précède. Comme tous les manuscrits donnent le passage supprimé dans les éditions, nous sommes autorisé à le maintenir dans notre texte[1].

On sait que l'expédition du Dauphin Louis en Allemagne eut lieu dans la seconde moitié de 1444, après les trêves conclues à Tours avec les Anglais, le 28 mai 1444. Tandis que le ms. N nous donne la bonne leçon, les trois autres placent à tort cet événement en 1445[2]. Nous retrouvons encore ces derniers mss. en défaut dans le passage suivant, où ils nous disent que le connétable de Richemont épousa Catherine de Luxembourg en 1446[3]. C'est évidemment une erreur de copiste, car dans les mss. S, C et B les différentes parties du texte sont en complet désaccord : d'après eux les négociations de ce mariage eurent lieu « en la fin de l'esté » 1446[4] et le mariage lui-même au mois de juillet de cette même année. Cette contradiction n'existe pas dans la Compilation de Le Baud ; cependant, lui aussi place la mort de Jeanne d'Albret en septembre 1445 et le mariage de Richemont en juillet 1446[5] : il faut sans doute voir là une mauvaise lecture du compilateur. Ainsi qu'on le lit dans N et dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy, Jeanne d'Albret mourut à Parthenay à la fin de septembre 1444[1]; le traité du mariage de Richemont et de Catherine de Luxembourg fut signé à Châlons-sur-Marne le 30 juin 1445, et les noces eurent lieu le 2 juillet suivant[2]. Le copiste du ms. N a commis une nouvelle erreur en attribuant à la reddition du Mans par les Anglais la date de « mil CCCC XL six[3] ». Il faut recourir aux mss. S, C et B qui donnent l'année exacte, 1447 (anc. st.); cet événement eut en effet lieu, après de longs pourparlers entre les commissaires de Charles VII et les Anglais, au mois de mars 1448 (n. st.)[4]. Gruel, parlant d'une assemblée de Chinon, placée en 1447 dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy et dans le ms. N, et en 1448 dans tous les textes de la seconde famille, nous paraît faire évidemment une confusion, ainsi que nous croyons l'avoir prouvé ailleurs[5]. Nous retrouvons nos manuscrits en désaccord sur la date de la prise de Fougères qui eut lieu le 24 mars 1448, d'après le ms. N et l'édition Godefroy, en 1449, selon les autres manuscrits[6]. François de Surienne s'empara de cette ville le 24 mars 1449 (nouv. st.); cependant c'est le ms. N qui donne la bonne leçon, reproduite d'ailleurs par Le Baud, mais d'après l'ancien style, qui fait commencer l'année à Pâques[7]. Tous les manuscrits placent la reddition de Cherbourg au connétable à la « sourveille de my-aoust[1] », c'est-à-dire au 13 août, mais on sait que cet évènement eut lieu le 12 août[2]. Il y a lieu de croire que cette erreur, reproduite il est vrai dans tous nos textes, ne se trouvait pas dans l'original, qui présentait sans doute quelque confusion à cet endroit; en effet, on lit dans C, B que la reddition de Cherbourg eut lieu la surveille de la mi-août et que Richemont quitta cette ville le 12 août, ce qui est inadmissible, puisqu'il était encore devant la place au moment de la reddition, et en confia lui-même la garde à l'amiral de Bueil[3]; mais ces textes ont peut-être attribué au départ de Richemont la date que l'original fixait pour la reddition de Cherbourg et que l'on retrouve précisément dans la Compilation de Le Baud[4]. Si, en effet, l'on transpose les deux dates données par C et B, les faits se trouvent dans un ordre rationnel : la reddition de Cherbourg au 12 août, et le départ de Richemont au 13. Il faut remarquer en outre que N et S fixent ce dernier événement au lendemain du jour où la ville fut remise, c'est-à-dire au 14, par suite de l'erreur commise dans ces manuscrits au sujet de la date de la reddition. Nous croyons que la leçon « et ce jour », que donne Th. Godefroy[5], ne se trouvait pas dans le texte T, mais plutôt la fausse leçon des mss. C, B, et que, s'étant aperçu de la contradiction, il a fait arbitrairement cette correction. L'hypothèse que nous venons d'émettre à ce sujet nous paraît digne d'attention; cependant, comme aucun manuscrit, pas même celui de Le

Baud[1], ne présente dans l'ordre que nous proposons d'adopter les deux dates fournies par C et B, nous n'apporterons aucune modification à notre texte, dont nous devons toutefois signaler l'inexactitude. Tous les manuscrits et l'édition de Th. Godefroy placent la mort du duc Pierre en 1456[2]. Cependant Le Baud donne l'année 1457, qui est la vraie date[3]. L'a-t-il empruntée à une source autre que la chronique de Gruel, ou bien se trouvait-elle dans le manuscrit dont il s'est servi? Avant de répondre à cette question, il est nécessaire de rappeler qu'au début de sa chronique, Gruel nous dit que Richemont « ne fut duc que quinze moys[4] ». Or, sur les quatre manuscrits, un seul, N, place la mort de Richemont en 1457, et les autres en 1458; Le Baud fournit aussi cette dernière date, qui est, comme on sait, la seule exacte[5]. On conviendra qu'il est difficile d'admettre que Gruel ne connût pas exactement l'époque de la mort de son maître; c'était là un événement très rapproché du temps où il écrivait; par conséquent le souvenir devait en être bien présent à la mémoire du chroniqueur et des personnes auprès desquelles il a pu se renseigner. D'un autre côté, si, comme il est probable, les dates étaient écrites dans le manuscrit original entièrement en chiffres romains, il n'est pas étonnant que des copistes, moins érudits que Le Baud, aient pris une date pour une autre, surtout si la lecture présentait quelque difficulté. En somme, nous croyons que les manuscrits de la seconde famille nous donnent sur ce point la leçon du texte original. Si l'on admet cette conclusion en ce qui concerne la mort de Richemont, il est évident qu'il faut placer la mort du duc Pierre en 1457, sur la foi de la Compilation de Le

Baud, qui serait le seul à nous fournir la leçon du manuscrit de Gruel. Il est impossible d'attribuer de telles erreurs à notre chroniqueur, qui est parvenu à nous raconter d'une manière assez exacte la vie du connétable; ce sont là des fautes de copistes qui transcrivaient sans suivre le récit avec attention. On ne trouve indiqué que dans le ms. N le lieu de la sépulture du duc Pierre, et, chose digne de remarque, cette mention se rencontre aussi dans la Compilation de Le Baud[1], ce qui nous confirme dans cette opinion que, pour tout ce passage, celui-ci reproduit seul exactement l'ancien manuscrit de Gruel. La date qui commence le chapitre LXXXIX[2] doit être également modifiée sur l'autorité de Le Baud.

Nous avons essayé de réparer, autant qu'il était en notre pouvoir, les erreurs commises par les copistes qui nous ont transmis le texte de la chronique de Richemont; grâce à cette revision attentive nous avons pu l'améliorer notablement en faisant disparaître quelques grossiers anachronismes qui ont passé des éditions de la chronique dans nombre d'articles consacrés au connétable. Nous venons de faire une œuvre de réhabilitation en faveur de Gruel; il nous reste maintenant à examiner le travail même du chroniqueur, auquel nous avons ainsi restitué sa valeur première.

IV.

AUTORITÉ HISTORIQUE DE GRUEL.

Juger Gruel et Richemont, apprécier l'autorité historique du chroniqueur et, par suite, le rôle politique et le caractère du connétable ne sont pas choses aisées; sur l'un comme sur l'autre, les avis sont partagés. Sans rappeler ici les opinions diverses exprimées à ce sujet[1], nous indiquerons d'abord le point de vue spécial auquel s'est placé Gruel en écrivant son travail ; puis nous examinerons la valeur de son témoignage pour l'histoire politique, militaire et privée du connétable ; enfin, à l'exemple de Gruel lui-même, nous terminerons cette introduction en résumant aussi brièvement que possible nos conclusions sur le rôle joué au XVe siècle par Richemont.

Gruel n'a pas la prétention d'avoir conservé le souvenir de tous les événements importants qui ont marqué la vie du connétable ; il a seulement « mis en histoire partie des faitz du bon duc Artur[2]. » Pourquoi n'a-t-il pas voulu écrire une biographie plus complète? Il semble alléguer son insuffisance[2]. Il y a certainement du vrai dans cette assertion, qui, pourtant, ne nous paraît pas absolument exacte. Sa situation assez modeste ne lui donnant pas accès dans les conseils des grands seigneurs, tout ce qui s'y passe lui échappe forcément, et ses relations personnelles ne lui ont pas permis de combler les importantes lacunes que nous aurons l'occasion de signaler dans le récit des événements purement politiques auxquels son maître se trouva mêlé. Mais, d'autre part, il y a dans la carrière de Richemont certaines phases, peu à son honneur, sur lesquelles Gruel passe le plus légèrement possible. Enfin il a écarté de son récit presque tout ce qui a trait à la vie privée, aux possessions du connétable, à l'administration de ses nombreux domaines, points sur lesquels il pouvait facilement se renseigner. Homme d'armes, il a voulu surtout écrire une histoire militaire de celui qu'il considère comme un grand capitaine ; c'est là certainement le trait caractéristique de son travail.

2. Gruel, p. 232.

Il y a donc dans le récit de Gruel des lacunes volontaires. C'est évidemment, en effet, d'après un dessein préconçu qu'il ne fait aucune allusion aux luttes intestines qui désolaient la Bretagne au commencement du XVe siècle, alors que les Penthièvre n'avaient pas encore perdu tout espoir de recouvrer la couronne ducale. Pouvait-il ignorer les multiples difficultés qui surgirent à l'occasion de la tutelle des enfants de Jean le Vaillant? Il est permis d'en douter[1]. Il n'a pas voulu davantage expliquer les nombreuses variations politiques de la jeunesse de Richemont, qui, attaché d'abord à Philippe le Hardi et à Jean Sans Peur, s'allie ensuite aux Orléanais contre le duc de Bourgogne, passe plusieurs fois d'un camp à l'autre, entraînant à sa suite quelques seigneurs bretons[2], va tendre la main aux Anglais dans le Maine avec le duc d'Alençon, et enfin entre au service du Roi de France et du duc de Guyenne[3].

Bien que Gruel ne nous dise pas exactement[4] en quoi consistait la haute situation occupée par Richemont dans l'entourage du Dauphin, nous savons néanmoins qu'il n'eut pas à se plaindre de son nouveau maître ni de Charles VI[5]; mais il n'entre pas dans le plan du chroniqueur de mettre en relief les bons procédés de la Cour de France à l'égard des princes bretons. Il a pu manquer de renseignements précis sur la captivité de Richemont en Angleterre, après la bataille d'Azincourt; mais il est moins facile d'admettre son ignorance des moyens déloyaux employés par le prisonnier pour conquérir les bonnes grâces de Henri V et pour recouvrer une liberté d'abord provisoire, puis complète[1]. Gruel confond trop souvent, comme le fait volontiers Richemont lui-même, l'intérêt propre de son maître avec l'intérêt de la Bretagne ou de la France, et, s'il se plaît à faire ressortir l'influence, parfois prépondérante, qu'il exerce sur les ducs ses frère et neveux, il se garde bien de montrer les mobiles d'ordre tout privé qui le font agir. L'attitude de Richemont vis-à-vis des ducs de Bourgogne nous permet de découvrir l'idée qui domine dans ses résolutions. On sait que, n'ayant pas été « recueilli du duc Jehan de Bourgoingne, » après la mort de Philippe le Hardi[2], il passa au service du duc de Berry, puis du duc de Guyenne. Aussi que fait-il pendant les troubles de 1410-1412? Il s'efforce d'entraîner le duc de Bretagne dans l'alliance orléanaise contre le Roi et le duc de Bourgogne. L'intérêt de Richemont est de soutenir le duc de Berry, son maître; donc c'est également l'avantage de la Bretagne. Mais Richemont change de protecteur et sert le duc de Guyenne et le Roi; l'orientation de la politique de la Bretagne suit les mêmes vicissitudes : la duchesse Jeanne vient à la Cour de France, où son beau-frère lui ménage, d'après Gruel[3], une brillante réception. Après Azincourt, Richemont est au pouvoir du Roi anglais; bientôt il s'efforce de produire un nouveau revirement à la Cour de Bretagne, qu'il n'hésite pas à détourner de l'alliance du Dauphin[4]. Anglais, il voudrait la Bretagne anglaise, en attendant qu'il la fasse devenir bourguignonne, car, bientôt, il jette les yeux sur Marguerite de Bourgogne, veuve de son ancien maître le Dauphin Louis, duc de Guyenne, et médite de l'épouser.

Alors, il prépare les conférences d'Amiens, et, malgré les États de Bretagne, décide le duc son frère à s'y rendre et à signer la triple alliance, conclue, le 17 avril 1423, entre les ducs de Bedford, de Bourgogne et de Bretagne[1]. Sommes-nous arrivé à la dernière étape de cette triste odyssée? Non, car, fort heureusement pour la France, Richemont allait entrevoir à la Cour de Charles VII un avenir plus brillant que celui qu'il aurait pu rêver dans le camp ennemi; l'épée de connétable était à portée de sa main et il pouvait être justement enorgueilli de se voir appelé à continuer la série des connétables bretons en recueillant l'héritage de Bertrand du Guesclin. Enfin il entre en rapport avec Charles VII, qui le crée connétable. Nous voici de nouveau en présence d'un bon Français; c'est la première fois depuis Azincourt. Certes il y aura encore bien des hésitations dans la politique de Richemont, il commettra bien des fautes, nous le verrons prêt à la trahison, sur le bord de l'abîme, il n'y tombera pas; il restera Breton avant tout; mais il ne sera plus Anglais ou Bourguignon.

Telles sont les conclusions que nous pouvons tirer, au moins la plupart du temps, du récit même de Gruel, qui se garde bien de les formuler; il n'a pas voulu se charger d'expliquer les variations politiques de la jeunesse de Richemont; c'était une lourde tâche, peut-être au-dessus de ses forces. Il y a donc dans cette première partie de son récit des lacunes qu'il n'a pu combler et aussi des omissions volontaires.

D'après Gruel, Richemont accepta l'épée de connétable avec l'autorisation des ducs de Bretagne, de Bourgogne et de Savoie et après avoir reçu du Roi la promesse que « tous ceulx qui avoient esté cause de la mort de monseigneur de Bourgoingne et consentans de la prinse du duc Jehan de Bretaigne » seraient exilés[1]. Voilà qui semble bien clair et la situation du nouveau connétable nous apparaît solidement établie; sa conduite loyale envers ses alliés pouvait avoir d'heureuses conséquences, dont la plus désirable, que les optimistes entrevoyaient déjà, était un rapprochement entre Charles VII et Philippe le Bon. Malheureusement le chroniqueur n'a pas connu ou a feint d'ignorer de ténébreuses intrigues, auxquelles son maître se trouva mêlé. Nous croyons cependant que le rôle de ce dernier dans l'affaire du projet d'assassinat de Philippe le Bon ne fut pas inavouable; il voulut seulement profiter d'une occasion favorable pour détacher le duc de Bourgogne de l'alliance anglaise, en lui révélant les noirs desseins de Bedford, de Glocester, de Suffolk et de Salisbury, qui songeaient à se défaire de lui. Gruel est absolument muet sur cette grave question, et ce n'est pas lui qui nous apprendra si, oui ou non, le connétable a fait fabriquer ou utilisé de fausses lettres pour amener une rupture définitive entre Philippe le Bon et les princes anglais[2]. Ce n'est pas lui, non plus, qui nous expliquera la singulière conduite de son maître, qui, pour complaire aux ducs de Bretagne et de Bourgogne, exige du Roi le renvoi de ses principaux conseillers et en même temps promet à ces mêmes conseillers de les maintenir au pouvoir[3].

Gruel, p. 36; Beaucourt, Hist. de Charles VII, II, 86, 87; cf. notamment le passage suivant du traité signé par le nouveau connétable, le lendemain de sa nomination, ou le 8 mars 1425 : « Item [le comte de Richemont] jure et promet que les serviteurs du Roy, c'est assavoir messire Tanguy du Chastel, prevost de Paris, le président [Louvet], le sire de Giac, Guillaume d'Avaugour et Pierre [Frotier], aymera, soustiendra et portera, ne, pour quelconque chose qui soit, ne fera, fera faire ou consentira chose qui soit au dommaige de leurs personnes ne de

Si Gruel n'a pas mis en lumière toutes ces intrigues, au moins a-t-il su découvrir le principal objectif de la conduite politique ultérieure de Richemont, qui « tousjours tractoit et desiroit faire la paix entre le Roy et monseigneur de Bourgoigne[1]. » Mais il semble bien que le connétable hésita d'abord entre les divers engagements contradictoires qu'il avait pris; dans tous les cas, une fois en possession de sa nouvelle dignité, il aurait sans doute consenti à maintenir au pouvoir les anciens conseillers du Roi, si, affolés par la crainte de perdre toute influence, ils n'avaient commis la faute de le traiter en ennemi, alors qu'ils auraient dû, même dans leur intérêt purement personnel, le soutenir et favoriser ses entreprises. En effet, voyant, d'un côté, leur désertion, et, de l'autre, l'attitude de plus en plus hostile des ducs, qui réclamaient en vain l'exécution de ses promesses, Richemont ne pouvait qu'obéir aux injonctions de ces derniers[2]. Il trouva du reste un puissant auxiliaire dans la reine de Sicile pour faire éloigner de la Cour Jean Louvet, seigneur de Mirandol, dit le président de Provence, Pierre Frotier, Guillaume d'Avaugour; Tanguy du Chastel se retira sans aucune difficulté à Beaucaire et aida même, dit-on, « à mettre dehors ceulx qui s'en devoient aller[3]. » En somme, Richemont avait pris le bon parti en essayant de rapprocher leurs biens et estatz... » Il est clair que les dispositions de cet inqualifiable engagement, signé seulement le 8 mars, avaient été arrêtées antérieurement à l'élévation de Richemont à la dignité de connétable; il ne promit de le ratifier que pour faire tomber les derniers obstacles qui lui barraient le chemin du pouvoir. (Cf. Cosneau, p. 504, note 2.) Ce n'était assurément pas très loyal; mais nous savons que Richemont avait déjà plusieurs actes de ce genre à son actif.

le duc de Bourgogne et Charles VII. Ajoutons, en outre, que cette ligne de conduite était de tous points d'accord avec ses intérêts personnels, car il devait ménager son puissant beau-frère, qui d'un moment à l'autre pouvait mettre la main sur la dot de Mme de Guyenne. Nous avons à peine besoin de faire remarquer que ce n'est pas Gruel qui nous signale les motifs personnels qui eurent alors quelque influence sur la politique du connétable. Du reste il ne mentionne pas davantage les diverses ambassades envoyées par Richemont au duc de Bourgogne, pour lui rappeler qu'on avait fait droit à ses plaintes contre les conseillers de Charles VII et qu'il ne lui restait plus aucun prétexte pour refuser de conclure la paix avec le Roi[1]. C'est toute l'histoire des négociations diplomatiques du connétable qu'il nous faudrait écrire ici pour compléter le récit de Gruel dans cette partie. Le chroniqueur passe sous silence la correspondance de Richemont avec les villes restées fidèles au Roi, notamment avec Lyon[2], les alliances conclues par lui avec le duc de Bretagne, les comtes d'Armagnac, de Pardiac, de Clermont et de Foix[3]. Gruel connaît un peu mieux les incidents qui troublèrent la Cour, lorsque le connétable, ne reculant pas devant un double meurtre pour maintenir son influence, fit successivement exécuter le sire de Giac et Le Camus de Beaulieu. Il nous donne aussi de précieux renseignements sur la lutte entre Richemont et La Trémoille, sans toutefois en indiquer la cause réelle; l'intérêt de la France tenait certainement peu de place alors dans les calculs des deux rivaux, qui voulaient surtout défendre leur situation et maintenir leur influence. Cette fois, le connétable fut vaincu et dut se retirer dans sa seigneurie de Parthenay, dont il venait d'hériter de Jean Larchevêque, mort récemment[1].

3. Cosneau, p. 527, n° XLVI; dans cette pièce, datée du 6 janvier 1427, Richemont, en s'engageant, sous certaines réserves, à ne pas combattre le comte de Foix, rappelle qu'il a antérieurement conclu des traités analogues avec le duc de Bretagne, les comtes d'Armagnac et de Pardiac. Le 4 août suivant, il traitait spécialement avec le comte de Clermont. (Hist. de Charles VII, par M. de Beaucourt, II, 149; D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1199; Archives nat., P 1372[2], cote 2113.) Le 30 janvier 1428 est signé un nouveau traité par les comtes de Clermont, de Richemont et d'Armagnac, qui s'engagent à secourir le duc de Bretagne contre Jean de Blois. (Cosneau, p. 533, n° LII.)

Si l'on examine avec attention cette partie du récit de Gruel, on est frappé plus vivement que jamais d'un défaut que nous avons déjà signalé : nous voyons la situation du connétable changer complètement, sans que son biographe songe à nous expliquer les causes de ces revirements subits. A la requête du connétable, le Roi consent à garder La Trémoille près de lui, et, dans l'espace de quelques mois à peine, ce même La Trémoille renverse son protecteur du pouvoir. Gruel mentionne ces deux événements[2], mais il ne nous donne pas les raisons qui avaient guidé le choix de Richemont et il n'indique pas l'origine de la rivalité qui survint peu après, rivalité devenue si vive que La Trémoille redoutait plus que tout autre le premier auteur de sa fortune. Le connétable est donc éloigné du Roi, à la fin de 1427, sans que l'on sache au juste la raison de cet exil ; il va reparaître à la Cour, dans l'assemblée réunie à Vienne, en Dauphiné, au mois d'avril 1434, sans que l'on se rende suffisamment compte, en lisant le récit de Gruel, de ce que son maître a fait pour mériter l'accueil très bienveillant qui l'attend[3].

Du tableau des négociations politiques auxquelles Richemont fut mêlé pendant sa disgrâce, Gruel n'a guère laissé complètement de côté que les relations de son maître avec le duc de Bourgogne et les Anglais, si toutefois ceux-ci, prêts à tous les sacrifices pour enlever à Charles VII l'appui des princes bretons, ont réellement proposé au connétable de se démettre de sa dignité pour devenir le connétable de Henri VI et recevoir le duché de Touraine, la Saintonge, l'Aunis, la ville de la Rochelle et toutes les terres de La Trémoille en Poitou et en Saintonge[1]. Dans tous les cas, ce projet n'eut heureusement pas de suite, mais Gruel n'en dit rien; par contre, il s'étend plus longuement que de coutume sur les négociations entamées entre Richemont, le Roi et La Trémoille, sur les complots tramés contre ce dernier. S'il n'insiste guère sur le mariage du comte de Montfort avec Yolande d'Anjou, et celui de Pierre de Bretagne, second fils du duc, avec Françoise d'Amboise[2]; s'il ne donne pas toutes les clauses du traité du 19 février 1432, qui mit fin au différend survenu entre les ducs de Bretagne et d'Alençon[3], il est mieux renseigné sur le traité, plus important, conclu à Rennes, le 5 mars suivant, entre Raoul de Gaucourt, Regnauld Girard, seigneur de Bazoges, ambassadeurs du Roi de France, d'une part, et le duc de Bretagne, le comte de Richemont, d'autre part[4].

Désormais le connétable va concentrer tous ses efforts sur un but unique : la réconciliation de Charles VII et de Phi-queur donne à entendre que le Roi et le connétable se rencontrèrent avant le départ de Charles VII pour Vienne.

lippe le Bon. Gruel a connu et mentionné, mais avec beaucoup trop de concision, les principales étapes du chemin parcouru depuis l'assemblée des États à Vienne, en avril 1434. Il consacre deux lignes à cette importante réunion, qui fut le point de départ d'une campagne militaire et de négociations conduites avec une certaine activité[1]. Nous lui devons une curieuse indication, donnée également, du reste, par Berry et Monstrelet, sur l'une des conditions de la reddition de Ham aux gens du duc de Bourgogne. Ces trois chroniqueurs nous apprennent que Richemont reçut une assez forte somme[2], dont il n'est fait aucune mention dans la trêve conclue par lui avec Jean de Bourgogne, le 17 septembre 1434. Gruel a fourni sur l'emploi de cet argent des explications qui ne sont peut-être pas absolument exactes[3]; mais il semble bien établi que le connétable entendait n'en rendre compte à personne, puisque le traité n'en parlait pas. Cet acte avait une importance bien plus grande qu'on ne pourrait le croire en lisant le récit de Gruel, qui n'en a pas vu toute la portée politique. On y manifestait de part et d'autre un vif désir « d'avanchier le bien de la... paix generale, à quoy, par moien de bonnes triefves et abstinences de guerre l'en porra, au plaisir de Dieu, plus tost et aisiement parvenir[4]. » La trêve devait durer six mois, pendant lesquels on reprit les négociations en vue d'arriver à la « paix générale. » Ce fut l'objet principal de la réunion tenue à Nevers, du 20 janvier au 7 février 1435, dont Gruel signale brièvement l'heureux résultat : « Et fut entreprinse la journée pour se rendre [à] Arras pour faire la paix[1]. » Plus loin, il ajoute : « Car sur toutes choses la desiroit mon dit seigneur le connestable, et tant fist qu'elle se treuva; » et voilà à peu près tout ce qu'il rapporte des laborieuses séances qui décidèrent, à Arras, du sort de la couronne de France[2].

On peut dire que la participation du connétable à la conclusion du traité d'Arras est le dernier acte de cette série de négociations entreprises par lui avec le duc de Bourgogne depuis l'assemblée de Vienne. Dans la suite, le diplomate disparaît presque complètement devant le général. Cependant il montre encore une louable activité dans les pourparlers engagés avec les Parisiens et dans la réorganisation des services publics, lors de la reddition de la capitale[3]. Mais on ne voit pas bien l'influence qu'il exerça dans les États réunis à Orléans en septembre-octobre 1439, et Gruel, comme les autres chroniqueurs et les chartes, est muet sur ce point[4]. Par contre il est assez bien renseigné sur les débuts de la Praguerie, et il ne manque pas de mettre en relief le mérite du connétable, qui, malgré toutes les tentatives faites auprès de lui par les seigneurs révoltés, resta fidèle à Charles VII[5]. Pourquoi faut-il qu'après avoir accordé au connétable cet éloge, nous soyons obligé de le montrer de nouveau oublieux de ses serments et prêt, le cas échéant, à porter les armes contre les troupes royales? C'est pourtant ce qui ressort clairement de la promesse faite par lui, le 22 août (ou le 25) 1440, à son frère Jean VI, d'empêcher « l'entrée ou pais et duchié de Bretaigne des gens de guerre estans ou service et obeissance de monseigneur le Roy, ou d'autres qui y vouldroient faire ou porter guerre ou dommage..., de venir en personne... et... leur contester et deffendre la dite entrée, les en debouter, se entrez y estoient, et garder que à ses dits pays et duchié ne facent aucune guerre, mal ou dommage[1]... » Que Richemont, prévoyant une guerre entre Charles VII et le duc de Bretagne, alors en relations suspectes avec les Cours de Bourgogne et d'Angleterre[2], eût demandé au Roi de ne pas le servir contre son propre frère, on ne pourrait blâmer une telle conduite. Mais il n'agit pas, on le voit, à l'égard de Charles VII comme il l'avait fait, en janvier 1422, envers Henri V, par lequel il fut, sur sa requête, dispensé de prendre part à une guerre entre l'Angleterre et la Bretagne, si le cas venait à se produire[3].

Gruel a bien indiqué les deux principaux résultats des conférences de Tours, en mai 1444, où les ambassadeurs du Roi d'Angleterre et les représentants de Charles VII décidèrent le mariage de Henri VI avec Marguerite d'Anjou et conclurent une trêve de deux ans[4]. Mais il se contente de signaler la présence dans l'assemblée du duc de Bretagne et du connétable, et ne nous renseigne en aucune façon sur leur rôle personnel.

En dehors des affaires diplomatiques d'intérêt général, que nous venons de passer rapidement en revue, Richemont fut encore mêlé à certaines négociations particulières, notamment à celles qui furent entamées en vue d'obtenir la délivrance du duc d'Orléans et du roi René d'Anjou, la réconciliation du duc de Bretagne François et de son frère Gilles, enfin la réconciliation des Montfort et des Penthièvre. Gruel ne dit rien de la maigre caution de 6,000 saluts fournie au duc d'Orléans par le connétable[1]; mais il mentionne plusieurs voyages faits par son maître pour décider le duc de Bourgogne à rendre la liberté au roi René[2] et il consacre tout un chapitre au différend survenu entre le duc François et Gilles de Bretagne, sur lequel il revient, en outre, à plusieurs reprises, en manifestant pour ce dernier une sympathie dont il n'était certainement pas digne[3]. C'est, croyons-nous, la seule circonstance dans laquelle notre chroniqueur se soit départi de sa réserve habituelle lorsqu'il s'agit des dissensions qui troublèrent alors plus d'une fois la Cour de Bretagne. Nous trouvons une nouvelle preuve de cette réserve dans la brièveté avec laquelle il mentionne l'« appointement » conclu à Nantes, le 27 juin 1448, entre les représentants des deux maisons rivales des Penthièvre et des Montfort[4].

En insistant, comme nous l'avons fait, sur certaines lacunes de l'œuvre de Gruel, particulièrement en ce qui concerne les multiples négociations diplomatiques de Richemont, nous croyons avoir donné des gages suffisants de notre impartialité absolue, et nous espérons que l'on voudra bien nous croire quand nous affirmerons qu'il a su dresser un journal militaire détaillé, exact dans son ensemble, des campagnes du connétable, à la plupart desquelles il prit part lui-même. Du reste, les preuves abondent. Où trouver, en effet, plus de renseignements sur l'histoire militaire de l'ouest de la France, qui fut le principal théâtre de la guerre pendant les années qui suivirent immédiatement l'arrivée de Richemont au pouvoir? Gruel indique avec beaucoup de précision les premières mesures prises par le nouveau connétable pour couvrir la Bretagne : le siège de Saint-James-de-Beuvron et celui de Pontorson, puis la délivrance de Montargis; enfin, il a su raconter la guerre que se firent les partisans de La Trémoille et ceux de Richemont, et même la victoire de Patay, dans des pages qui, pour renfermer quelques appréciations erronées, n'en sont pas moins fort précieuses. En outre, dès que son maître reparaît, après la fin de sa disgrâce, sur les champs de bataille, on voit le cadre de sa narration s'élargir tout à coup, et il nous fait des campagnes du connétable de 1434 à la fin de 1442, c'est-à-dire jusqu'après la prise de Dax, un récit très détaillé où les données nouvelles sont nombreuses[1]. Il est moins bien renseigné sur l'expédition de Lorraine, en 1444 et 1445[2]; mais, quand la trêve avec les Anglais est rompue par la prise de Fougères, le 24 mars 1449, Gruel se retrouve dans une région qui lui est familière et sa relation du « recouvrement » de Normandie complète dans bien des cas celles du héraut Berry et de Mathieu d'Escouchy, ainsi que la Chronique du Mont Saint-Michel[3]. En résumé, quand on s'occupe de l'histoire militaire du second quart du XVe siècle, il est indispensable de consulter la chronique de Guillaume Gruel.

Il ne faudrait pas chercher dans son œuvre un tableau plus ou moins complet de la vie privée de Richemont, de ses possessions, de l'administration de ses nombreux domaines, on serait déçu. Il signale bien les trois mariages du connétable et entre même, par exception, dans quelques détails sur les préliminaires assez longs de son union avec Mme de Guyenne; mais, du contrat de mariage et des difficultés qui en résultèrent, il ne dit rien[1]. Nous constatons le même silence à propos des dots de Jeanne d'Albret[2] et de Catherine de Luxembourg[3]. Divers documents, indiqués dans nos notes ou à la suite de notre texte, permettent heureusement de combler ces lacunes et celles qui concernent les revenus du connétable et l'administration des nombreux domaines qu'il possédait, notamment dans le Poitou, la Bretagne, la Normandie et la Bourgogne; nous devons une mention spéciale aux Comptes de Guillaume Bonnote, de Jean Vignier, de Jacquot Espiart, de Robin Denisot, de Guillaume Ripault[4]. Gruel n'a pas voulu non plus nous dire quelles furent les destinées de toutes ces seigneuries après la mort de Richemont, qui s'en était fort préoccupé de son vivant[5].

En résumé, la chronique de Gruel peut être classée au nombre des principales sources de l'histoire militaire du règne de Charles VII, surtout si l'on a soin de vérifier minutieusement les appréciations personnelles de l'auteur; mais elle est manifestement insuffisante pour ce qui a trait à l'histoire diplomatique et à la vie privée du connétable.

Nous venons d'établir aussi clairement que possible le degré de créance qu'il faut accorder à l'œuvre de Guillaume Gruel ; nous allons essayer maintenant d'apprécier brièvement le rôle de Richemont. Laissant de côté ces couleurs brillantes que son premier chroniqueur et son dernier biographe, Gruel et M. Cosneau, ont voulu donner au portrait du connétable[1], nous nous bornerons à citer les faits qui, de l'avis de tous, doivent servir de base à un jugement impartial, puis nous emprunterons aux textes et aux documents du XVe siècle leurs conclusions sur les événements ayant donné lieu à des interprétations diverses.

Il est généralement admis que Richemont fut ambitieux, d'un caractère énergique, violent et empreint d'une rudesse regrettable ; l'aversion réciproque de Charles VII et de son connétable ne saurait non plus être révoquée en doute[2]. On est moins d'accord en ce qui concerne sa loyauté, son désintéressement, ses talents politiques et militaires, sa bravoure.

Parmi les textes qui donnent une fâcheuse idée de sa loyauté, nous mentionnerons le traité du 22 juillet 1420 contenant les honteuses conditions auxquelles Richemont, prisonnier de Henri V, recouvrait une liberté relative[3] ; le passage dans lequel Gruel indique de quelle façon son maître se libéra complètement[4] ; le traité d'alliance conclu, à son instigation, le 17 avril 1423, à Amiens, entre les ducs de Bretagne, de Bourgogne et le régent Bedford[5] ; la promesse faite par lui aux anciens conseillers de Charles VII de les maintenir au pouvoir, alors qu'avant de prendre l'épée de connétable, il s'était engagé envers les ducs de Bretagne et de Bourgogne à exiger le renvoi de ces mêmes conseillers[6] ; enfin, cette promesse faite, en août 1440, à son frère Jean VI de défendre la Bretagne envers et contre tous[1].

Le désintéressement du connétable, qui, on le sait, devint fort riche, est très problématique. M. Cosneau dit qu'il eut auprès de ses contemporains la réputation d'un homme « avide de richesses » et, après avoir cité divers exemples qui justifient amplement cette épithète, reconnaît qu'il « ne négligeait pas ses intérêts[2]. » Il les prit même trop à cœur dans certaines circonstances, notamment lors de la reddition de Paris, qui, d'après le Bourgeois de Paris et Monstrelet, lui rapporta une grosse somme et un riche butin; nous devons aussi rappeler que Berry et Monstrelet affirment, comme Gruel, qu'il reçut également de l'argent, en septembre 1434, lors de la reddition de Ham aux gens du duc de Bourgogne. Le doyen de Saint-Thiébaut de Metz nous apprend que Robert de Saarbruck, damoiseau de Commercy, lui versa une somme de 20,000 saluts pour obtenir son assistance[3].

On a dit que Richemont eut le mérite d'avoir une « politique bien arrêtée[4]. » Rien n'est certainement plus faux que ce jugement. Nous ne rappellerons pas de nouveau toutes les vicissitudes de la politique de Richemont avant son élévation à la dignité de connétable; mais nous examinerons sa conduite pendant la période où il eut en main la direction des affaires, c'est-à-dire pendant les deux années qui suivirent son arrivée au pouvoir. Or, nous le voyons fort indécis sur la conduite à tenir vis-à-vis des conseillers du Roi et à l'égard des ducs de Bourgogne et de Bretagne; il place des hommes à lui près de la personne de Charles VII et se brouille avec eux; il est, enfin, obligé de se retirer devant La Trémoille sans avoir rien fait pour ce royaume qu'il fallait reconquérir. Jamais, lorsqu'il reparut sur la scène politique après sa disgrâce, il ne reprit l'ascendant dont il avait joui auparavant; mais on sent bien qu'il a alors un but arrêté : la réconciliation de Charles VII et du duc de Bourgogne. Il faut le louer d'avoir concouru à cette œuvre de pacification, sans toutefois avancer que « la gloire en revient surtout à Richemont[1]. » Tout le monde alors désirait la paix, Charles VII plus que personne, et il le montra bien par les démarches qu'il fit auprès du pape, du concile de Bâle, des princes ses alliés, et surtout par les sacrifices qu'il accepta pour donner satisfaction au duc de Bourgogne. Le connétable eut-il assez d'influence sur Philippe le Bon pour lui faire abandonner quelques-unes de ses prétentions? Rien ne le prouve; mais il est permis de croire qu'il s'y employa aussi activement que l'archevêque de Reims, Regnault de Chartres, chancelier de France, Christophe d'Harcourt, le maréchal de la Fayette et les autres ambassadeurs royaux[2].

Après l'homme politique, examinons le général. Il se distingua dans la campagne qui amena la reddition de Paris et des places environnantes, aux sièges de Montereau, de Pontoise, de Saint-Sever et pendant la conquête de la Basse-Normandie; cependant, nous n'entendons pas lui rapporter tout l'honneur de la victoire de Formigny, qui fut, par ses contemporains eux-mêmes, décerné au comte de Clermont[3]; en outre, nous ne pouvons passer sous silence son échec sous les murs de Saint-James-de-Beuvron, en 1425, et la longueur du siège de Meaux, alors qu'il commandait en chef. Sans prendre tout à fait au sérieux les accusations du Bourgeois de Paris, qui prétend que le connétable était « très couart » et « n'estoit à rien bon au regart de la guerre[1], » on doit reconnaître qu'il ne passait pas pour être d'une bravoure à toute épreuve, non seulement aux yeux du Bourgeois de Paris, mais aussi à ceux de Poton de Saintrailles[2]. Le Roi n'avait pas une grande confiance dans son habileté, car il ne lui laissa pas la direction du siège de Pontoise et fut sur le point de le laisser dans l'Ile-de-France lors de l'expédition de Tartas[3]. Dans ces conditions et en l'absence de documents précis, il est fort difficile de se rendre un compte exact du rôle de Richemont dans la réorganisation de l'armée et de son influence sur les États généraux d'Orléans, dans lesquels fut discutée l'ordonnance promulguée le 2 novembre 1439; mais un fait digne d'attention, c'est que le connétable ne figure point au nombre des seigneurs indiqués dans le préambule même de l'acte comme ayant pris part aux délibérations[4]; il ne faut pas voir là un oubli, mais plutôt un indice, sinon une preuve, de son abstention ou du peu de cas que l'on faisait de sa compétence.

Pour résumer notre appréciation du caractère de Richemont, nous dirons qu'il fut ambitieux, énergique, violent, avide de richesses, général en chef médiocre, mais capable de rendre des services au second rang dans les conseils et sur les champs de bataille. Si l'on tient compte du milieu où il fut élevé et de l'époque si troublée où il a vécu, on pourra le placer à côté des capitaines de son temps, qui, pour la plupart, avaient les mêmes qualités et les mêmes défauts;

mais rien, nous ne craignons pas de l'affirmer de nouveau, ne dénote dans le connétable de Richemont un homme supérieur.

Chapitre Ier.

Cy commence la cronique de tres hault et tres exellant prince de bon memoire Artur deuxziesme de ce nom, extrait de la noble lignée royale et duchale de Bretaigne; en son vivant conte de Richemont[1], seigneur de Partenay, connestable de France; et en la fin de ses jours duc de Bretaigne, conte de Montfort et de Richemont, seigneur de Partenay, connestable de France; qui regna trop petit en Bretaigne, car il ne fut duc que quinze moys.

1. Le comté de Richemont, ou Richmond, est situé dans le Yorkshire et appartenait, au moins nominalement, à des princes bretons depuis la conquête de l'Angleterre par les Normands. Le 7 juin 1398, Jean le Vaillant abandonnait au roi d'Angleterre tous les droits qu'il pouvait avoir sur ce comté. (Cosneau, le Connétable de Richemont, Paris, 1886, in-8°, p. 477; J. Delpit, Documents français en Angleterre, Paris, 1847, in-4°, I, 211, n° 314.)

Chapitre II.

Cy parle du pere et de la mere du duc Artur.

Premier il fut filx du bon duc et vaillant le duc Jehan[1], qui gaingna et recouvra son païs de Bretaigne à l'espée. Et fut le dit duc Jehan marié en premieres nopces à la fille du Roy Edouart d'Angleterre; mais peu furent ensemble; et en secondes nopces fut marié[2] [o la fille du prince de Galles, et en tierces] o Jehanne, fille du Roy de Navarre, et en eut pluseurs enfans[3] : et premier le duc Jehan de Bretaigne, et Artur, conte de Richemont, et monseigneur Gilles[4] et monseigneur Anselme, Histoire généalogique, édit. 1726, I, 452; M. l'abbé U. Chevalier, *Répertoire des sources historiques du moyen âge. Les premiers admettent Jean de Montfort, père de Jean le Vaillant, dans la série des ducs de Bretagne.

2. Le membre de phrase qui suit, placé entre crochets, est emprunté aux mss. C, fol. 43 r°; B, fol. 1 r°, qui seuls donnent cette mention fort exacte.

3. Sur les trois femmes du duc Jean le Vaillant, consulter l'Hist. généalogique, par le P. Anselme, 1726, I, 452.

4. Ce Gilles de Bretagne mourut le 19 juillet 1412. (D. Lobineau, Hist. de Bretagne, II, 366.) Il ne faut pas le confondre avec son neveu du même nom, troisième fils du duc Jean VI et de Jeanne de France, qui mourut étranglé par des émissaires d'Arthur de Montauban dans la nuit du 24 au 25 avril 1450.

d'Estampes[1], et madame d'Alenczon[2] et madame de Lomaigne[3], madame de Porhoet[4].

CHAPITRE III.

De la naissance du duc Artur.

Celuy bon duc Artur fut né au Succeniou[5], l'an de grace mil troys cens quatre vingz treze, le jour Saint Barthelemy[6]; et fut traictié et nourri ainsi qu'il appartient à filx de si noble ligne et maison. Et au plus tost qu'il peut avoir cognoissance lui fut baillé pour le

3. Blanche de Bretagne, fiancée, le 30 juillet 1406, à Jean d'Armagnac, vicomte de Lomaigne et d'Autviller, fils de Bernard, comte d'Armagnac (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 771-773). Cf. une mention de ce mariage dans un traité d'alliance conclu entre Bernard d'Armagnac et le duc de Bretagne, et signé par le premier le 4 septembre 1408 (aux Archives de la Loire-Inférieure, E 181, cass. 76).

4. Marguerite de Bretagne, mariée, le dimanche 26 juin 1407, avec Alain de Porhoet, fils du vicomte de Rohan; le contrat de mariage est daté du 23 avril précédent (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 784-786). Albert Le Grand (Vies des saincts de Bretagne, édit. 1637, p. 765) cite une quatrième fille, Jeanne, morte dès l'enfance.

Chapitre IV.

Comment le bon duc Jehan trespassa.

Petit de temps après advint que le bon duc Jehan trespassa, ainsi que à tous fault mourir[2]; et après se maria la duchesse sa mere[3] au Roy d'Angleterre. Et comme prouche parent des enfans de Bretaigne vint le duc Phelipe de Bourgoingne, filx du Roy Jehan, à Nantes, et print la garde des enfans et enmena avecques luy le duc Jehan, monseigneur de Richemont et monseigneur Gilles; et estoient encores si petiz que gueres ne povoient chevaucher, et failloit mener mon

1. Le gouverneur de Richemont est appelé « Perronnit » dans le ms. S, fol. 23 r°, « Perronit » dans C, fol. 43 r°, « Perronet » par l'abréviateur de Du Chesne, fol. 114, qui le fait venir d'Angleterre; le nom manque dans B, fol. 1 r°.

2. Jean le Vaillant mourut au château de Nantes le 2 novembre 1399, et fut enterré dans le chœur de la cathédrale de cette ville (Anselme, I, 452).

3. Sic dans tous les mss. Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 2) met « sa veufve », correction purement arbitraire et bien inutile; car il s'agit évidemment de la mère de Richemont dont Gruel écrit l'histoire. Henri IV, roi d'Angleterre, épousa Jeanne de Navarre par procuration le 3 avril 1402, et la fit venir en Angleterre vers le mois d'octobre suivant. Le mariage définitif fut célébré le 7 février 1403, et la nouvelle Reine couronnée le 25 du même mois. (Anselme, I, 453; D. Lobineau, II, 874-876; Rymer, IV, 1, 36.)

dit seigneur de Richemont par la bride[1]. Et quant mon dit seigneur de Bourgoingne fut à Paris, il fist le mariage du duc Jehan de Bretaigne et de madame Jehanne, fille du Roy Charles VIme de ce nom[2], et

1. Le duc de Bourgogne se décida vers le milieu de septembre 1402 à aller en Bretagne chercher les enfants du feu duc, dont, après bien des péripéties, il avait été reconnu régent par les États de Bretagne, Jeanne de Navarre et le roi de France. Le 26 septembre il s'embarquait sur la Loire, à Blois, et arrivait le 2 octobre à Nantes, où il trouvait le jeune duc et ses frères Arthur de Richemont et Gilles. Il quitta cette ville le 20 novembre suivant, emmenant avec lui les trois jeunes princes, et arriva à Paris le dimanche 10 décembre. 2. Le traité réglant le mariage du comte de Montfort, fils aîné de Jean le Vaillant, avec Jeanne de France, fut signé à Tours le 26 janvier 1392 et spécialement approuvé par Jeanne de Navarre, duchesse de Bretagne, le 17 septembre 1396; deux jours plus tard, le 19 septembre, les fiançailles furent célébrées à Paris en présence de Philippe le Hardi, duc de Bourgogne. Le 2 décembre 1396, le comte de Montfort reçut le sacrement de la confirmation; appelé Pierre depuis son baptême, ce nom fut, à la requête du duc son père, changé en celui de Jean, qu'il porta dès lors. De nouvelles fiançailles furent célébrées ce jour-là; D. Lobineau et, après lui, le P. Anselme disent que, la dispense papale qu'il avait fallu demander à cause du degré de parenté des deux époux ne mentionnant pas leur bas âge, l'on dut renouveler encore la cérémonie des fiançailles, au Louvre, le 30 juillet 1397. Le mariage ne fut consommé qu'en janvier 1404; Jean, devenu duc de Bretagne, venait d'être déclaré majeur. Le même mois, le 7, d'après D. Morice, le 12, d'après M. Cosneau, il faisait hommage pour son duché au Roi de France, alors en son hôtel de Saint-Pol. On ne voit pas bien s'il s'agit dans la narration de Gruel de l'une des cérémonies des fiançailles ou du mariage défi-enmena monseigneur de Richemont quant et lui en Picardie et en ses autres pais. Et gueres ne vesquit monseigneur de Bourgoingne après, et mourut à Notre Dame de Hal en Brebant[1], et fut apporté son corps es Chartreux de Dijon; et n'y avoit aucun de ses parens à conduire le corps que monseigneur de Richemont qui portoit manteau et le noir ainsi qu'il devoit; et estoit si petit qu'il le failloit mener par la bride[2], et le conduisit jusques à Dijon[3]. Et puis ne fut point nitif, le duc de Bourgogne s'étant précisément trouvé à Paris aux diverses dates indiquées; il est toutefois probable qu'il s'agit du mariage définitif, puisque « gueres ne vesquit monseigneur de Bourgoingne après ». (D. Lobineau, II, 590-593, 868, 869; Inventaire des titres du duché de Bretagne, par R. de Bourgneuf, aux Archives nat., KK 1101, nos 946 et 989; Itinéraires de Philippe le Hardi..., recueillis par E. Petit, p. 256; D. Morice, Preuves, II, 734; Cosneau, le Connétable de Richemont, p. 6, 7.)

1. Le duc de Bourgogne quitta Paris au commencement de mars 1404; il s'y trouvait encore le 6 et était à Arras le 11 mars, et à Bruxelles le 16 avril; il mourut à Halle le 27 avril suivant. (Itinéraires..., recueillis par E. Petit, p. 337, 338.)

2. Sic dans les mss. C, B. Cette leçon est ainsi amplifiée dans S : « Et estoict sy petit qu'il falloict luy mener tousjours son cheval par la bride. »

3. Jean Sans Peur, accompagnant la dépouille mortelle de son père, quitta Halle le 1er mai, et arriva le 15 à Dijon; le lendemain eut lieu l'inhumation aux Chartreux. Les restes de Philippe le Hardi sont aujourd'hui dans l'église Saint-Bénigne de Dijon, ainsi que le prouve l'inscription suivante placée dans la dernière travée du bas-côté sud, à droite de la porte d'entrée principale : « Dans le caveau de cette chapelle sont déposés les restes mortels de Philippe le Hardi, duc de Bourgogne, transférés de la Chartreuse de Dijon à l'église Saint-Bénigne en 1791, et reconnus par la Commission départementale des antiquités en 1841. » (Voir en outre : D. Plancher, Hist. de Bourgogne, III, 201-203; Gachard, Archives de Dijon, p. 98; Itinéraires..., recueillis... par E. Petit, p. 341, 342.)

recueilli du duc Jehan de Bourgoingne, ains s'en revint à Paris[1]; puis monseigneur de Berry le retint et lui bailla bonne ordennance en sa maison et commencza à avoir estat.

Chapitre V.

D'une execucion que monseigneur de Richemont fist.

Puis vint en Bretaigne et l'envoya le duc faire une execucion d'une rebellion qui avoit esté faicte à l'encontre des gens du duc à Saint Brieuc des Vaulx.

Chapitre VI.

Comment mon dit seigneur se mist en armes[2].

Bientost après commencza la guerre pour la mort de monseigneur d'Orleans, et se mist sus en armes pour servir monseigneur d'Orleans et monseigneur de Berry. Et mena mon dit seigneur de Richemont à Vannes[3] moult belle compaignie de Bretons, et bien acompaigné de notables chevaliers et escuiers, entre lesquelz estoit monseigneur de Combour et pluseurs chevaliers et escuiers, lesquelz monseigneur de Berry avoit envoyé loger au pont de Saint Clou, et pluseurs

1. Th. Godefroy a supprimé la phrase relative à l'abandon de Richemont par Jean Sans Peur, phrase qui se trouve dans tous les mss.

2. Ce chapitre et les deux suivants manquent dans B, fol. 1 v°, et dans C, fol. 44; ce dernier fol. a été laissé en blanc.

autres Françoys de la compaignie de monseigneur d'Orleans, de monseigneur de Berry et d'Alenczon, d'Armignac et d'Albret qui estoient logez à Saint Denis. Et monseigneur de Bourgoingne estoit logié à Paris avecques sa puissance; et y estoit le conte de Varouic avecques luy. Et de nuyt vindrent par devers Le Vigneul frapper sur noz gens, et peu en eschappa; et fut monseigneur de Combour prisonnier et pluseurs mors et prins, dont les ditz seigneurs furent moult desplaisans et non sans cause.

Chapitre VII.

Comment monseigneur de Richemont vint requerir au duc secours.

Puis se departit ceste armée sans faire aultre chose. Et bientost après firent une autre armée en l'an mil CCCC XIII ans. Et fut que le Roy et monseigneur de Bourgoingne misdrent le siege à Bourges[1]; et quant monseigneur de Richemont sceut ce, il s'en vint en Bretaigne requerir au duc secours pour monseigneur de Berry pour lever le dit siege. Et eurent grandes parolles ensemble luy et monseigneur Gilles son frere; car mon dit seigneur de Richemont tenoit pour messeigneurs d'Orleans et de Berri, à qui il estoit, et monseigneur Gilles son frere, qui estoit à monseigneur de Guyenne, tenoit pour monseigneur de Bourgoingne.

1. Le siège de Bourges par Charles VI et Jean Sans Peur est de 1412, et non de 1413, comme le dit Gruel; l'armée royale arriva devant la ville le 11 juin et y resta jusqu'au 15 juillet suivant, date de la conclusion de la paix.

Neantmoins mon dit seigneur de Richemont eut et obtint ce qu'il demanda, et lui fut baillé une tres belle et grande compaignie, qui de leur bon vouloir et pour l'amour de luy s'en alerent quant et lui jusques au nombre de XVI cens chevaliers et escuiers. Et y avoit de tres notables gens pour le conduire[1], comme le viconte de la Belliere, missire Armel de Chasteaugiron[2], missire Eustache de la Houssoye[3], missire Alain de Beaumont, missire Guillaume de la Forest, anciens chevaliers qui moult avoient veu de la guerre.

CHAPITRE VIII.

Comment monseigneur de Richemont print pluseurs places.

Et à la priere de son beau frere d'Alençon entra et print son chemin par le Maine et Normandie, pour

1. Sic dans S, fol. 24 v°; Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 4; Buchon, p. 356[1]) fait un contresens en lisant « pour les conduire »; car Gruel a voulu dire que Richemont avait, pour lui enseigner la stratégie du temps, de bons maîtres, « anciens chevaliers qui moult avoient veu de la guerre »; la suite de la phrase le prouve avec évidence, et c'est bien ce qu'avait compris Le Baud (Pièce just. I), qui explique très clairement la pensée du chroniqueur.

2. Armel de Châteaugiron, maréchal de Bretagne, épousa Anne de Rougé et mourut en 1414, laissant ses enfants sous la tutelle de son frère Alain. (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 781; P. Levot, Biographie bretonne, I, 334; Bibl. nat., Collection de Bretagne, ms. fr. 22322, p. 479.)

3. Sur Eustache de la Houssaye, voir Levot, Biographie bretonne, II, 113. On peut ajouter aux renseignements fournis par cette notice que Eustache était le père d'Alain de la Houssaye, époux de Marguerite de Montauban (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 22332, fol. 35).

ce que pluseurs places et subgitz du dit d'Alenczon s'estoient rebellés contre luy. Et en passant païs print Sillé le Guillaume[1] et Beaumont[2] et Laigle[3] d'assault, et pluseurs autres places en contre-attendant le duc de Clerance qui venoit au secours de messeigneurs d'Orleans et de Berry, et amenoit bien dix mille combatans. Et quant le Roy et ceulx qui tenoient le siege le sceurent, ilz firent apointement o messeigneurs d'Orleans et de Berry, qui gueres ne dura; et le Roy et mes ditz seigneurs escriprent à monseigneur de Richemont qu'il s'en retournast et que l'apointement estoit fait. Et par ainsi tira devers le Roy et devers les ditz seigneurs.

Chapitre IX.

Comment monseigneur de Guyenne voult avoir monseigneur de Richemont.

Bientost après monseigneur de Guyenne voult avoir mon dit seigneur de Richemont et le print de son oncle de Berry et l'ama fort, et lui donna bonne et grande ordennance en sa maison et eut grant gouvernement avecques luy.

Comment la duchesse Jehanne alla à Paris veoir le Roy Charles son pere[4].

Jehanne, fille du Roy Charles, se partit de Bretaigne bien acompaignée, c'est assavoir : de monseigneur Richart de Bretaigne, qui puis après fut conte d'Estempes et seigneur de Cliczon[1], et d'aultres seigneurs, barons, chevaliers et escuiers, et de dames et damoiselles grant nombre ; et vint à Paris veoir le Roy son pere et la Royne sa mere et monseigneur de Guyenne son frere. Et en petit de temps avant qu'elle fust arrivée à Paris print voulenté à mon dit seigneur de Guyenne d'aler à Bourges en habit dissimulé et voult que monseigneur de Richemont y allast ; et alla en sa compaignie comme serviteur de mon dit seigneur, et ainsi fut fait. Et la cause pour quoy il y alloit estoit pour veoir les bagues et pierreries de monseigneur de Berry. Et en fut mon dit seigneur de Berry averti et escripst à ses gens que son nepveu de Richemont[2]

1. Richard, qui épousa Marguerite d'Orléans, était seigneur de Clisson et de l'Épine-Gaudin depuis le don à lui fait par le duc son frère, le 29 septembre 1420, de ces terres confisquées sur Marguerite de Clisson. Le Dauphin Charles lui donna le comté d'Étampes par lettres du 8 mai 1421, confirmées au mois d'octobre 1425. (Albert Le Grand, Vies des saints de Bretagne, édit. 1637, p. 765 ; D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1043-1046, 1090-1091.)

2. « De Richemont, » sic dans S, fol. 25 r°. D. Godefroy met en marge de son édition (Hist. de Charles VII, p. 743) : « Il semble qu'il faille et au lieu de de. » Buchon (p. 356[2]) adopte la correction proposée par D. Godefroy. Cependant elle n'est pas admissible, d'abord parce que le verbe « alloit » qui suit est au singulier, et ensuite parce que le reste de la phrase indique qu'il ne s'agit que d'une seule personne ; elle n'est pas non plus nécessaire, car Richemont était aussi arrière-neveu du duc Jean de Berry, par sa mère Jeanne de Navarre, fille de Charles le Mauvais et de Jeanne de France, fille elle-même de Jean le Bon. (Anselme, Histoire généalogique de la maison de France, I, 452.) Le Dauphin Louis allait dans le Berry pour prendre possession du château de Mehun-sur-Yèvre, qu'il avait reçu en présent du alloit à Bourges, et leur mandoit qu'ilz le receussent et festoiassent comme sa propre personne, et luy monstrassent toutes ses bagues et tout ce qu'il vouldroit veoir, et ainsi le firent. Et fut le duc Jehan bien malcontent de son dit frere de Richemont; quar il cuyda que mon dit seigneur de Guyenne eut prins celuy voyage de paour de veoir la duchesse sa seur; mais le contraire fut verité; car le plus tost que mon dit seigneur peut il ramena mon dit seigneur de Guyenne à Paris, et là trouva la duchesse. Et Dieu sache comme elle fut bien receue et grandement du Roy, de la Royne, de monseigneur de Guyenne et de monseigneur de Berry; et luy fut donné de grans dons du Roy, de la Royne et de monseigneur de Guyenne[1] par le moien de mon dit seigneur de Richemont, et aussi de son oncle de Berry, lequel entre autres choses luy donna le ruby de la caille qui autrefoiz avoit esté de Bretaigne[2].

duc Jean (Monstrelet, III, 53), et Richemont l'accompagna pour voir les magnifiques joyaux de ce dernier, qui, flatté de cette curiosité, lui fit préparer une belle réception dans son château de Bourges.

1. S omet depuis « et lui fut donné ». Tous ces événements sont, non de l'année 1413, comme le dit Gruel, mais de la fin de 1414, époque à laquelle la duchesse de Bretagne vint à Paris. (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 894-895; Pièce just. VIII; Monstrelet, III, 53 et 55.)

2. Sic dans S, fol. 25 v°. Cette fin de phrase est incompréhensible. Le Baud va nous l'expliquer : « Le ruby de la caille, lequel autresfoiz avoit esté au duc de Bretaigne. » (Pièce just. I; cf. Alain Bouchart, Les Grandes Croniques de Bretaigne, édit. 1886, fol. 172 v°, col. 2.) Ce joyau, fort recherché, a souvent changé de mains; plus tard le duc de Bretagne le donna en gage pour 10,000 écus au duc d'Alençon. Il y avait aussi le rubis d'Étampes et les deux frères. (Pièce just. XXVI.)

Chapitre XI.

Comment monseigneur de Richemont fist mettre Saint Malo en la main du duc.

En oultre mon dit seigneur de Richemont pourchassa tant devers monseigneur de Guyenne et devers tout le conseil qu'il fist rendre et mettre en la main du duc la ville de Saint Malo, qui pour lors estoit en la main du Roy. Et s'i estoient mis ceulx de Saint Malo pour ung mescontentement qui fut entre les gens du duc et ceulx de la ville; car le duc estoit encores jeune et enfant, et avoit mis des gens dedans Saint Malo; et y estoient monseigneur de Montauban, le viconte de la Belliere et monseigneur de Chasteaugiron. Puis trouverent maniere d'envoier monseigneur de Montauban devers le duc, et cependant qu'il fut dehors, on leur osta tous leurs batons, qu'ilz n'osoient pas porter ung cousteau, et leur fist on de grans rudesses et ne se povoit on tenir de jouer o leurs femmes et chamberieres, et les appeller vilains. Et en une nuyt bouterent tout dehors, et furent en la main du Roy jusques ad ce que mon dit seigneur les fist rendre au duc, et leur fut tout pardonné. Et y alla le duc Jehan prendre la possession et vindrent au devant de lui tous ceulx de la ville vestuz de blanc et de noir, et tous les petiz enfans avoient penanceaux d'ermines et blancs et noirs, et y eut bien crié Noel, et tout fut aboly; et depuis ont esté bons et loyaulx au duc[1].

Chapitre XII.

Comment la ville de Soixons fut prinse.

L'an mil CCCC XIIII recommença la guerre entre messeigneurs d'Orleans et de Bourgoingne; et à l'occasion de ce le Roy, monseigneur de Guyenne, monseigneur d'Orleans, monseigneur de Berry, monseigneur de Bourbon, monseigneur de Richemont, monseigneur le connestable d'Albret et monseigneur d'Armignac, et pluseurs autres seigneurs et capitaines alerent mettre le siege à Soixons, qui tenoit pour monseigneur de Bourgoingne. Et là tenoit ung capitaine nommé Enguerrant de Bournonville; et fut la dicte place de Soixons prinse d'assault, et eut le dit capitaine la teste trenchée pour ce que le bastard de Bourbon y avoit esté tué. Puis après tira l'armée plus avant et vindrent mettre le siege à Arras; et illecq avoit une belle compaignie. Et avoient dedans la ville pour chief missire Jehan de Lucembourc; et grande-mais beaucoup plus tard, au mois d'octobre 1415; le Roi espérait ainsi, à la veille de la bataille d'Azincourt, s'assurer l'appui du duc de Bretagne. Gruel affirme sans preuves que l'intervention de Richemont amena cette décision; or, nous savons que la duchesse Jeanne avait, en janvier 1415, demandé au Roi son père la restitution de cette place et de plusieurs autres domaines. Charles VI agissait donc ainsi par intérêt d'abord, et pour être agréable à sa fille; on ne trouve aucunes traces du rôle joué ici par Richemont. (Lettres de reddition aux Archives de la Loire-Inférieure, E 160, cass. 63, publiées dans les Preuves de D. Morice, II, 924; Pièce just. I; Alain Bouchart, Les Grandes Croniques de Bretaigne, édit. 1886, fol. 173 r°, col. 1; Pièce just. VIII.)

ment se gouvernerent, et y eut de belles et grandes escarmouches; et bientost après se trouva l'apointement et se leva le siege.

CHAPITRE XIII.

Comment monseigneur laissa le siege de Partenay et alla devers le Roy.

L'an mil CCCC XV monseigneur de Richemont mist le siege à Partenay pour ce que monseigneur de Partenay tenoit le parti de monseigneur de Bourgoingne; et paravant ce il avoit prins Voulvent[1] et Mairevent[2], Segondigny[3] et Chasteaulaillon[4]. Et durant qu'il estoit devant la dicte ville de Partenay lui vindrent des nouvelles et lui escripvoit le Roy et monseigneur de Guyenne qu'il tirast devers eulx, toutes choses cessées, et que le Roy Henry d'Angleterre tenoit le siege à Herfleu[5] et que gueres ne povoit tenir. Et pour aller

Et du païs de Bretaigne avoit bien v^c^ chevaliers et escuiers, entre lesquelz estoient le sire de Combour, missire Bertrand de Montauban, missire Jehan de Coetquen, missire Geffroy de Malestroit, missire Guillaume Le Veer et missire Olivier de la Fueillée, missire Ydouart de Rohan et le seigneur du Busson qui portoit sa banniere, et pluseurs autres chevaliers et escuiers. Et tira mon dit seigneur de Richemont sur la riviere de Somme[1] pour joindre avecques les seigneurs, lesquelz faisoient leur assemblée pour combatre les Angloys; entre lesquelz estoient monseigneur d'Orleans, monseigneur de Bourbon, monseigneur d'Alenczon, monseigneur le connestable

Le duc de Guyenne quitta Paris le 1er septembre pour marcher contre les Anglais. (Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, édit. Tuetey, p. 61.) Le 10 octobre, Richemont fit payer quinze jours de solde aux gens d'armes qu'il laissait devant Parthenay. (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 921.) Il se rendit d'abord à Abbeville, puis à Azincourt, en passant par Corbie, Péronne et Bapaume. (Monstrelet, III, 96-97.)

Chapitre XIV.

Comment monseigneur de Richemont fut prins [à] Agincourt.

L'an mil CCCC XV, le XXVe jour d'octobre se trouverent tous ensemble et dès le vespre logerent près des Angloys en plain champ à moins de demye lieue de l'ost du Roy d'Angleterre. Et le vendredi[1], au point du jour, commencerent à mettre leurs gens en bataille, et environ l'eure de tierce au plus tart assemblerent les batailles en une place nommée Agincourt, qui trop estoit estroicte pour combatre tant de gens; et y avoit grant nombre de gens à cheval de notre parti, tant Lombars que Gascons, qui devoient ferir sur les esles des Angloys; et quant ils sentirent le trait venir si espessement ilz se misdrent en fuyte et vindre[nt] rompre la bataille de noz gens, en telle maniere que a grant peine se peurent jamais rassembler que les Angloys ne fussent tousjours près d'eulx. Et incontinent assemblerent les batailles et y eut fait de grandes armes et bien combatues; et fut le duc de Clerance, frere du Roy d'Angleterre, abatu de coup de hache, et le Roy son frere vint mettre le pié par sur lui de paour qu'il fust tué, et eut ung tel coup sur sa coronne qu'il fut abatu sur le genoul; et deux autres qui estoient habillez comme le Roy proprement furent tuez, et l'oncle du Roy, le duc d'Esextre, fut tué et moult d'autres. Toutesfoiz assés tost après en peu d'heure, ainsi comme Dieu qui est maistre des batailles voult, furent noz gens desconfitz, et mors, et prins, et en fuyte, lesquelz estoient bien dix mille hommes d'armes, et le Roy d'Angleterre avoit bien de XI à XII mille combatans. Et là furent prins monseigneur d'Orleans, monseigneur de Bourbon, monseigneur de Richemont, qui fut tiré de desoubs les mors et ung peu blecié, et fut congneu à sa cote d'armes, et si estoit elle toute sanglante, et furent tuez deux ou troys sur luy. Puis fut mené au Roy d'Angleterre qui en fut plus joyeux que de nulz des autres. Aussi furent prins monseigneur d'Eu, monseigneur de Vandosme, et pluseurs aultres seigneurs et capitaines. Et y eut de mors à celle journée, c'est assavoir : monseigneur d'Alenczon, monseigneur de Brebant, monseigneur de Nevers, monseigneur le connestable d'Albret, Jehan, monseigneur de Bar; et soubs la banniere monseigneur de Richemont et de sa compaignie moururent monseigneur de Combour, missire Bertrand de Montauban, missire Jehan de Coetquen, missire Geoffroy de Malestroit, monseigneur de Chasteaugiron[1], missire Guillaume de la Forest, missire Guillaume Le Véer et pluseurs autres; et de prisonniers missire Ydouart de Rohan, missire Olivier de la Fueillée, missire Jehan Giffart et le seigneur du Busson.

1. Le combat eut lieu le vendredi 25 octobre; par conséquent c'est la veille ou le 24 octobre, et non le 25, comme le dit Gruel, que les troupes se trouvèrent en présence à Azincourt.

Chapitre XV.

Comment monseigneur de Richemont fut laissé à garder es Angloys.

Puis s'en retourna le Roy d'Angleterre loger à Maisonselles, dont estoit parti au matin. Et le landemain se partit le Roy d'Angleterre et s'en alla à Calays, et enmena ses prisonniers, et de là s'en alla en Angleterre. Et ne demoura o monseigneur de Richemont sinon ung varlet de chambre nommé Jennin Catuit.

Chapitre XVI.

Comment la Royne sa mere eut congié du Roy pour le veoir.

Assés tost après, quant ilz furent à Londres, la Royne, mere du dit conte de Richemont, demanda congié au dit Roy d'Angleterre de veoir son filx, qui estoit prisonnier, et le Roy le lui acorda. Et les gardes du dit seigneur l'amenerent devers la Royne sa mere, laquelle, quant elle sceut sa venue, elle mist une de ses dames en sa place, qui bien scavoit parler et le recevoir, et se mist ou ranc de ses autres dames et en mist deux devant elle. Et quant le dit seigneur de Richemont arriva il cuida de la dame que ce fust sa mere et la salua et fist reverence, et la dame l'entretint une piece, puis lui dist qu'il allast baiser les autres dames. Et quant il fut endroit la Royne, le cuer luy tendrea, et elle lui dist : « Mauveis filx m'avés vous descongneue, » et tous deux se prindrent à plourer, puis firent grant chiere. Et lui donna la Royne sa dicte mere millé nobles qu'il departit aux prisonniers ses compaignons et à ses gardes, et aussi luy donna des chemises et habillemens; et n'osa depuis parler à elle ne la visiter comme il eut voulu.

Chapitre XVII.

Comment monseigneur de Richemont s'en vint d'Angleterre en Normandie.

Le dit seigneur de Richemont fut prisonnier en Angleterre depuis la dicte journée d'Agincourt jusques à l'an [mil] CCCC et XX que le duc Jehan son frere fut prins du conte de Paintevre, et son frere Richart, seigneur d'Estempes, et le mareschal de Bretaigne, nommé Bertrand de Dinan, et pluseurs autres, par trahison[1]. Et puis la duchesse, les barons, chevaliers, escuiers et tous les Estaz de Bretaigne se adviserent de envoyer devers le Roy d'Angleterre lui requerir qu'il luy pleust leur prester monseigneur de Richemont pour estre leur chief. Et se obligerent tous les ditz Estaz de le rendre au dit Roy d'Angleterre mort ou vif ou une grant somme d'argent. Et de par la duchesse, prelaz et barons y furent envoyés monseigneur le chancelier, nommé de Malestroit, et monseigneur de Montauban, lesquelz furent devers le dit Roy durant le siege de Melun[1]. Et là fist venir le Roy d'Escosse et le dit seigneur de Richemont; et monseigneur de Montauban[2] luy bailla Raoul Gruel pour trencher devant luy, et puis lui bailla Robert Rouxel et Guervasic qui, pour lors, demouroit o monseigneur

1. La duchesse Jeanne agit dans cette circonstance avec la plus grande activité. Le 16 février, elle convoquait, sur l'avis de ses conseillers, les États de Bretagne pour le 23 suivant (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 998-1001), et en même temps faisait demander au Dauphin s'il approuvait la prise du duc de Bretagne. Le 13 avril, Richemont adressait au Dauphin la même demande; en même temps il écrivait au Roi d'Angleterre pour obtenir sa mise en liberté provisoire. Poursuivant le même but, les seigneurs bretons donnaient, le 15 juin, pleins pouvoirs au chancelier Jean de Malestroit, au sire de Montauban et à un troisième personnage que Gruel omet de citer, Raoul Le Sage, chevalier de Saint-Pierre. Le sire de Montauban, accompagné de maître Jean Le Brun, secrétaire du duc de Bretagne, devait aller près de Richemont, tandis que Jean de Malestroit et Raoul Le Sage se rendraient près du Roi d'Angleterre qui guerroyait alors dans l'Ile-de-France; le sire de Montauban, un instant malade, ne put passer le détroit et se joignit à ces derniers. Ces trois ambassadeurs se trouvaient le 9 juillet à Corbeil, ignorant encore que le duc de Bretagne avait été mis en liberté le 5 de ce mois. (Lettres de Richemont, des 12 et 13 avril, dans D. Cosneau (le Connétable de Richemont, p. 469) le disent par erreur. (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1033; Du Paz, Hist. généalogique, 1620, p. 461, 462; Archives nat., K 60, n° 16.)

le chancelier. Et tant que les ditz embassadeurs estoient devers le Roy d'Angleterre, le duc Jehan fut rendu devant Chantoceaux[1] aux Bretons qui y tenoient le siege, et en fut, comme l'en disoit, le Roy d'Angleterre bien marri. Toutesfois pourchasserent les ditz embassadeurs à toute leur puissance en telle maniere que le Roy d'Angleterre fut content que le dit conte de Richemont demourast en Normandie sur sa foy, en la garde du conte de Sonfort[2], et promist et jura ne partir point de Normandie sans congié du Roy d'Angleterre[3]. Et l'amena le dit conte à Pontorson et y vindrent beaucoup de gens de Bretaigne pour le veoir; et entre les autres y furent monseigneur de Montauban et monseigneur de Combour, et pluseurs autres tant qu'ilz estoient plus fors que les Angloys. Et lui fut demandé se il vouloit que on l'emmenast par force; mais il ne voult et ne l'eust pour riens fait. Le conte de Sonfort l'avoit mené jouer aux champs et tirer de l'arc.

CHAPITRE XVIII.

Comment le duc Jehan vint veoir monseigneur à Pontorson.

Puis bientost après le duc Jehan, qui fort estoit desirant de veoir le dit conte de Richemont, son frere, le vint veoir jusques sur le pont de Pontorson pour ce que mon dit seigneur de Richemont n'osoit passer en Bretaigne, et estoit le duc bien acompaigné, et en oultre avoit deux cens lances de sa garde; et Dieu sceit s'ilz s'entrefirent bonne chiere et plourerent tous deux bien fort. Puis s'en retourna le dit seigneur de Richemont devers le Roy d'Angleterre, lequel lui fist grant chiere pour ce que bien avoit tenu ce qu'il avoit promis. Et bientost après eut congié de venir veoir le duc Jehan son frere, et l'amena le conte de Sonfort. Et la cause pour quoy il eut congié ce fut pour devoir retarder son frere d'Estempes et les Bretons d'aller servir le Daulphin, qui ja estoit allé à Cosne à l'encontre des Angloys[1]. Et l'an mil CCCC XXI arriva à Vennes mon dit seigneur de Richemont devers le duc son frere, et le mena le conte de Sonfort. Et Dieu sache la chiere qui lui fut faicte de son dit frere et de tout le monde, et fut fort festoyé de toutes gens et entre les autres lieux à Chasteaubrient et à Montauban[1], et en pluseurs aultres lieux et par les bonnes villes et cités de Bretaigne[2], et par tout bien recueilli et festoyé ; quar sur toutes choses desiroient sa delivrance. Et entre aultres fut à Rennes bien festoyé, et bien print garde à la fortificacion de la dicte ville, qui pour lors estoit trop petite pour retirer et loger ung tel peuple comme le peuple renays, et estoient les faulxbourcs plus grans troys foiz que la ville. Et quant mon dit seigneur de Richemont vit cela il pensa de les faire fortifier, ou aultrement, si la guerre venoit ou pais, que tous les ditz faulxbourcs seroient brulez et destruitz, et la ville en dangier. Et incontinent le dist au duc son frere, qui pas bien ne l'entendoit, mais du tout s'en raporta à luy ; aussi le remonstra aux gens de la ville et du païs, qui volentiers obeirent à son commandement, nonobstant qu'il leur estoit impossible croire que si tost ce peut faire comme il se fist ; car incontinent il mercha par où seroit faicte la dicte fortificacion et bailla de ses gens et aultres pour faire la diligence. Et furent mandez les gens du pays et ordenné à chacun tel tasche qu'il devoit avoir. Et en huyt moys furent faitz les plus beaux fossés qu'on peut trouver, puis après fortifiez de palcis et puis de bonnes tours et muraille, comme povés veoir, et n'eut osé l'en entreprendre à l'eure de ce faire, si n'eut esté le bon Artur.

1. Richemont avait déjà donné à Henri V des preuves de son dévouement en lui amenant de Bretagne des hommes d'armes, qu'il renvoya ensuite dans leur pays, munis d'un sauf-conduit du Roi d'Angleterre daté du 29 novembre 1421. (Rymer, IV, IV, 43.) Gruel rappelle ici le voyage fait par Richemont en Bretagne, non en 1421, mais après la prise de Meaux (cf. ci-dessous p. 25, 27 note 1 et 28 note 1), pendant le siège de Cosne par les troupes du Dauphin, qui eut lieu en juillet-août 1422. (Vallet de Viriville, Hist. de Charles VII, I, 328, 329; Beaucourt, I, 53.)

1. Montauban, canton, Ille-et-Vilaine, arrondissement de Montfort.

2. Tout ce qui suit jusqu'au chapitre XIX, c'est-à-dire ce qui a trait particulièrement à la construction des nouvelles fortifications de Rennes, a été omis dans les mss. C, fol. 48 r° ; B, fol. 3 v° ; dans S, fol. 29 v°, il n'y a pas de lacune.

CHAPITRE XIX.

Comment les parolles furent de monseigneur de Richemont et de madame de Guyenne.

Et paravant ce durant que mon dit seigneur estoit prisonnier au siege de Melun[1], et à celuy de Meaux[2], et à Paris, mon dit seigneur se tira devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne; et tant fist que mon dit seigneur de Bourgoingne l'ama moult fort et furent bien acointez et privez l'un de l'autre; aussi les gens de monseigneur de Bourgoingne l'amoient fort. Et bientost après fut touché du mariage de mon dit seigneur de Richemont,

1. Les Cronicques de Normendie font commencer le siège de Melun par le Roi d'Angleterre à « l'entrée de juing » 1420. M. Vallet de Viriville donne la date du 7 juillet; d'autres dates ont encore été proposées. (Cronicques de Normendie, édit. Hellot, p. 61, et p. 224, note 175; Vallet de Viriville, Hist. de Charles VII, I, 226.) La version des Cronicques de Normendie doit être erronée, puisque la ville de Montereau, dont la prise précéda le siège de Melun, ne se rendit que le 1er juillet. (Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, édit. Tuetey, p. 141, note 1.) Le Roi d'Angleterre entra dans Melun le dimanche 17 novembre. (Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, p. 143.)

2. Le siège fut mis devant Meaux par le Roi d'Angleterre le 29 septembre 1421, selon P. Cochon (édit. Vallet de Viriville, p. 442), le jour Saint-Rémi (1er octobre) d'après le Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris (édit. Tuetey, p. 157), le 6 octobre suivant Monstrelet (édit. Douët d'Arcq, IV, 71); cette dernière date est adoptée par MM. Vallet de Viriville (Hist. de Charles VII, I, 297) et de Beaucourt (Hist. de Charles VII, I, 51). Le Marché de Meaux se rendit le 10 mai 1422, d'après Monstrelet (Ibid., p. 93) et P. Cochon (Ibid.), le 5 juin, disent les Cronicques de Normendie (édit. Hellot, p. 68). Il est probable que la ville fut prise d'assaut le 3 mars et que le Marché fut livré le 2 mai (Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, édit. Tuetey, p. 167 et 169, note 1). Gruel dit ailleurs que le Roi d'Angleterre fut neuf mois devant Meaux.

et luy mesmes en parla à monseigneur de Bourgoingne en disant que tousjours les deux maisons de Bourgoingne et de Bretaigne s'entre estoient bien amées et avoient tous temps esté aliez ensemble, et que bien desiroit que encores le fussent plus que jamais. Et dist à monseigneur de Bourgoingne que si c'estoit son plaisir qu'il seroit marié o l'une de ses seurs; dont monseigneur de Bourgoingne respondit qu'il en estoit très joyeux, et qu'il en avoit troys à marier, et que des deux il se faisoit fort de lui bailler à choaisir, mais de madamme de Guyenne, qui avoit esté mariée à monseigneur de Guienne, ne se faisoit pas fort sans le consentement d'elle; mais des autres se faisoit fort, dont l'une estoit promise à monseigneur de Clermont, aisné filx de Bourbon, à la peine de cent mille escuz, mais pour ceste cause ne laisseroient point à le faire. Et monseigneur de Richemont lui dist que si c'estoit son plaisir qu'il vouloit avoir madame de Guienne[1]; et sur ce monseigneur de Bourgoingne respondit qu'il s'i emploieroit si bien que il s'en apparcevroit. Et lors dist mon dit seigneur de Richemont qu'il envoieroit devers mon dit seigneur de Bourgoingne, lequel lui dist qu'il ne lui envoiast nul homme que Raoul Gruel seulement, « et me laissés faire[2]. » Sur ce prindrent

1. Marguerite de Bourgogne, l'aînée des sept sœurs de Philippe le Bon, fille de Jean Sans Peur et de Marguerite de Bavière, naquit avant 1396. Fiancée d'abord à Charles de France, fils aîné de Charles VI, mort avant le mariage, elle épousa, le 31 août 1404, le nouveau Dauphin Louis, duc de Guyenne, qui mourut lui-même le 18 décembre 1415. (D. Plancher, Hist. de Bourgogne, III, 551; Vallet de Viriville, Geste des Nobles, p. 191, note 2.)

2. Les mss. C, fol. 48 v°; B, fol. 4 r° donnent : « Et qu'il luy en laissast faire, » leçon que l'on retrouve dans S, fol. 30 v°.

congié, et le dit Raoul Gruel s'en alla quant et monseigneur de Bourgoingne à Dijon. Et incontinent que le dit seigneur de Bourgoingne fut à Dijon, il parla à madamme de Guyenne et assembla tout son conseil et en parlerent à ma dicte dame de Guyenne. Et elle leur respondit qu'elle ne vouloit point estre mariée à ung prisonnier, mais quant le Roy d'Angleterre le vouldroit quitter que elle feroit ce que ses amys lui conseilleroient. Et sur ce monseigneur de Bourgoingne fist le dit Gruel parler à elle par pluseurs foiz; et y avoit des gens de l'ostel de monseigneur de Bourgoingne qui bien desiroient que le mariage se acomplist. Et sur ce s'en vint le dit Gruel en Bretaigne devers son dit maistre[1] et lui fist son raport, dont il fut bien content.

Chapitre XX.

Comment le Roy Henry d'Angleterre mourut au Boys de Viesaine.

L'an mil CCCC XXI pareillement, en octobre, mourut le Roy Henry d'Angleterre au Boys de Viesaine, près Paris, et en vindrent les nouvelles au dit seigneur

1. Richemont, présent au conseil tenu par le roi d'Angleterre à Paris, le 3 juin 1422, était à Rennes vers le 1er août, ainsi qu'il ressort de l'extrait suivant, d'un manuscrit de la Collection de Bretagne : « En l'an 1422, monseigneur le comte de Richemont et d'Ivry, venant d'Angleterre en la ville de Rennes, le chapitre de Saint-Pierre luy donna de sa grâce et bon plaisir 200 l. t. une fois payées, dont quittance du 1er août au dit an, signée Jamet Lamoureux, thrésorier et receveur général du dit seigneur. » (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 22325, p. 27, et ci-dessous, Pièce just. X.)

de Richemont au Gavre[1]. Et Dieu sceit s'il fut bien joyeux; car ceste foiz il fut quicte, car homme n'avoit plus que lui demander.

Et celluy an mesmes trespassa le Roy Charles sixiesme de ce nom à l'hostel de Sainct Paul à Paris, bientost apprés le trespas du Roy Henry d'Angleterre[2].

Chapitre XXI.

Comment le mariage de monseigneur de Richemont et de madame de Guyenne se fist.

Bientost après en l'an mil CCCC XXII[3] retournerent

1. Le 7 août 1422, Richemont recevait du duc Jean, son frère, la seigneurie du Gavre avec plusieurs autres villes et châtellenies confisquées « pour la fortaiture » de Marguerite de Clisson et de ses enfants. (Vidimus, en date du 15 mars 1437, de l'acte de donation du 7 août 1422, aux Archives de la Loire-Inférieure, E 1; analyse dans l'Inventaire de René de Bourgneuf, aux Archives nat., KK 1101, pièce 267; imprimé dans D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1116-1118.) Richemont employa plus tard la pension qu'il recevait du Roi comme connétable à élever au Gavre un château entouré d'étangs et de fossés, et à fortifier et embellir cette place. (D. Lobineau, Preuves, II, 537.) Le Gavre est une commune de la Loire-Inférieure, arrondissement de Saint-Nazaire, canton de Blain. (Cf. le P. Anselme, Hist. généalogique de la maison de France, I, 459.) — « Au Guavre » dans toutes les éditions, sauf celle de Buchon qui corrige maladroitement par « au Havre » (p. 360, col. 1); cf. mss. S, fol. 31 r°; C, fol. 49 r°, qui donnent la bonne leçon. Le nom manque dans B, fol. 4 r°, et dans l'extrait de Du Chesne. La fausse date de 1421, attribuée à la mort du Roi d'Angleterre, se trouve dans tous les mss., dans l'extrait de Du Chesne et aussi dans la Compilation de Le Baud. (Ms. L, fol. 352 v°.) On sait que cet événement arriva le 31 août 1422.

2. Nous empruntons cette phrase au ms. S, fol. 31 r°, qui donne seul la mention de la mort du Roi de France. Charles VI mourut le 21 octobre 1422.

3. Le ms. B, fol. 4 r°, met ici, par une erreur évidente du embassades devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne, lequel envoya pareillement autres embassades devers le duc et devers le dit seigneur de Richemont, et tant apointerent que journée fut prinse entre les deux ducs de Bretaigne et de Bourgoingne et le dit seigneur de Richemont qu'ilz se rendoient [à] Amyens en Picardie pour concluire le mariage; et s'i rendit le duc de Bethfort[1], dont on se fust bien passé, qui eut peu; mais il convenoit passer par Normandie, qu'il tenoit pour lors. Monseigneur de Richemont amena le duc son frere, malgré la pluspart des Estaz de Bretaigne, au dit lieu d'Amiens; et là fut conclu le mariage de mon dit seigneur de Richemont et de madame de Guyenne[2]. Et de là s'en alla le dit seigneur de Richemont avecques monseigneur de Bourgoingne à Dijon, où estoit la dicte dame à veoir madame sa mere[3], et le duc s'en vint

2. Le 31 décembre 1422, le duc Jean VI prenait la résolution de se rendre à l'assemblée d'Amiens et confiait aux États assemblés la garde de sa famille et de son duché. Cependant il hésita longtemps avant d'entreprendre le voyage, et jugea prudent de se procurer pour lui et les siens un sauf-conduit que le duc de Bourgogne lui délivra le 25 février 1423. (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1125-8; Pièce just. XI.) Les bases du contrat de mariage furent établies le 14 avril 1423 par les ducs de Bourgogne et de Bretagne et le comte de Richemont réunis à Amiens. 1. Avant de quitter Amiens, le duc Jean VI eut soin de se faire payer par le duc de Bedford, régent, les frais de son voyage. (Voir à la Bibl. nat. une quittance délivrée par le duc de Bretagne à P. Sureau, receveur général de Normandie, de 5,300 l. t. à lui données par ordre du duc de Bedford pour les frais de son voyage à Amiens, ms. fr. 20405, pièce 33; cf. Monstrelet, édit. 2. Cette liste de seigneurs se retrouve dans C, fol. 49 v°; B, fol. 4 r°; S, fol. 31 v°, omet « Pierres du Pan; » Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 18; Buchon, p. 360, col. 1) ne cite que le sire de Beaumanoir et Guillaume Giffart.

3. Le contrat de mariage d'Arthur de Bretagne, qualifié duc de Touraine, et de madame de Guyenne fut signé à Dijon le dimanche 3 octobre 1423. Le même jour, le comte de Richemont recevait, à cette occasion, des habitants de Dijon « 4 queues de vin et 6 emines d'avoine ». (Archives de la ville de Dijon, B 151, fol. 14.) Nous publions (Pièce just. XII) le contrat de mariage d'après l'original conservé aux Archives de la Côte-d'Or. Entre autres avantages, Mme de Guyenne recevait une rente de 6,000 francs pour laquelle le duc, son frère, lui accordait, le 23 octobre suivant, les revenus du comté de Tonnerre, des terres et châtellenies de Cruzy-le-Châtel (cant., Yonne, arr. de Tonnerre), de Laignes (cant., Côte-d'Or, arr. de Châtillon-sur-Seine), de Griselles (comm., Côte-d'Or, arr. de Châtillon-sur-Seine, cant. de Laignes), de Montbard (cant., Côte-d'Or, arr. de Semur), de Comment monseigneur de Richemont alla en Flandres.

Puis s'en partit monseigneur de Bourgoingne et s'en

Pouilly-en-Auxois (cant., Côte-d'Or, arr. de Beaune), d'Arnay-le-Duc (cant., ibid.), de Duesme (comm., Côte-d'Or, arr. de Châtillon-sur-Seine, cant. d'Aignay-le-Duc), d'Aignay-le-Duc (cant., ibid.), de Saint-Marc-sur-Seine (comm., ibid., cant. de Baigneux-les-Juifs), de Roussillon (comm., Saône-et-Loire, arr. d'Autun, cant. de Lucenay), de Glennes (peut-être aujourd'hui Reclesne, ibid., cant. de Lucenay). (Pièce just. XVI.) Peu de jours après son mariage, Richemont avait été mis en possession de la châtellenie de Gyé-sur-Seine (comm., Aube, arr. de Bar-sur-Seine, cant. de Mussy), où il établit un receveur le 15 octobre 1423. (Pièce just. XV. Sur la dot de Mme de Guyenne et les difficultés qui en résultèrent, cf. D. Plancher, Hist. de Bourgogne. III, 552.)

1. Le comte et la comtesse de Richemont restèrent à Dijon jusqu'à la fin d'octobre. Le 23 de ce mois, Arthur de Bretagne s'engageait à rendre au duc de Bourgogne, à sa première réquisition et moyennant compensation, la châtellenie de Montbard (Pièce just. XIII), et, le 25, Mme de Guyenne ratifiait cette promesse. (Pièce just. XIV.) Le 1er novembre, le duc de Bourgogne donnait à sa sœur dix queues de vin qu'il lui faisait porter à Montbard « pour la despense de son hostel au dit lieu ». (Pièce just. XVII.) Richemont et Mme de Guyenne passèrent, selon toute vraisemblance, les trois mois qui suivirent à Montbard; Arthur adresse de ce lieu deux mandements à son receveur G. Bonnote, l'un, daté du 25 novembre, l'autre, du 20 décembre. (Pièce just. XV.) Un mois plus tard, le 25 janvier 1424, il fait un court voyage à Mâcon et se retrouve à Montbard le 29. (Pièces just. XV et XVI.)

vint en Flandres, et monseigneur de Richemont quant et luy, et madame de Guienne demoura à Montbar, et mes ditz seigneurs furent une piece en Flandres[1].

CHAPITRE XXIII.

Comment le duc et mon dit seigneur tractoient la paix entre le Roy et monseigneur de Bourgoigne.

L'an mil CCCC XXIII monseigneur de Richemont print congié de monseigneur de Bourgoigne et s'en vint par mer descendre à Saint Malo; car plus ne vouloit se mettre es dangiers des Angloys. Et fist venir monseigneur de Beaumanoir, et beaucoup de ses gens et chevaulx par Normandie qui disoient que mon dit seigneur venoit après eulx. Et bientost après qu'il fut en Bretaigne, le Roy envoya embassades devers le duc et devers luy[2], et y vint monseigneur d'Aumasle[3];

1. En février 1424, Richemont quitte sa résidence de Montbard pour aller à Gyé-sur-Seine et au siège de Montaguillon. (Pièce just. XVI.) Plusieurs de ses mandements sont datés de Gyé, 4 et 5 février, jour où il abandonna cette châtellenie. (Pièces just. XV-XVI.) Il est, le 7 février, à Troyes, et bientôt après à Paris, d'où il part le 23 pour se rendre au conseil tenu à Amiens, au mois de mars, par les ducs de Bedford et de Bourgogne. (Pièce just. XV et Archives nat. X^{1a} 1480, fol. 290 r°, 291 v°.) Le 6 octobre suivant, Richemont est à Nantes, où il désigne les hommes d'armes qui doivent l'accompagner dans son voyage à Angers. (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1147 et suiv.) Mme de Guyenne était encore à Montbard le 30 mars 1425. (Pièce just. XX.)

2. Le 15 juin 1423, l'évêque de Séez et Tanguy du Chastel passaient par Tours, se rendant près du duc. (Archives mun. de Tours, Registres des comptes, XX, f. 65. Voir Beaucourt, Hist. de Charles VII, t. II, p. 71-72.)

puis après y vint le president de Provence, puis après y vindrent la Royne de Cecille et le prevost de Paris, nommé missire Tanguy du Chastel. Et fut conclu par les Estaz de Bretaigne que mon dit seigneur de Richemont yroit devers le Roy. Et incontinent le duc Jehan et mon dit seigneur envoyerent une embassade devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne pour signifier que monseigneur de Richemont yroit devers le Roy, et que c'estoit pour traictier la paix entre le Roy et monseigneur de Bourgoingne. Et y envoierent Jehan Periou[1], Raoul Gruel et Philibert de Vauldré[2], lesquelz trouverent monseigneur de Bourgoingne à Desize le jour qu'il espousoit madame de Nevers[3]. Et quant ilz eurent fait leur charge, ilz s'en

Les copistes des mss. C, B n'ont évidemment pas pu lire; ils transcrivent « du Marne », « de Nasve ». Th. Godefroy met « du Maine » (édit. 1622, p. 19). Il s'agit de Jean VIII d'Harcourt, comte d'Aumale et de Mortain, né le 13 avril 1396. Voir sur ce personnage diverses pièces publiées par M. S. Luce à la suite de la Chronique du Mont-Saint-Michel (I, 96 à 108). Il fut tué peu après à la bataille de Verneuil, le 17 août 1424. (Vallet de Viriville, Hist. de Charles VII, I, 418.)

1. Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 19) ne cite pas ce messager qui est indiqué dans S, fol. 32 r°; B, fol. 4 v°; C, fol. 50 r°.

2. Philibert de Vaudrey, seigneur de Mons, est qualifié, en 1428, « escuier d'escuerie de monseigneur de Bourgogne; » le 16 octobre de cette année, il remplaça Jean de Rie, seigneur de Balançon, comme gardien et bailli des seigneuries composant la dot de Mme de Guyenne, terres que le duc avait reprises en ses mains au mois de février 1425. (Archives de la Côte-d'Or, B 4849, fol. 45 r°, et B 11829, dossier Montbard, dernière pièce. Voir en outre sur ce personnage Monstrelet, V, 96, et Inventaire des Archives de la Côte-d'Or, V, 176, 177, 181, 188-9.)

3. Le copiste du ms. B, fol. 4 v°, passe le mot « Nevers » qu'il n'a sans doute pu lire et met « madame de... d'Artoys ». Il s'agit de Bonne d'Artois, veuve de Philippe, comte de Nevers, tué à Chapitre XXIV.

Comment le Roy receut monseigneur de Richemont à Angiers.

Puis après le Roy vint à Angiers, et là alla le dit seigneur de Richemont bien acompaigné[1], c'est assavoir : de monseigneur de Laval, de monseigneur de Porhoet, de monseigneur de Chasteaubriend, de monseigneur de Montauban, de monseigneur de Malestroit, de monseigneur le viconte de la Bellière, de monseigneur de Beaumanoir[2], de monseigneur de Rostrenen et de pluseurs autres. Et vindrent au devant de mon dit seigneur pluseurs grans seigneurs; et demorerent en ostages le bastard d'Orleans et missire Guillaume d'Albret. En oultre lui furent baillées quatre places en ostages et mis gens de par lui, c'est assavoir : Lizignen, Loches, Chynon et Meun sus Yevre; et le Azincourt et troisième fils de Philippe le Hardi; le duc de Bourgogne épousait donc en secondes noces la veuve de son oncle. (Monstrelet, édit. Douët d'Arcq, IV, 211.)

1. Charles VII était, le 22 septembre 1424, aux Ponts-de-Cé (Maine-et-Loire, arr. d'Angers), où il donnait à Richard de Bretagne, comte d'Étampes, « la traite par la riviere de Loire de 300 pipes de vin. » Il fit son entrée à Angers le 19 octobre 1424; Richemont y arriva le lendemain. (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 20406, fol. 28 r°; Vallet de Viriville, Hist. de Charles VII, I, 429, 430.)

2. Sic dans C, fol. 50 v°; B, fol. 4 v°; on lit dans S, fol. 32 v° : « Beaumont. » Th. Godefroy reproduit la première leçon (éd. 1622, p. 20).

receut le Roy à Angiers en ung jardrin, et lui fist grant chiere et grant recueil.

Chapitre XXV.

Comment monseigneur de Richemont demanda le consentement des seigneurs pour estre connestable.

Bientost après mon dit seigneur de Richemont print le voyage devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne o l'assentement du Roy, et aussi pour avoir celui de monseigneur de Bourgoingne et de[1] Savaye; car pas ne vouloit prendre l'espée sans l'assentement de Bretaigne, de Bourgoingne et de Savaye. Et s'en alla en Bourgoingne, et parla à mon dit seigneur de Bourgoingne, et de là s'en alla à Montluet[2], et y estoint avecques luy de par le duc : monseigneur de Chasteaubriend, monseigneur de Porhoet, admiral de Bretaigne, et maistre Pierre de l'Ospital, president de Bretaigne. Et du consentement des ditz seigneurs s'en retourna mon dit seigneur de Richemont devers le Roy et le trouva à Chynon.

1. Ajouté entre les lignes dans S. Cette partie du texte : « ... o l'assentement du Roy et aussy pour avoir celuy de monseigneur de Bourgoigne et de... » (cf. fol. 32 v°). Ce passage se trouve aussi dans B, fol. 4 v°, et dans C, fol. 50 v°. Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 20; dans Buchon, p. 361[1]) passe une mention qui a son importance : « o l'assentement du Roy. » Il faut remarquer que, dans les mss. « monseigneur de Savoie » ne reçoit aucun titre spécial. Le Baud le qualifie de comte (ms. L, fol. 353 v°), mais c'est par erreur; Amédée VIII avait été créé duc le 19 février 1416 par l'empereur Sigismond (Nouvelle Biographie générale, t. XLIII, p. 412).

Chapitre XXVI.

Comment monseigneur de Richemont fut fait connestable[1].

L'an mil CCCC XXIIII, en mars, fut mon dit seigneur de Richemont connestable de France, et print l'espée en la prée[2] de Chynon, et en fist hommage au Roy, ainsi qu'est de coustume aux connestables. Et trouva le royaume le plus au bas que jamais fut et le laissa le plus entier qu'il fut passé à CCCC ans. Et avant qu'il print l'espée, le Roy lui promist et jura de envoyer hors de son royaume tous ceulx qui avoient esté cause de la mort de monseigneur de Bourgoingne, et consentans de la prinse du duc Jehan de Bretaigne. Et s'en devoient aller missire Tanguy du Chastel à Beaucaire, et le president de Provence en Provence, et Frotier et Guillaume d'Avautgour s'en devoient aussi aller.

Chapitre XXVII.

Comment monseigneur de Clermont et Truignac furent mis hors de l'ostel du Roy.

Mon dit seigneur le connestable avoit laissé devers le Roy l'evesque de Clermont et monseigneur de Truygnac[3], et autres qui tenoient la main pour mon dit seigneur. Et durant qu'il vint devers le duc son frere pour querir gens en Bretaigne pour faire la guerre encontre les Angloys, qui pour lors, après la journée de Vernoil, estoient en grant puissance, et tous fuyoient avant eulx, mon dit seigneur le connestable, en retournant devers le Roy, quant il arriva à Angiers, il trouva l'evesque de Clermont et Truygnac qui avoient esté mis hors de l'ostel du Roy, pour ce qu'ilz amoient le dit seigneur[1]. Et neantmoins ce mon dit seigneur le connestable ne laissa pas à tirer devers le Roy et assembla gens de toutes pars. Et y vindrent monseigneur d'Estempes, son frere, et monseigneur de Porhoet, monseigneur de Beaumanoir, monseigneur de Chasteauneuf, monseigneur de Rostrenen, missire Robert de Montauban et pluseurs autres nobles chevaliers et escuiers du païs de Bretaigne, qui trop long seroit à raconter; et s'assemblerent avecques lui grant nombre de barons de Berri, de Poitou et d'Auvergne, c'est àssavoir : de Berri, monseigneur de Chauvigni, monseigneur de Ligneres, monseigneur de Prie et pluseurs autres; de Poitou, monseigneur de Thouars et tous les gens de monseigneur de Partenay, et monseigneur de Bressuire, monseigneur de la Greve, monseigneur d'Argenton et pluseurs autres; et d'Auvergne, monseigneur de la Tour, monseigneur de Montlaux; et de Rouargue, ceulx de Herpageon et

1. Dans la lettre qu'il écrivit de Bourges aux habitants de Lyon, le 2 juin [1425], le connétable accuse le président de Provence « d'avoir fait faire à mon dit seigneur le Roy mutacion de ses bons et principaux officiers ». (Cf. le texte de cette lettre publié par M. de Beaucourt dans la Revue d'histoire nobiliaire, directeur M. Sandret, 1882, p. 453, et p. 1-4 du tirage à part.)

pluseurs autres, qui bien scavoient que ce que mon dit seigneur faisoit estoit pour le bien du royaume, et toutes les villes tenoient pour mon dit seigneur le connestable. Le Roy tira vers Bourges, et le dit connestable après, et s'en vint droit à Poitiers, et tousjours tiroit le dit connestable de logeis en logeis après le Roy[1].

Chapitre XXVIII.

Comment l'apointement du Roy et de monseigneur le connestable fut fait.

Puis après fut fait l'apointement, et fut dit que ceulx qui s'en devoient aller s'en iroient. Et au regart de missire Tanguy du Chastel, il dist au dit seigneur le connestable que ja [à] Dieu ne pleut que pour luy ne laissast à faire ung si grant bien comme le bien de paix entre le Roy et monseigneur de Bourgoigne; et si aida à mettre dehors ceulx qui s'en devoient aller;

1. Richemont suivait le Roi, mais ne le poursuivait pas. Charles VII avait été vivement affecté de l'appel fait par Richemont aux bonnes villes, auxquelles il demandait aide et secours pour obtenir l'expulsion des principaux conseillers royaux, et il refusait d'admettre le connétable en sa présence. (Hist. de Charles VII, par M. de Beaucourt, II, 95 et 99; Lettres du connétable de Richemont aux habitants de Lyon et de Tours, publiées dans la Revue d'histoire nobiliaire, p. 453 et 456, et p. 1-4 du tirage à part.) Richemont se rendit à Poitiers, près du Roi, le 10 juillet 1425, et fut très bien accueilli, lui et ses amis; c'est au moins ce qu'il affirme dans une lettre écrite aux Lyonnais le 28 du même mois. L'arrivée du connétable fut le signal de la retraite du président Louvet et de ses partisans. (Cf. Lettres du connétable de Richemont aux Lyonnais, du 9 et du 28 juillet et du 3 août, loc. cit.) et fist tuer à ses archiers devant luy ung capitaine, lequel faisoit trop de maulx et ne vouloit obeir. Puis s'en alla le dit du Chastel à Beaucaire, et le president de Provence en Provence, qui bien fut courroucé et mal content de s'en aller, et madame de Joyeuse, sa fille, et la femme du bastard d'Orleans, son autre fille, qui gueres ne vesquit après. Et par ainsi fut tout apaisé et l'apointement fait.

Chapitre XXIX.

Cy parle de Gyac.

Le seigneur de Gyac demoura en gouvernement devers le Roy, et promist de bien faire la besoigne, et n'en fist riens, mais fist tout le contraire.

Chapitre XXX.

Comment madame de Guyenne arriva à Bourges.

L'an mil CCCC XXV, la vigile du Sacre[1], madame de Guyenne arriva à Bourges, et là trouva monseigneur le connestable, et assés tost après vint demourer à Chinon, lequel lui avoit esté baillé pour sa demourance; aussi le Roy lui fist bailler pour son douaire de monseigneur de Guienne : Montargis, Gyen sus Laire et Dun le Ray, avecques Fontenay le Conte[2].

Comment monseigneur le connestable fist venir le duc Jehan devers le Roy à Saumur.

En celuy an ou moys de septembre, monseigneur le connestable se tira devers le Roy à Poictiers pour le faire venir à Saumur; et là apointa que le duc Jehan viendroit devers lui à Saumur; et si ne fut que une nuyt à Poictiers. Et le Roy partit le landemain pour tirer au dit lieu de Saumur; et mon dit seigneur le connestable s'en vint couscher à Chinon, là où madame de Guyenne estoit, et ne fut que une nuyt avecques elle; et tira devers le duc à Angiers. Et le landemain se partit le duc pour aller à Saumur, et venoit du cousté devers Saint Florans pour veoir madame de Guyenne qui y estoit venue; et s'entrefirent si grant chiere que homme ne sçauroit penser; et s'en alla coucher sur les ponts de Saumur. Et si avoit en sa compaignie : monseigneur d'Estempes, monseigneur de Laval, monseigneur de Porhoet, monseigneur de Chasteaubrient, monseigneur de Rieux, monseigneur de Guéméné, monseigneur de Rays, monseigneur de Beaumanoir, monseigneur de Montauban, monseigneur de Combour, le viconte de la Bellière, monseigneur de Malestroit, monseigneur de Porhoet[1], le viconte

CHAPITRE XXXII.

Comment le Roy receut le duc Jehan, et la grant chiere qu'ilz s'entrefirent.

Et le landemain après disner arriva le Roy à Saumur, et si alla le duc au devant près d'une lieue françoyse, acompaigné de très noble compaignie, comme dit est. Et s'entretrouverent aux champs; et le Roy embrassa le duc deux foiz; et si s'entrefirent la plus grant chiere du monde; et le duc conduisit le Roy jusques au chasteau, puis le laissa et s'en alla à son logeis. Et le landemain vint le duc devers le Roy et besoingnerent ensemble de leurs affaires. Puis après le landemain, qui fut le mardi, le duc vint à Saint Florans[1] veoir madame de Guyenne, et l'amena devers le Roy au chasteau de Saumur; et vint au devant monseigneur de Bourbon et pluseurs autres seigneurs et gens du Roy; et Dieu sceit s'il y avoit belle compaignie. Et la Royne de Cecille vint au devant bien avant en la court du chasteau et s'entrefirent grant chiere, et furent longtemps en prière à qui yroit devant. Comment le Roy et le duc vindrent veoir madame de Guienne à Saint Florans.

Puis vindrent le landemain le Roy, le duc et monseigneur de Bourbon à Saint Florans veoir ma dicte dame, et chanterent et dancerent dedans le cloaistre et firent grant chiere, et puis s'en retournerent. Le Roy ala au chasteau de Saumur et le duc s'en vint à son logeis sur les ponts, et furent bien huyt jours à Saumur[1]; et firent et apointerent ensemble ce que bon leur sembla. Puis s'en vint le duc en Bretaigne, et print son congié du Roy; et monseigneur le connestable le conduisit, puis s'en retourna devers le Roy[2], lequel s'en alla en Auvergne et en Bourbonnays[3], et mon dit seigneur quant et luy; et y furent jusques à karesme prenant[4].

CHAPITRE XXXIV.

Comment le siege fut mis à Saint James de Beuvron[1].

L'an que desus mil CCCC XXV fut mandé monseigneur le connestable en Bretaigne devers le duc, pour ce que l'armée du duc estoit toute preste d'entrer en Normandie. Et le plus tost qu'il peut s'en vint et trouva le duc à Rennes, et toute l'armée de Bretaigne sur les marches de Normandie. Et quant il fut devers le duc ilz conclurent de mettre le siege à Saint James de Beuvron, et tout l'ost s'assembla à Entrain[2], et de là alerent mettre le siege au dit lieu de Beuvron, et fut en caresme, et ne dura le dit siege que huyt ou dix jours[3]. Et disoit-on que le chancelier de Bretaigne fist neau (le Connétable de Richemont, p. 116, note) déclare « qu'il n'est pas possible que Richemont soit allé à Montluel à la fin de 1425 ou en janvier 1426, comme le croit M. de Beaucourt ». (Hist. de Charles VII, t. II, p. 372.) Si M. Cosneau avait vu, comme M. de Beaucourt, les Registres des délibérations conservés à Lyon, il n'aurait point mis en doute ce voyage. Voici quelques extraits qui tranchent la question : 1426, 13 janvier : « Ilz ont concluz que, pour avoir plus legièrement grace du Roy nostre sire de l'aide derrenierement octroyée à Poictiers, et affin que Mgr le connestable en ait la ville plus pour recommandée, lequel vient pour acomplir son voyage ... » — 16 janvier : « Ilz ont concluz que, attendu que ceulx du plat pays ont acordé de paier à Mgr le connestable, estant de present à Monluel pour la paix ... » — Le 12 février 1426, on court après le connétable, qui vient de partir de Lyon, et on le rejoint à Rochefort. 2. Antrain, cant., Ille-et-Vilaine, arr. de Fougères.

3. L'armée bretonne arriva sans doute devant Saint-James de Beuvron dans les derniers jours de février 1426; l'assaut fut retarder le paiement des gens d'armes et aultres gens de guerre; et à l'occasion de ce ilz n'avoyent de quoy paier les marchans qui leur amenoient les vivres; et pour ce fut conclut l'assault par grande deliberacion. Et quant ceulx qui estoient au dit assault devers l'estangc montoient pour combatre main à main à ceulx de dedans, ilz virent une grande compaignie de gens d'armes qu'on avoit ordennez à faire les courses durant le dit assault; car le conte de Sonfort et le sire de Scalles[1] estoient à Avranches; ainsi cuiderent noz ditz gens que ce fussent les ditz Angloys, et se commencerent à retirer. Et alors les ditz Angloys saillirent sur eulx et en tuerent et firent noyer grant nombre en l'estangc du dit lieu; et ceulx qui estoient de l'austre cousté n'en scavoient riens. Et toutesfois se convint-il retirer, et y eut grande multitude de gens mors et prins; entre lesquelz furent mors : monseigneur de Mollac, monseigneur de Coitivi, missire Alain de la Mote et Guillaume de la Mote son filx, et Guillaume Eder et pluseurs aultres. Et à ceste cause se retirerent tous ceulx du siege au siege de monseigneur donné le 6 mars (cf. un extrait du Nécrologe des Cordeliers de Quimper dans les Preuves de D. Morice, II, 1188), et le siège levé dans la nuit du 6 au 7, selon notre chronique. (Cf. Chronique de Cousinot de Montreuil, édit. Vallet de Viriville, p. 240.)

1. Thomas de Scales, qualifié capitaine de Pontorson en 1429 (Bibl. nat., Quittances, ms. fr. 26051, pièce 1083), plaidait, en 1437 et 1438, devant le Parlement de Paris contre « messire Galobre, seigneur de Panessac ». (Archives nat., X^{1a} 1482, fol. 60 r°.) Sénéchal de Normandie, il défendit, en 1440, la forteresse de Gavray, tandis que le Roi d'Angleterre assiégeait Harfleur. (Bibl. nat., ms. Fontanieu 118, au 10 avril 1441.) Il mourut en 1460. (Cf. en outre Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, p. 201, note 5 de M. Tuetey, d'après Wavrin, édit. Dupont, II, 230.)

le connestable; et s'i retirerent les gens de monseigneur de Porhoet, qui lors estoit admiral de Bretaigne, et tous les autres. Et ceste nuyt commencerent à desloger pluseurs sans congié, les ungs bleciez et les autres pour les conduire. Et bientost après misdrent le feu es logeis du dit siege de Beuvron; et tantost l'en vint dire à monseigneur le connestable et à monseigneur d'Estempes son frere qu'ilz seroient bruslés s'ilz ne se sauvoient, et que tout le monde s'en alloit. Et ainsi monterent les ditz seigneurs sur petis chevaulx pour cuider faire demourer ceulx qui s'en vouloient aler; mais homme ne vouloit arrester; et tant que mon dit seigneur le connestable en la presse fut abatu, cheval et tout, et passoient par desus lui qui ne l'eut secouru; et convint malgré lui s'en venir quant et les autres, ou demourer bien seul[1]. Et pensez que c'est grant chose quant ung desarroy se met en ung grant ost et de nuyt. Et croyés que ce lui fut ung des plus grans desplaisirs que mon dit seigneur eut en sa vie; car c'estoit grant pitié de le veoir et tousjours vouloit recouvrer qui l'eut voulu croire. Et furent, environ le point du jour, à Entrain; et de là tirerent devers le duc à Rennes, et misdrent frontieres en Bretaigne. Puis se departirent; et tout le monde disoit communement que ce avoit esté le chancelier qui avoit eu argent des Angloys pour lever le siege. Et pensés que monseigneur le connestable ne l'oblia mye.

CHAPITRE XXXV.

Comment monseigneur le connestable fist prendre le chancellier de Bretaigne.

Car en retournant devers le Roy, les feries de Pasques, il fist prendre devant luy le dit chancelier à la Tousche près Nantes, et mener à Chinon[1] pour soy descharger de ce que on le chargeoit; car il n'en povoit mais. Et fut le dit chancelier ung peu de temps au dit lieu de Chinon; puis fut traictée sa delivrance, et fut tenu bien aise et promist de faire merveilles devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne et ailleurs, et devoit du tout faire la paix; mais il n'en fist riens, car elle n'estoit pas si aisée à faire. Et s'en ala du consentement du Roy devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne, et puis en Savaye, et s'en revint par Normandie en Bretaigne où il se demoura.

CHAPITRE XXXVI.

Comment monseigneur le connestable fist prendre monseigneur de Gyac et en fist justice.

L'an mil CCCCXXVI mon dit seigneur le connestable tira devers le Roy[2] et trouva monseigneur de Gyac

1. Le 10 mai 1426, Richemont est à Chinon, d'où il adresse une lettre aux habitants de Lyon, pour les inviter à percevoir au plus tôt les sommes qui lui ont été promises. (Lettre publiée dans la Revue d'histoire nobiliaire, p. 460; tirage à part, p. 8.)

2. Richemont, depuis la défaite de Saint-James de Beuvron, qui bien lui avoit haulcé son chevetz devers le Roy, et ne vouloit point que nulle paix se fist entre le Roy et monseigneur de Bourgoingne, de paour de perdre son gouvernement, et ne vouloit que nulz des seigneurs approchassent devers le Roy, exceptés monseigneur de Clermont à qui il fist donner la duché d'Auvergne et monseigneur de Fouyers[1] à qui il fist donner la conté de Bigorre, lequel avoit admené troys mille Biernoys[2], qui devoient faire merveilles; et si firent-ilz sur le pouvre peuple; car oncques ne passerent la Croix Verte à Saumur.

Et pour revenir au fait de Gyac qui tant avoit fait de maulx, entre les autres avoit fait mourir sa femme, laquelle estoit bonne et preude, comme l'on disoit; il la fist empoisonner, et quant elle eut beu les poisons, ne paraît guère avoir quitté l'Anjou et le pays voisin. il était à Angers le 4 juillet 1426. (Bibl. nat., Quittances, ms. fr. 26049, pièce 597.) A cette époque il entretint avec les habitants de Lyon une correspondance remplie de précieux détails, et qui donne une idée de l'activité que déployait le connétable pour se procurer l'argent nécessaire à la solde des troupes royales. Ces lettres contenant toutes des demandes de subsides sont datées des Ponts-de-Cé, 13 septembre, de Saumur, 6 octobre, d'Angers, 15 octobre, et de Moulins, 20 janvier; cette dernière est de 1427 et les autres de l'année précédente. (Lettres publiées par M. de Beaucourt dans la Revue d'histoire nobiliaire, p. 460-463.) Avant de se rendre à Moulins, il séjourna quelque temps avec le Roi à Montluçon, où il conclut, le 6 janvier 1427, un traité d'alliance avec Jean Ier, comte de Foix. (Archives des Basses-Pyrénées, E 434; document cité par M. L. Flourac dans son ouvrage sur Jean Ier, comte de Foix, p. 111.)

1. Ce mot avait d'abord été orthographié ainsi dans le ms. S, fol. 37 v°; le correcteur a mis « Foix ».

2. Béarnais.

il la fist monter derriere lui à cheval, et chevaucha XV lieues en celui estat; puis mourut la dicte dame incontinent. Et le dit de Gyac faisoit ce pour avoir madame de Tonnairre, qui après la mort du dit Gyac fut dame de la Trimouille.

En après monseigneur le connestable vint devers le Roy à Yssoulzdun, et par le conseil de la Royne de Cecille et de tous les seigneurs ou la pluspart, reservés Bourbon et Fouyers, il print le dit Gyac en la ville d'Issoulzdun, et se fist apporter les clefz, et dist qu'il vouloit aller à Nostre Dame de Bour de Dieux[1] dès le point du jour. Et comme son prestre vouloit commencer la messe tout reveistu, on lui vint dire qu'il estoit temps; et laissa le pretre tout seul, et s'en vint luy et ses gens de sa maison et ses archiers, là où estoit le dit Gyac couchié et monterent contre mont, si rompirent l'uys. Et le dit Gyac demanda que c'estoit; l'on dist que c'estoit monseigneur le connestable; et lors il dist qu'il estoit mort. Et madame sa femme se leva toute nue; mais ce fut pour sauver la vaisselle. Et incontinent on fist monter le dit Gyac sur une petite hacquenée; et n'avoit que sa robe de nuyt et ses botes et fut tiré à la porte. Et incontinent le bruit fut devers le Roy; si se leva, et vindrent les gens de sa garde à la porte, et mon dit seigneur le connestable leur dist qu'ilz ne bougeassent, et leur commanda s'en aller et que ce qu'il faisoit estoit pour le bien du Roy[1].

1. C'est par une identification qu'il n'eût pas fallu introduire dans le texte que Th. Godefroy met « Nostre Dame de Bourg de Deolz » (édit. 1622, p. 29). Bourg-Déols, situé à deux kilomètres de Châteauroux (Indre), était le siège d'une abbaye de l'ordre de Saint-Benoît fondée en 907 par Ebbe le Noble, seigneur de Châteauroux. Il y a des copies de titres concernant cette abbaye à la Bibl. nat. (mss. Du Chesne, vol. 70, fol. 391 r°).

Si se rendit à lui à la porte Alain Giron, qui avoit cens lances, et estoit assés près en embusche, et s'en alla conduire Gyac, et aussi missire Robert de Montauban et beaucoup d'autres gens de mon dit seigneur; et fut mené à Dun le Ray[2], qui pour lors estoit en la main de mon dit seigneur. Puis après tira mon dit seigneur le connestable à Bourges et monseigneur de la Trimouille avecques lui. Et incontinent mon dit seigneur fist faire le procès du dit Gyac par son baillif de Dun le Ray, et autres gens de justice. Et confessa tant de maulx que ce fut merveilles; entre lesquelz la mort de sa femme toute grosse et le fruit dedans elle; et oultre confessa qu'il avoit donné au deable l'une de ses mains affin de le faire venir à ses intencions. Et quant il fut jugié, il requeroit pour Dieu qu'on luy coupast la dicte main avant le faire mourir, et offroit à monseigneur le connestable, se il luy plaisoit lui sauver la vie, de lui bailler content cent mille escuz, et lui bailler sa femme, ses enfans et ses places à ostages, de jamais ne aprocher du Roy de xx lieues. Et mon dit seigneur respondit que s'il avoit tout l'argent du monde qu'il ne le laisseroit pas aller, puisqu'il avoit deservi mort; et envoya ung bourreau de Bourges pour l'executer; et le mena Jehan de la Boessiere. Ne demandés pas si le Roy fut bien courroucé; puis après tout le monde estoit embesoingné à faire l'apointement; mais le Roy bien informé du gouvernement et vie du dit Gyac fut très content.

Et entra en gouvernement Le Camus de Beaulieu, qui se gouverna aussi mal comme les autres. Et s'en vindrent le Roy et la Royne, et la Royne de Cecille, et mon dit seigneur le connestable en Touraine.

Chapitre XXXVII.

Comment monseigneur le connestable vint emparer Pontorson.

Pour ce que les Angloys faisoient de grans courses et de grans maulx en Bretaigne, monseigneur le connestable vint emparer Pontorson[1] et fut environ la Saint Michel, et y vint des Françoys et des Escossoys avecques lui. Et y estoient le connestable d'Escosse et missire Jehan Ouschart[2] qui avoient bonne compai-

Puis il a remplacé « Gaultyer Brussac » par « Gaultier de Brusac », la mauvaise leçon « Beaumont » par « Beaumanoir », et « Rotelen » par « Rostelen ». B, fol. 7 vo, donne une variante légère : « Gaultier Stuart de Brusac. » Dans C, fol. 56 ro, « Stuart » a été ajouté après coup en marge. Les chroniques et les actes appellent « Rotelen, Rostelen, Rostrelen, Rostelain, Rostrenan » divers personnages portant le nom d'une localité, qui est aujourd'hui Rostrenen, Côtes-du-Nord, arr. de

Et durant ce vindrent les Angloys ung peu avant soleil couchant, qui estoient en nombre bien huit cens et saillit-on hors aux champs, et se mist-on en bataille oultre le marays devers le Mont Saint Michel; et ne scavoit-on quelle puissance les ditz Angloys avoient. Si fist le connestable d'Escosse descendre tous les gens d'armes et archiers à pié; puis vindrent les ditz Angloys jusques au trait de l'arc, et en y eut deux ou troys qui se vindrent faire tuer en nostre bataille; et y fut fait deux ou troys chevaliers. Et quant les Angloys virent la bataille, ilz s'enfuyrent en grant desarroy, et en fut prins et tué pluseurs; mais par ce que tout estoit à pié ne peurent estre si fort chacez comme ilz eussent esté, qui eut esté à cheval.

Après que la place fut ung peu fortifiée, monseigneur le connestable et le connestable d'Escosse, et toute la pluspart des seigneurs et cappitaines s'en allerent, exceptés ceulx que mon dit seigneur y laissa,

Chapitre XXXVIII.

De la prinse de monseigneur de Rostrelen.

Assés tost après, sur l'yver, monseigneur de Rostrelen entreprint d'aler courir devant Avranches et mena belle compaignie. Et en passant au desoubs du Pont Aubaud[1] se noya ung gentilhomme de sa compaignie, et autres beaucoup s'enlizierent, et convint faire ung peu de demeure illecques. Si saillirent les Angloys sur les coureurs et mon dit seigneur de Rostrelen arriva et incontinent l'en chargea sur les ditz Angloys et furent reboutez jusques bien près de la porte; et en y eut bien xxx que mors que prins. Et comme monseigneur de Rostrelen vouloit descendre à pié arriverent environ cccc Angloys, dont estoit chief le sire de Fuouastre; et si ne scavoient riens les ditz Angloys de la ville de celle venue, et non faisoit mon dit seigneur de Rostrelen. Et vindrent les ditz Angloys tellement frapper au dos de noz gens et en telle maniere qu'il convint desemparer. Et bientost après fut prins mon dit seigneur de Rostrelen, et bien vii^{xx} et dix de ses gens, et n'en y eut que deux mors; et ceste prinse fut ung très mauveis bout pour Pontorson.

Si y vint pour garder la dicte ville monseigneur de Chasteaubriend; puis après y vint monseigneur le mareschal son frere qui firent fortifier la ville le mieulx que faire se povoit; mais on ne sceut tant faire qu'elle valist gueres.

Chapitre XXXIX.

Comment Le Camus de Beaulieu fut tué.

Et mon dit seigneur le connestable estoit allé devers le Roy, et là lui furent remonstrés les termes que tenoit Le Camus de Beaulieu; car il gastoit tout et ne vouloit que home aprochast du Roy, et faisoit pis que Giac. Si en estoit la Royne de Cecille et tous les seigneurs mal contens; pour ce en fist monseigneur le mareschal de Bossac la raison; car il le fist tuer. Et celuy mesmes qui le gouvernoit[1] l'amena au tiltre[2] en ung petit pré prés le chasteau de Poictiers sur la riviere. Et deux compaignons qui estoient au dit mareschal de Bossac lui donnerent sur la teste tant qu'ilz la luy fendirent, et lui couperent une main tant que plus ne bougea. Et s'en alla celui qui l'avoit amené et mena son mulet au chasteau là ou estoit le Roy qui le regardoit; et Dieu sceit s'il y eut beau bruyt, quant[1] il fut aporté sur ung panier.

2. Tiltre, ancienne forme de titre; ce mot signifie ici lieu favorable, disposé d'avance. Littré, Dictionnaire de la langue française, édit. 1869, au mot Titre, n° 17 : Terme de chasse. Lieu, relais où l'on poste les chiens pour courir la bête à propos, quand elle passe; mettre les chiens à bon titre, les bien poster pour courre; cf. aussi le paragraphe suivant. Ce n'est pas la seule circonstance dans laquelle Gruel emploie une expression tirée du vocabulaire cynégétique. Ailleurs il dira « mis ou plus beau gibier », « chacer au desespéré ».

Chapitre XL.

Comment La Trimouille fut mis en lieu du Camus de Beaulieu.

Si vint à l'eure monseigneur de la Trimouille devers le Roy; puis s'en vint le Roy à Chinon, et la Royne avecques luy. Et n'estoit pas le Roy content que La Trimouille demourast avecques luy; et monseigneur le connestable lui dist que c'estoit un homme puissant et qui bien le pourroit servir. Et le Roy lui dist : « Beau cousin, vous le me baillés, mais vous en repentirés; car je le cognois mieulx que vous. » Et sur tant demoura La Trimouille, qui ne fist pas le Roy menteur; car il fist le pis qu'il peut à monseigneur le connestable.

Chapitre XLI.

Comment monseigneur le connestable vint secourir Pontorson.

Et incontinent mon dit seigneur le connestable

1. « Car » dans N, fol. 14 r°, et S, fol. 40 v°. Il faut remplacer « car » par la bonne leçon « quant » donnée par C, fol. 57 v°, et par B, fol. 8 v°. Le membre de phrase « quant il fut aporté sur ung panier » manque dans l'édition de Théodore Godefroy (p. 34; dans Buchon, p. 366).

commencza à assembler gens de toutes pars pour venir secourir Pontorson qui estoit assiegé dès le jeudi gras[1]. Et estoient devant ceulx qui ensuivent : premier le conte de Varvic[2], gouverneur et lieutenant general du Roy d'Angleterre, les sires de Talbot[3] et de Scalles et de Ros[4] et de Ouyrebi[5] et de Fastout[6] et de Fuouastre et de Boursieres, et grant nombre d'autres capitaines et baillifz, et en effect toute leur puissance qui pour lors estoit en Normandie.

Si voult le duc Jehan par l'avertissement d'aucuns de ses gens bailler Pontorson en la main des Angloys avant que le siege y fust mis[7]; mais ceulx qui estoient dedans refuserent le rendre et disoient qu'ilz tendroient pour monseigneur le connestable. Et par la deliberacion de tous ceulx qui estoient dedans fut

2. Richard de Beauchamp, comte de Warwick et d'Aumale, etc., mourut le 30 août 1439. (Cf. les Pièces publiées par M. S. Luce à la suite de la Chronique du Mont-Saint-Michel, I, 257 et 263.)

3. Jean, seigneur de Talbot et de Fournival, fut créé, le 24 août 1434, comte de Clermont en Beauvaisis par le roi d'Angleterre; il fut tué à la bataille de Castillon, le 17 juillet 1453. (Archives nat., JJ 175, pièce 318; cf. une copie à la Bibl. nat., ms. Fontanieu 118, au 24 août 1434.)

4. Le sire de Roos, chevalier anglais, qui mourut noyé dans la Marne près de Saint-Maur, le vendredi 18 août 1430. (Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, édit. Tuetey, p. 256, 257.)

5. Robert de Willoughby, comte de Beaumont-sur-Oise, etc. (Cf. Bibl. nat., ms. Fontanieu 118, au 28 juin 1434.)

6. Jean Fastolf, qualifié, le 19 janvier 1428, « chevalier, grant maistre d'ostel de monseigneur le régent le Royaume de France, cappitaine de Honnefleu. » (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 26050, p. 831.)

7. Ce détail est parfaitement exact et confirmé par un document du 20 décembre 1426, contenant les instructions données par Jean VI à un messager qu'il envoyait alors au duc de Bourgogne. (D. Plancher, Hist. de Bourgogne, IV, Preuves, n° LIII.)

conclut de le tenir tant que faire ce pourroit, excepté missire Jehan Ouschart, qui estoit capitaine des Escossois, qui assembla toute sa compaignie[1]. Et bientost après monseigneur le mareschal de Bretaigne fist crier que tous ceulx qui n'estoient deliberez d'attendre le siege s'en allassent. Et celui Ouschart fist crier que tous ceulx qui vouldroient s'en aller quant et luy fussent bientost prestz; si s'en alla celui jour le dit Ouschart à grande compaignie.

Puis tint le siege fort et ferme et y eut de belles escarmouches tousjours en attendant le secours de Bretaigne et de monseigneur le connestable, qui ne se povoit aider du Roy son maistre ne de moult de meschans gens qui estoient avecques luy; toustesfois amena il beaucoup de gens de bien du païs de France, et cuidoit venir lever le siege. Si vint jusques en Bretaigne devers le duc et son frere, qui estoient à Dinan, et amena avecques lui le connestable d'Escoce, le mareschal de Bossac et pluseurs autres capitaines, cuidant tirer avant; mais le duc ne voult, et ne lui fut conseillé aventurer la noblesse de Bretaigne pour si pou de chose comme Pontorson. Et nonobstant que le duc avoit fait son arriere ban, et Dieu sceit quelle compaignie il avoit en la lande de Vaucouleur, où il fist ses monstres, toutesfoiz ceulx de Pontorson tindrent jusques à l'uytiesme jour de may tant qu'ilz n'eurent plus de vivres, et tousjours cuidoient avoir secours. Et si y eut dès le jeudi absolu[2] ung mauveis eschet;

car ceulx qui venoient pour tollir les vivres à ceulx du siege furent desconfitz à La Gaintre[1]; et y mourut beaucoup de gens de bien, c'est assavoir : monseigneur de la Hunaudaye, monseigneur de Chasteaugiron, le baron de Coulonces, missire Guillaume Levesque, Robin de Quiste et Olivier Tomelin et pluseurs chevaliers et escuiers; et de prins le viconte de la Belliere et pluseurs autres. Puis s'en vindrent ceulx de Pontorson chacun ung baston en sa main.

CHAPITRE XLII.

Comment le siege de Montargis fut lievé.

Bientost après tira mon dit seigneur le connestable devers le Roy, et fut en l'an mil CCCC XXVI[2] et alla par Chinon veoir madame de Guyenne. Puis vindrent les nouvelles que le siege estoit à Montargis et fut le premier jour de juillet. Et convint que mon dit seigneur se partist de Chinon pour assembler tous les

B, fol. 9 r°, donnent une variante : « Le jeudy de la cène, » ce qui désigne toujours le Jeudi Saint, 17 avril 1427; dans le dernier ms. la suite présente une lacune de quelques mots, qui rend la phrase irrégulière et incompréhensible.

1. Sic dans S, fol. 41 v°, et dans C, fol. 58 v°; « à la Gaintre » manque dans B, fol. 9 r°, et dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy (Buchon, p. 367 [1]). Le Baud (L, fol. 357 v°) précise davantage encore le lieu de la défaite : « Es grieves du Mont Saint Michel, en ung lieu appellé Bas Courtilz, près le pont à la Guentre. » La Gueintre est une rivière qui se jette dans la baie du Mont-Saint-Michel entre Huisnes et Courtils. gens d'armes qu'il pourroit trouver, et les fist venir à Gyen sur Laire. Et y vindrent le connestable d'Escoce et le bastard d'Orleans, Poton, et La Hyre, monseigneur de Gaucourt, monseigneur de Guitri, Giraud de la Pailliere, Alain Giron et pluseurs autres ; et ne vouloient tirer en avant sans argent, et convint que mon dit seigneur le connestable leur en baillast. Et pour trouver finances mist une coronne d'or bien garnie de pierrerie en gaige, laquelle on prisoit dix mille escuz et la bailla à ung homme de Bourges nommé Jehan Besson, et print de l'argent desus pour bailler aux gens d'armes pour avitailler Montargis. Et en y alant, cuidant ne faire autre chose que leur porter vivres, à la premiere foiz ne firent riens ; puis y retornerent une autre foiz, et fut ou dit moys de juillet[1] et an que desus, environ medi, que plus ne faisoient de guet les ditz Angloys ne nulle garde, arriverent à Montargis ceulx qui venoient pour avitailler la ville. Si vindrent du costé où estoit logié ung capitaine nommé Henri Biset, et ne trouverent riens à la barriere et ouvrirent la dicte barriere et descendirent. Si trouverent les ditz Angloys qui dormoient et se refrechissoient pour ce qu'ilz avoient veillé toute la nuyt ; et Dieu sceit s'ilz furent bien festoïés. Et en se retirant par sur ung pont qu'ilz avoient fait pour s'entresecourir, le dit pont rompit et se noyerent grant nombre, et les autres furent mors et prins; et en effect furent desconfitz tous ceulx du siege de celuy costé.

1. Cette seconde expédition eut lieu non en juillet, mais au commencement de septembre, et la victoire qui délivra la ville fut remportée le vendredi 5 septembre 1427, et dès le lendemain le connétable s'empressait d'annoncer de Jargeau cette bonne nouvelle aux Lyonnais. Gruel tend visiblement à diminuer l'importance de ce succès, auquel le connétable n'eut directement aucune part, et dont tout le mérite revient au bâtard d'Orléans et à La Hire. (Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, p. 221; Chronique de Monstrelet, p. 271-275; Lettres du connétable de Richemont, dans la Revue d'hist. nobiliaire, p. 472; tirage à part, p. 20.)

Et de l'autre costé se misdrent en bataille le conte de Varvic, le conte de Soufort et le sire de Talbot et grant nombre d'Angloys. Si entrerent noz gens en la ville et se refrecherent avecques ceulx de la dicte ville, qui très bien se y gouvernerent. Puis s'en allerent les ditz Angloys en belle ordennance; et ainsi fut levé le siege de Montargis[1]. Et n'y fut point monseigneur le connestable en personne ne le connestable d'Escoce; car tous les capitaines et gens de grant faczon l'en destournerent et luy dirent que ce n'estoit pas le fait d'ung homme de telle maison et connestable de France d'aler avitailler une place, et que quant il iroit se devroit estre pour attendre la bataille, et il n'avoit pas gens pour ce faire. Et quant le siege fut levé, comme avés ouy, mon dit seigneur le connestable s'en vint à Chinon.

Chapitre XLIII.

Comment La Gravelle fut assiegée des Angloys.

Et bientost après, à la fin de septembre, vint le duc

1. Les Anglais, vivement émus de leur échec, recommencèrent bientôt des préparatifs pour s'emparer de cette place. Le 22 septembre 1427, le régent Bedford, étant alors à Rouen, faisait transporter quatre gros canons de Harfleur sous les murs de Montargis. (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 26050, p. 771.) A la même époque le roi d'Angleterre s'assurait de la neutralité du duc de Bretagne. (Ibid., pièce 769.)

de Betfort es marches du Maine et envoya certain nombre de gens environ Laval qui prindrent Saint Ouen[1], Monsceu[2] et Meslé[3], et assiegerent La Gravelle[4]. Et quant mon dit seigneur le connestable le sceut, il assembla ce qu'il peut de gens, et vint à Angiers pour secourir monseigneur de Laval et ses places. Et y estoient avecques luy missire Guillaume d'Elbret, seigneur d'Orval, et le lieutenant du marechal de Bossac, nommé Bochardon, et l'estandart du dit marechal et tous ses gens, et toutes les basses frontieres. Et le duc de Bethfort s'en alla vers Rouen; ceulx de La Gravelle avoient baillé ostages d'eulx rendre; et mon dit seigneur le connestable envoya missire Guillaume de Vendel et les archiers de son corps et firent tant qu'ilz entrerent dedans la dicte Gravelle; et ainsi elle fut sauvée pour l'eure.

Chapitre XLIV.

Comment monseigneur le connestable gecta une masse en Chasteauleraut.

Puis s'en vint mon dit seigneur à Laval et de là à Craan[5] et à Angiers et de là à Lodun. Puis eut illecques nouvelles de monseigneur de Bourbon et de monseigneur de la Marche qui vouloient parler à luy; et se devoient rendre à Chasteauleraut environ huyt jours avant la Toussains. Et lors monseigneur de la Trimouille le sceut et n'en fut pas contens; car il avoit paour de perdre son gouvernement, et conceut une hayne mortelle contre mes ditz seigneurs. Et incontinent fist defendre de par le Roy que homme ne fust si hardi de les mettre en ville ne chasteau, ne de leur faire ouverture en nulle place que ce fust. Et mes ditz seigneurs se devoient rendre au dit lieu de Chasteauleraut; et y avoit monseigneur le connestable envoyé ses fourriers; et quant il arriva, encores estoient ilz à la porte, et lui fut refusée l'entrée par icelle. Et en signe de desobeissance gecta une masse par desus la barriere, puis s'en alla logier aux champs entre Chasteauleraut et Chauvigné[1], environ deux lieues d'ilecq.

Puis en chevauchant on apparceut monseigneur de Bourbon et monseigneur de la Marche, qui chevauchoient en belle ordennance de bataille, de l'autre costé de la riviere. Si fist mon dit seigneur le connestable sonner ses trompetes affin qu'ilz les ouyssent; et lors s'aprocherent les uns des autres et parlerent ensemble de loign sur la riviere, et apointerent qu'ilz se rendroient le landemain à Chauvigné; et coucherent celle nuyt sur les champs. Et ung gentilhomme entre Chasteauleraut et Chauvigné lui ouvrit sa place et le logea très bien de sa personne. Et le landemain se rendirent à Chavigné et parlerent ensemble, et conclurent de ce qu'ilz avoient à faire. Et incontinent tous ensemble s'en vindrent à Chinon, et avecques eulx le marechal de Bossac et pluseurs autres capitaines et gens de grant faczon, et trouverent madame de Guyenne; si furent bien receuz et firent grant chiere. Et là vindrent des embassades du Roy, c'est assavoir : l'arcevesque de Tours et monseigneur de Gaucourt[1], et autres embassades alerent devers le Roy; mais nul apointement ne s'i peut trouver. Car La Trimoille ne se asseuroit en homme, et se passa ainsi celui yver sans rien faire; puis se departirent les seigneurs et chescun s'en ala à son païs.

Chapitre XLV.

Comment monseigneur le connestable print possession de Partenay.

Monseigneur le connestable s'en alla à Partenay prendre la possession du dit lieu de Partenay; car monseigneur de Partenay estoit mort n'avoit gueres; et avant qu'il morust il avoit fait monseigneur le connestable son heritier[2]. Et par avant avoit fait venir

2. Jean Larchevêque, seigneur de Parthenay, vendit successivement ses baronnies, en s'en réservant l'usufruit, au Roi Charles VI « pour lui et son aisné fils »; les Dauphins, Louis duc de Guyenne et Jean de Viennois, étant morts à un court intervalle, le régent Charles donna, le 19 novembre 1419, procuration à Guillaume Janeau, Guillaume de Lucé, Hugues de Combarel, tous les nobles de la seigneurie et terre de Partenay, et tous les capitaines des places, et leur avoit fait faire le serment à mon dit seigneur le connestable de luy estre bons et loyaulx, et lui obeir comme à leur seigneur naturel, et aussi luy firent comme bons et loyaulx tant qu'il vesquit.

Adam de Cambray et Guillaume Le Tur pour reprendre les négociations avec Jean Larchevêque. Elles eurent plein succès; car, le 21 janvier suivant, ce dernier vendait toutes ses terres « à Charles, fils de France, » moyennant la somme de 100,000 livres tournois, auxquelles il convient d'ajouter 20,000 écus d'or déjà payés au seigneur de Parthenay en exécution du contrat de vente fait en faveur de Louis, duc de Guyenne. Mais Charles VII, n'ayant pu remplir les conditions stipulées dans le contrat de vente du 21 janvier 1420, fut obligé de transporter, le 24 octobre 1425, tous ses droits au connétable de Richemont, suivant le désir formellement exprimé par Jean Larchevêque. (Archives nat., R[1] 193, 13e dossier, cahier 2.) Richemont vint prendre possession de ce riche héritage à la fin de novembre 1427; le 20 de ce mois, par lettres données en son château de Parthenay, il instituait Henri Blandin son receveur général, dans tous ses domaines de Poitou et de Saintonge. (Comptes de Robin Denisot, Pièce just. XIX.) Le 24 octobre 1428, dans un testament fait à Redon, il léguait à son neveu Pierre de Bretagne tous les domaines provenant de la donation de Jean Larchevêque, et ses autres possessions. (Pièce just. XXI.) Cet acte fut confirmé le 8 juillet et le 15 août 1437 par François, comte de Montfort, fils aîné du duc de Bretagne (Pièce just. XXXII), puis annulé le 11 janvier 1442 par le connétable lui-même, qui transporta tout son héritage à son neveu François de Bretagne, à charge pour celui-ci d'exécuter ses dernières volontés. (Archives de la Loire-Inférieure, E 3.) Après la mort de Richemont, ses domaines de Poitou passèrent cependant à Charles, comte du Maine, puis dans la famille des comtes de Dunois, qui les possédait au commencement du XVI[e] s. (Archives nat., P 139, fol. 65 v[c] et fol. 33.) M. Bélisaire Ledain a écrit, en 1858, une Histoire de Parthenay (in-8°) qu'il a depuis intercalée dans sa Gâtine historique et monumentale (1876, in-4°). Voir aussi une note de M. Cosneau dans son Connétable de Richemont, p. 485.

Et cependant madame de Guyenne demoura à Chinon[1]. Et y avoit ung capitaine nommé Guillaume Bellier ouquel monseigneur le connestable se fioit moult fort de bien garder la place de Chinon, dont il fut deceu; car environ le XIIe jour de mars[2] le dit capitaine fist par ses gens ouverture au Roy de la dicte place de Chinon où estoit madamme de Guienne, laquelle eut grant paour d'estre maltraitée; mais le Roy luy tint bons termes, et parla fort à elle devant tout son conseil et luy offrit qu'elle demourast à Chinon ou en quelque autre place de son royaume qu'elle vouldroit par ainsi que monseigneur le connestable son mari ne viendroit point devers elle. Et elle respondit au Roy que jamais ne vouldroit demourer en place où elle ne peust veoir monseigneur son mari. Et si estoient avecques le Roy La Trimouille, missire Guillaume d'Albret, l'arcevesque de Reins, Gaucourt, Herpadame, maistre Robert Le Maczon et pluseurs autres. Et lui fist le Roy faire de grans demonstrances par le chancelier, arcevesque de Reins. Et ma dicte dame lui fist respondre par maistre Jehan de Trousxi[3],

1. Le 10 février, le connétable était lui-même à Chinon, où il enjoignait à son receveur Robin Denisot de remettre tout le produit de sa recette à Jean de Dardenay, maître de la Chambre aux deniers de Mme de Guyenne. (Comptes de Robin Denisot, Pièce just. XIX.)

2. Nous sommes en 1428. Gruel a raison de ne pas être trop affirmatif sur ce point; car M. de Beaucourt a trouvé dans les Registres des délibérations conservés aux Archives mun. de Poitiers la preuve que le Roi était à Chinon dès le 4 mars. (Histoire de Charles VII, II, 161, note 3, et 162.)

3. Jean de Troissy, qualifié dès 1423 bailli de Senlis, était un conseiller intime et dévoué de Richemont, qu'il n'abandonna pas lors de sa disgrâce. Il paraît n'avoir pas été étranger à la rentrée baillif de Senlis, qui parla le mieulx que oncques l'en ouyt en telle necessité. Puis eut ma dicte dame son congié, et s'en vint à Saumur, et de là à Thouars[1]; et vindrent les Escossoys qui tenoient les champs au devant d'elle et la conduirent jusques à Thouars. Puis s'en vint à Partenay devers monseigneur le connestable, et fut grandement receue, et longuement furent ensemble au dit lieu de Partenay. Car mon dit seigneur fut banny de la court du Roy par le moyen de La Trimouille; et fut faicte defense à toutes les villes tenantes le parti du Roy, et es chasteaulx de non faire ouverture à mon dit seigneur, ne à ses gens et serviteurs; et lui fut cassée toute sa pansion. Et eut mon dit seigneur de grandes broulleries et guerres particulieres o les gens de La Trimouille et avecques Jehan de la Roche et o leurs aliés en moult de manieres; et ainsi passa le temps celle année.

2. Notre chroniqueur commet une erreur d'une année; il faut 1428; c'est au mois de juillet de cette année que les seigneurs coalisés entrèrent dans Bourges; la place fut rendue au Roi le 26 du même mois. (Hist. de Charles VII, par Vallet de Viriville, I, 461-463.)

monseigneur de la Marche firent une entreprise par la soustenue de ceulx de la ville de Bourges, et prindrent la dicte ville de Bourges et ne prindrent point la tour, et là tenoit le seigneur de Prie qui fut tué d'un trait. Si firent scavoir mes ditz seigneurs à monseigneur le connestable que le plus tost qu'il pourroit assemblast gens pour tirer vers mes ditz seigneurs; et si ne povoit mon dit seigneur passer; pour ce tira il à Lymoges, cuidant aller par Auvergne. Et cependant le Roy fist diligence et assembla grant nombre de gens et tira à Bourges; et là firent messeigneurs de Bourbon et de la Marche apointement avecques le Roy sans y comprendre monseigneur le connestable. Et assés tost mon dit seigneur le sceut et s'en retourna à Partenay et y sejourna celle saison.

Chapitre XLVII.

Comment monseigneur le connestable mist le siege à Saincte Neomaye.

L'an mil CCCC XXVIII, en yver, mon dit seigneur le connestable assembla des gens et fist mettre le siege à Saincte Neomage près Saint Maixent[1], pour ce que

1. « Près Saint Maixent » manque dans S, fol. 45 r°, C, fol. 62 r°, et B, fol. 10 v°; il est impossible de lire « Neomaye » dans les deux derniers mss. qui présentent une leçon d'une évidente fausseté. L'édition de Th. Godefroy (p. 43; dans Buchon, p. 369[1]) donne la mention omise par S, C et B; elle se trouvait donc dans le ms. du chanoine de Villers comme dans N, fol. 18 r°. Jehan de la Roche[1] et ses gens faisoient de grans maulx et pilleries ou païs de Poictou, et tenoient le parti de La Trimouille[2]. Si y envoya mon dit seigneur le connestable ung chevalier de Poictou, nommé missire Jehan Saulvestre, qui estoit lieutenant pour monseigneur; et y estoit le bastard Chapelle et pluseurs autres capitaines et avoient fait ung champ. Et en effect Jehan de la Roche assembla gens et vint pour refrechir ceulx de la place ; et les gens de mon dit seigneur se retirerent en leur champ, et les gens de Jehan de la Roche entrerent dedans la place. Et le landemain noz gens s'en vindrent en bonne ordennance, et se retirerent es places de monseigneur, et ne bougea toute celle saison d'entour Partenay[3].

Le château et la terre de Sainte-Neomaye relevaient directement du roi de France. (Archives nat., P 1144, fol. 41 r°.)

3. L'affirmation de Gruel semble parfaitement exacte : le comte et la comtesse de Richemont passèrent en Poitou la fin de 1428 et les premiers mois de 1429. Le 22 février de cette dernière année, ils acceptèrent par lettres données à Parthenay la seigneurie de Verdun que leur proposait le duc de Bourgogne comme paiement des 6,000 livres de rente constituant une partie de la dot de Mme de Guyenne; Philippe le Bon, son frère, avait en effet repris un instant, au commencement de 1425, les terres sur lesquelles avait été d'abord assignée cette rente, puis il les avait rendues au connétable qui en jouissait encore dans les premiers mois de 1428; cependant, le 16 octobre de cette année, et même avant cette date, elles étaient de nouveau entre les mains du duc de Bourgogne, qui en confiait alors la garde à Philibert de Vaudrey, succédant dans cette charge à Jean de Rie, autre capitaine de Philippe le Bon. C'est sans doute pour dédommager le comte et la comtesse de Richemont de la perte de ces domaines que le duc leur avait offert la seigneurie de Verdun, qu'ils acceptèrent le 22 février 1429. Ce changement ne fut pas encore définitif; car, au moment de sa mort, Mme de Guyenne jouissait des revenus des seigneuries qui lui avaient été attribuées le 23 octobre 1423. (Gachard, Archives de Dijon, p. 60, nos 116 et 117; Archives de la Côte-d'Or, B 4852, fol. 1 r°, B 2795, fol. 1 r°, B 11829, dossier Montbard, dernière pièce.) Richemont et Mme de Guyenne étaient encore à Parthenay le 18 avril 1429, date à laquelle ils firent à l'église Sainte-Croix de ce lieu une donation pour la célébration perpétuelle de trois messes par semaine. Comment monseigneur le connestable fut au siege à Boysgency. Et comme les Angloys furent mors à Patay.

Comment la Pucelle arriva devers le Roy.

L'an que desus, en mars[1], arriva la Pucelle devers le Roy et les Angloys prindrent Yanville[2] et Boysgency[3] et Meun sur Layre[4] et Gerguyau[5], et misdrent des bastilles devant Orleans[6].

print mon dit seigneur le chemin pour tirer vers Orleans.

Et aussitost que le Roy le sceut il envoya monseigneur de la Jaille au devant de luy et le trouva à Lodun ; si le tira à part et luy dist que le Roy lui mandoit qu'il s'en retournast à sa maison, et que ne fust tant hardi de passer en avant, et que s'il passoit oultre que le Roy le combatroit. Lors mon dit seigneur respondit que ce qu'il faisoit estoit pour le bien du Royaume et du Roy et qu'il voiroit qu'il vouldroit combatre. Lors le seigneur de la Jaille lui dist : « Monseigneur, il me semble que vous ferés très bien. » Si print monseigneur le chemin et tira sur la riviere de Vienne et passa à gué ; puis de là tira à Emboise ; et Regnaud de Velourt, qui estoit capitaine du dit lieu d'Emboise, luy bailla le passage ; et là sceut que le siege estoit à Boysgency.

Si tira tout droit le chemin devers la Beausse pour venir joindre à ceulx du siege. Et quant il fut près il envoya monseigneur de Rostrelen et Le Bourgeois[1] demander du logeis à ceulx du siege. Et tantost on lui vint dire que la Pucelle et ceulx du siege venoient le combatre, et il respondit que s'ilz venoient qu'il les verroit. Et bientost monterent à cheval la Pucelle et monseigneur d'Alenczon et pluseurs autres. Toutesfoiz La Hyre, Girard de la Paglere, monseigneur de Guitri et autres capitaines demanderent à la Pucelle [ce] qu'elle vouloit faire, et elle leur respondit qu'il failloit aller combatre le connestable. Et ilz lui respondirent que si elle y alloit qu'elle trouveroit bien à qui parler et qu'il y en avoit en la compaignie qui plustost seroient à luy que à elle, et qu'ilz ameroient mieulx lui et sa compaignie que toutes les pucelles du Royaume de France.

CHAPITRE L.

Comment la Pucelle arriva devers monseigneur le connestable.

Cependant monseigneur chevauchoit en bele ordennance et furent tous esbahiz qu'il fut arrivé. Et vers La Maladerie la Pucelle arriva devers luy et monseigneur d'Alenczon et monseigneur de Laval, monseigneur de Loheac, monseigneur le bastard d'Orleans et pluseurs capitaines qui luy firent grant chiere et furent bien aises de sa venue.

La Pucelle descendit à pié et monseigneur aussi et vint la dicte Pucelle embracer mon dit seigneur par les jambes[1]. Et lors il parla à elle et luy dist : « Jehanne, on m'a dit que me voulés combatre ; je ne scey si vous estes de par Dieu ou non ; si vous estes de par Dieu, je ne vous crains rien, car Dieu sceit mon bon vou-

1. Le récit fait par Gruel de la première entrevue de Jeanne d'Arc et du connétable de Richemont et de l'attitude de ce dernier pendant sa jonction avec l'armée royale nous semble assez fantaisiste. loir; si vous estes de par le deable, je vous crains encores moins. »

Lors tirerent droit au siege, et ne lui baillerent point de logeis pour celle nuyt. Si print mon dit seigneur à faire le guet; car vous scavés que les nouveaux venuz doyvent le guet. Si firent le guet celle nuyt devant le chasteau, et fut le plus beau guet qui eut esté en France passé a longtemps. Et ceste nuyt fut faicte la composicion et se rendirent au bien matin.

Et le jour devant, le sires de Talbot et le sires de Scalles et Fastol et autres capitaines estoient arrivez à Meun sur Laire pour devoir[1] venir combatre ceulx du siege à Boysgency. Et quant ilz sceurent que monseigneur le connestable y estoit venu ilz changerent propos et prindrent conseil d'eulx en aller. Et aussi à mon dit seigneur, si tost qu'il fut arrivé, on dist[2] qu'il failloit envoyer des gens au pont de Meun qui tenoit pour les Françoys ou aultrement qu'il seroit perdu. Et incontinent y envoya XX lances et les archiers; si les conduirent Charles de la Ramée[3] et Pierres Daugi[4]. Et au matin, quant les Angloys s'en furent

1. « Devoir, » omis par Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 46; dans Buchon, p. 370[1]).

2. Th. Godefroy (Ibid.) a changé ainsi l'ordre de la phrase : « Et dist on aussi à mon dit seigneur...; » ce qui était bien inutile.

3. Charles de la Ramée est qualifié, en février 1435, écuyer du duc de Bretagne, lieutenant de Tanguy, bâtard de Bretagne, capitaine de Dol. (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 22329, p. 6 et 10.)

4. Pierre, ou Perinet Daugy, vassal du Roi pour son « hebergement » de Rochereau, dans le comté de Poitou, capitaine de Grant-Pré. Malgré la défense faite par le connétable à ses gens d'armes, le 24 novembre 1435, de guerroyer contre les habitants de Verdun, il occupa la place de Commenières, voisine de cette ville, pilla les environs et fut tué dans une rencontre par les partiz de Boysgency, la Pucelle et tous les seigneurs monterent à cheval pour devoir aller vers Meun. Et lors vindrent les nouvelles que les Angloys s'en alloient et commencerent à retourner droit à la ville chacun à son logeis. Puis vint monseigneur de Rostrelen qui s'aprocha de monseigneur le connestable ; si l'avertit et dist : « Si vous faictes tirer votre estandart en avant, tout le monde vous suivra. » Et ainsi fut fait ; et vint la Pucelle et tous les autres après et fut conclut de tirer après les Angloys. Et furent mis les mieulx montez en l'avant-garde et gens ordonnez pour les chevaucher et arrester et faire mettre en bataille. Si furent des premiers Poton et La Hyre, Penensac, Giraud de la Paglère, Amadoc, Setevenot et pluseurs gens de bien à cheval. Et monseigneur le connestable, monseigneur d'Alenczon, la Pucelle, monseigneur de Laval, monseigneur de Loheac, le mareschal de Rays, le bastard d'Orleans et Gaucourt et grant nombre de seigneurs venoient en ordennance par ceste belle Beausse ; si venoient bien grant train. Et quant les premiers eurent bien chevauché environ de cincq lieues, ilz commencerent à veoir les Angloys ; et adoncques galloperent grant erre et la bataille après. Et en telle maniere les chevaucherent que les ditz Angloys n'eurent pas loisir de se mettre en bataille et furent en grant desarroy ; car ilz avoient mal choaisi selon leur cas ; car le païs estoit trop plain. Si furent desconfitz à ung village en Beausse qui ha nom Patay, et là environ. Si furent là tuez bien XXII^{c}, ainsi que disoient les heraultz et poursuivans, et fut en la fin du moys de may.

Et furent prinsonniers : le sire de Talbot, le sire de Scalles ; et fut Talbot prinsonnier es archiers de Poton ; et monseigneur de Beaumanoir eut à prisonnier missire Henry Branche et pluseurs autres prisonniers, et missire Jehan Fastot s'enfuyt, et des autres dont je ne scey pas les noms. Monseigneur le connestable et les autres seigneurs coucherent celle nuyt à Patay sur le champ ; car bien estoient las et avoient eu grant chault. Et bientost après comme ilz cuidoient tirer en avant, le Roy manda à monseigneur le connestable qu'il s'en retournast à sa maison. Et mon dit seigneur envoya devers lui lui supplier que ce fust son plaisir qu'il le servist, et que bien et loyaulment le serviroit luy et le Royaume. Et y envoya monseigneur de Beaumanoir et monseigneur de Rostrelen, et prioit à La Trimouille qu'il luy pleust le laisser servir le Roy et qu'il feroit tout ce qu'il lui plairoit ; et fut jusques à le baiser à genoulz ; et oncques n'en voult riens faire. Et lui fist mander le Roy qu'il s'en allast, et que mieulx ameroit jamais n'estre coronné que mon dit seigneur y fust. Et en effect convint à mon dit seigneur s'en revenir à Partenay[1] à toute sa belle compaignie ; dont depuis s'en repentirent, quant le duc de Bethfort leur offrit la bataille à Montepilloy[2]. Et aussi envoierent mon-

Le 11 septembre 1429, Richemont, qui, sans aucun doute, était rentré depuis longtemps déjà à Parthenay, datait de ce lieu des lettres exemptant les habitants de Marsac et de Massérac (comm., Loire-Inférieure, arr. de Saint-Nazaire, cant. de Guéméné) de faire le guet dans son château du Gavre. (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 22330, p. 554.)

2. Montépilloy, Oise, cant. de Senlis. Les deux armées se trouvèrent en présence le 15 août 1429 ; mais le duc de Bedford, après avoir offert la bataille au Roi, comme le dit Gruel, refusa ensuite de sortir de ses retranchements. (Cousinot de Montreuil, p. 329 et s. ; Monstrelet, IV, 344-347.)

seigneur de la Marche qui cuidoit venir servir le Roy et avoit très belle compaignie; dont puis, comme dit est, en eurent bien afaire. Si s'en vint monseigneur à Partenay; et en s'en venant, on lui ferma toutes les villes et passages, et lui firent tout le pis qu'ilz peurent, pour ce qu'il avoit fait tout le mieulx qu'il avoit peu.

En l'yver emprès mon dit seigneur fist une entreprinse et cuida prendre d'emblée Fresnay le Viconte[1] et la faillit; puis s'en revint à Partenay, et passa le temps. Et en s'en venant du dit Fresnay, il vint ung homme du pays de Picardie qui chevauchoit le plus près de mon dit seigneur qu'il povoit, tousjours en le regardant; et luy demanda qui il estoit, et lui dist qu'il estoit Picart; puis monseigneur demanda à missire Gilles de Saint Symon qui il estoit, et il luy dist qu'il ne scavoit. Et lors monseigneur lui dist qu'il lui dist verité; et lors il dist à monseigneur qu'il lui diroit verité; mais qu'il lui pleust lui pardonner. Et lors mon dit seigneur lui pardonna; et luy dist adoncques celui homme de Picardie que La Trimouille l'avoit envoyé et promis argent pour tuer monseigneur. Et mon dit seigneur le mena une piece et puis luy donna ung marc d'argent, et lui dist qu'il s'en allast et que ne print plus de telle commission.

Chapitre LI.

Comment il fut fait ouverture de traictié entre le Roy, monseigneur le connestable et monseigneur de la Trimouille.

L'an mil CCCC XXX, le Roy s'en estoit revenu en

Touraine, et de là à Poictiers; et furent faictes aucunes ouvertures de traictié entre le Roy, monseigneur le connestable et monseigneur de la Trimouille. Et fut dit que mon dit seigneur de la Trimouille et monseigneur le connestable parleroient ensemble entre Poictiers et Partenay. Toutesfoiz mon dit seigneur le connestable fut adverti qu'on lui devoit faire une mauveise traïson; et fut la chose rompue bientost. Après qu'ilz virent que monseigneur n'yroit point, ilz trouverent maniere d'y faire aller monseigneur de Thouars et monseigneur de Lezay et Antoyne de Vivonne et furent menez à la chace. Puis La Trimouille les fist prendre et tint monseigneur de Thouars prisonnier, et fist coupper la teste à monseigneur de Lezay et à Anthoine de Vivonne. Et puis ceulx de Touars misdrent madamme de Thouars hors la ville; et s'en vint à Mauleon et supplia monseigneur le connestable qu'il luy pleust lui aider encontre La Trimouille, et comme sa pouvre parente à qui on faisoit si grant tort. Si vint demourer à Partenay; et vint à elle monseigneur de Chasteauneuf; après vint monseigneur de Rostrelen, puis monseigneur de Beaumanoir, et beaucoup de chevaliers et escuiers. Et là fut entreprins le mariage de monseigneur Pierres de Bretaigne, qui puis fut duc, et de madamoiselle Francoyse d'Amboyse qui puis fut duchesse; et mon dit seigneur l'envoya en Bretaigne devers le duc; et luy mesmes y alla et en amena à Partenay monseigneur Pierres son nepveu[1], et y demoura longuement o madame de Guyenne. Et ma

Puis le Roy et toutes les places de Poictou commencerent guerre contre monseigneur le connestable et à ses places et y eut forte guerre. Si y vint monseigneur d'Albret qui fut lieutenant du Roy et grant nombre de Gascons et d'autres gens, et d'une emblée entrerent en l'isle de Marant. Et s'en vindrent messeigneurs de Beaumanoir et de Rostrelen à Fontenay; et gueres ne tint Marant ne Benon; et de là alerent à La Rochelle, et leur[3] fut rendu Chastelaillon, dont mon dit seigneur le connestable fut bien mal content et fist coupper la teste à celui qui leur avoit rendue la dicte place. Et dura celle guerre bien près d'un an; puis se trouva apointement tel quel; et fut rendu à mon dit seigneur Chastelaillon, et fist rendre Gensay[4], qui avoit esté prins sur La Trimouille. Et au regart de Mauleon il fut mis en la main de Pregent de Coitivi, de l'assentement

Louis II d'Amboise, vicomte de Thouars, prince et seigneur de Talmont, et de Marie de Rieux. Le contrat de mariage fut signé dès le 21 juillet 1431; on en trouve une analyse dans l'Inventaire de René de Bourgneuf. (Archives nat., KK 1101, pièce 1008.) A cette occasion le comte de Richemont instituait de nouveau son neveu comme héritier de tous ses biens, dans le cas où il décéderait sans postérité mâle. Pierre de Bretagne devint duc en 1450. Chapitre LII.

Comment le duc Jehan envoya querir monseigneur le connestable, son frere, pour faire le mariage de monseigneur le conte et de madame Yolant.

L'an mil CCCC XXXI en aougst le duc Jehan envoya querir monseigneur le connestable son frere[2] pour faire le mariage de monseigneur le conte et de madame Yolant, fille du Roy de Cecille; et fut à Nantes fait le mariage; si y eut grant feste et belle compaignie tant de France que de Bretaigne[3]. Puis s'en vint mon dit seigneur le connestable à Partenay veoir madame de Guyenne.

Bientost après environ la fin de decembre monseigneur d'Alenczon vint veoir le duc à Nantes; et à son retour il print le chancelier de Bretaigne qui avoit nom

2. Le connétable se trouvait alors dans son château de Parthenay, où il résida le plus souvent à cette époque : le 16 août 1431, il datait de ce lieu des lettres portant remise à son fermier Louis Marchandeau d'une somme de 40 livres tournois. (Pièce just. XIX.)

3. Le contrat fut signé à Angers le 13 août 1431 par la Reine Yolande, mère de la future comtesse de Montfort, et, le 20 du même mois, à Nantes, par le duc de Bretagne et son fils aîné; le mariage fut célébré au commencement de septembre, sans doute le 10, jour où le comte de Montfort fit de nombreux dons à l'occasion de ses noces. (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1237-1243 et 1232.)

Jehan de Malestroit, evesque de Nantes, et l'emmena à Pouencé[1], et fut dit qu'il avoit cuidé prendre monseigneur le conte. Et incontinent le duc escripst à monseigneur le connestable qu'il luy pleust venir devers lui et lui desplaire de l'oultrage que son nepveu luy faisoit. Et aussitost que mon dit seigneur le sceut, il s'en vint devers le duc qui en fut bien aise et bien joyeux.

Et environ le VIe jour de janvier ensuivant fut mis le siege à Pouencé; et y vindrent des Angloys pour servir le duc, entre lesquelz estoient monseigneur de Scalles[2], monseigneur d'Oilby[3] et Georges Riqueinan. Si dura le siege longuement et eut esté la place prinse d'assault, si n'eut esté monseigneur le connestable qui dissimula le dit assault desirant faire l'apointement; car trop estoit desplaisant de la guerre d'entre l'oncle et le nepveu, et aussi que mesdames d'Alenczon estoient dedans la place, et le plus tost qu'il peut trouva le traictié, en telle maniere que monseigneur d'Alenczon vint devers le duc, qui estoit à Chasteaubriand, lui requerir pardon et rendit le chancellier; et par ainsi fut tout appaisé et s'en allerent ceulx de dedans la place[4]. Si leverent le siege les Bretons et les Angloys, et tout fut content. Puis monseigneur le connestable voyant que tout estoit bien apointé print congié du duc et s'en vint à Partenay, et y fut assés longtemps[1].

Chapitre LIII.

Comment Mairevent fut prins d'emblée.

L'an mil CCCC XXXII, le jour de la Penthecoste[2], Pierres Regnauld, frere de La Hyre, print la place de Mairevent environ l'eure de vespres, et vindrent les nouvelles à monseigneur le connestable à Partenay, qui dès l'eure envoya les gens de sa maison à Voulvent, et huyt jours après fist mettre le siege devant le dit Mairevent; et fut prins par composicion. Et y estoit Pregent de Coitivi, lieutenant de mon dit seigneur et avecques lui tous les gens de l'ostel de mon dit seigneur et le bastard Chapelle et Pennemarc et tous les nobles des terres de mon dit seigneur et tous les arbalestriers.

Depuis s'en vint monseigneur le connestable à Partenay, et sçavoit bien que de par lui en partie se demenoit une entreprise sur La Trimouille; et estoient venuz devers lui à Partenay partie de ceulx qui la conduisoient. Et bientost après fut la chose mise à execucion par monseigneur de Bueil, monseigneur le grant senneschal et monseigneur de Coitivi et avoient pour chief monseigneur du Maine, et en estoit d'assentement monseigneur de Gaucourt, monseigneur de Chaumont qui tenoient Chynon et Loches; et Olivier Fretart les mist dedans le chasteau de Chinon par Le Couldrin; et fut La Trimouille prins en son lit et fut en grant dangier de mort qui ne l'eut rescoux[1]. Comment l'armée des Françoys et des Angloys furent à une lande pour devoir combatre et ne combatirent pas.

L'an mil CCCCXXX troys, en fevrier, les Angloys misdrent le siege à Saint Celerin[1]. Et pour lever le dit siege se mist monseigneur le connestable sus en armes et assembla tout ce qu'il peut de gens[2]; si tira vers Saumur, et de là à Durestal, pour cuider aller lever le siege. Et là vindrent les nouvelles que Saint Celerin estoit rendu; et revindrent lui et monseigneur d'Alenczon à Saumur pour attendre et scavoir que feroient les Angloys; et bientost on leur aporta nouvelles qu'ilz estoient devant Sillé le Guillaume. Et comme ilz furent prestz à partir, on leur vint dire que le dit Sillé estoit omise par Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 54; Buchon, p. 372). La Trémoille fut pris dans les derniers jours de juin 1433. Richemont se trouvait alors à Parthenay, où sa présence nous est signalée le 20 de ce mois. (Hist. de Charles VII, par M. de Beaucourt, II, 297, note 3; Pièce just. XIX.)

Et sur ce monseigneur le connestable et monseigneur d'Alenczon, et les autres seigneurs se departirent et promictrent de se rendre au jour qui estoit dit, et firent toute l'assemblée de gens chacun endroit soy comme ilz peurent. Si se rendirent ensemble deux jours avant le jour qui estoit dit. Et s'i rendit monseigneur du Maine qui amena touz les gens qui vouldrent venir de l'ostel du Roy. Et y vindrent monseigneur de Bueil, monseigneur le grant senneschal, monseigneur de Coitivi, monseigneur de Chaumont[1]; et y fut monseigneur de Thouars. Et avecques monseigneur le connestable vindrent monseigneur de Rays, monseigneur le mareschal de Rieux, monseigneur de Rostrelen, monseigneur de Bressuyre, et pluseurs chevaliers et escuiers de Bretaigne et de ses terres de Poictou. Et quant tout fut assemblé, ce fut une très belle compaignie et bien à doubter, et furent estimez mille lances, et les archiers, et de gens à pié à voulges[2] XVIII cens[3].

Monseigneur du Maine vint ilecq requerir chevalerie à monseigneur le connestable, et mon dit seigneur lui dist que plus honorable seroit qu'il le fust de monseigneur d'Alenczon qui estoit duc; et monseigneur du Maine respondit qu'il ne le seroit point s'il ne l'estoit de luy; et lors mon dit seigneur le fist chevalier. Et puis monseigneur du Maine fist pluseurs chevaliers, entre autres [les] chevaliers dont les noms s'ensuyvent: monseigneur de Bueil, monseigneur de Coitivi, monseigneur le grant sennechal, monseigneur de Chaumont, monseigneur de la Bessiere, et grant nombre d'autres. Et mon dit seigneur le connestable fist de sa maison chevaliers : missire Gilles de Saint Symon, missire Olivier Le Veyer, missire Jehan Bonnet, missire Jehan Sauvestre, missire Pierres Guyou, missire Jehan de la Chaussée[1], missire Aymeri Chauvin et autres[2].

Puis les Angloys tirerent au long d'une petite riviere en ung petit village, qui estoit en leur avantage, et là se fortifierent. Et pour ce que n'avoyent pas esté les plus fors à l'eure de medy à l'orme qui estoit dit, monseigneur le connestable les fist sommer de rendre les ostages; et incontinent les envoierent. Et cela fait, monseigneur le connestable demanda aux seigneurs et capitaines que estoit à faire; et nul ne fut d'opinion de assaillir les Angloys en leur fort, et conseillerent tous qu'il failloit s'en aller et qu'ilz n'avoient nulz vivres ne pour eulx ne pour leurs chevaulx. Et leur avoit convenu aporter vivres sur leurs chevaulx, pour troys jours, qui tous estoient failliz. Et les Angloys estoient entre leurs places de tous costés, et noz gens n'avoient place que Sablé qui estoit bien à IX ou X lieues. Mon dit seigneur leur demanda qu'il estoit à faire de celle place qui rien ne valoit et estoit d'opinion qu'on devoit mettre le feu dedans et faire coper la teste à celuy qui avoit faicte celle composicion, et beaucoup furent de celle opinion, excepté monseigneur de Bueil qui avoit la charge de la dicte place, qui dist qu'il la garderoit bien et s'en fist fort.

Après se partirent nos gens en belle ordennance et vindrent coucher sur les champs en ung petit village, et le landemain à Sablé. Et les Angloys, dès le landemain prindrent la dicte place de Sillé, et puis se retirerent en leurs places, et les Françoys es leurs[1]. Et sembla à beaucoup de gens qu'ilz avoient bien fait; car il n'estoit de memoire d'omme que à journée assignée les Françoys se fussent comparuz[2] jusques à ce jour.

Cy parle de Craiel, de Lan et de Han en Vermendays.

L'an mil IIII^c XXXIIII, monseigneur le connestable alla devers le Roy, qui luy fist bonne chiere; et fut apointé que mon dit seigneur iroit en Champaigne, qui pour lors estoit bien maltraitée tant des ennemis que des gens du Roy. Et s'en alla le Roy à Leon, et de là à Vienne, et convint que mon dit seigneur le connestable alast là pour avoir son expedicion de son voyage. Et lui fut ordenné CCCC lances, dont monseigneur le bastard d'Orleans en avoit la charge de cent; puis fut mon dit seigneur expedié et print congié du Roy. Et s'en alla mon dit seigneur le connestable à Partenay; et là lui vindrent nouvelles que le siege estoit [à] Craiel[1]; et estoit dedans Amadoc, le frere de La Hire, qui fut tué dedans la dicte ville de Craiel d'une flesche à la volée toute desferrée[2]. Et si estoient dedans Anthoine de Chabannes[3] et autres, et ne tindrent gueres la dicte place depuis la mort Amadoc[4]. Si ne peut l'armée assés tost estre preste ; car il convint attendre le bastard d'Orleans bien troys sepmaines à Bloys et a Boaisgency. Puis print mon dit seigneur son voyage et tira à Orleans et de là à Melun et à Ligné, et à Senlis, et à Complaine[1] ; et si avoit avecques lui monseigneur le marechal de Rieux, monseigneur le bastard et monseigneur le chancellier qui s'en alloient quant et luy. Et quant il fut à Complaine, là se rendirent Poton et La Hire qui lui requirent qu'il leur baillast deux cens lances et les archiers pour les secourir à Lan qui estoit bastiglé[2]. Et ainsi mon dit seigneur leur bailla missire Gilles de Saint Simon et partie des gens de sa maison, et Jamet Tillay[3] qui avoit la charge des gens de monseigneur le bastard ; et menerent lui et missire Gilles environ deux cens lances et les archiers.

Si cuiderent trouver les gens de missire Jehan de Lucembourc en ung village assés près d'Arsi sur Serre[4], et ne trouverent rien. Et fist on de grandes courses sur le païs non obeissant à monseigneur[1], et fut fort avitaillée la dicte ville de Lan qui bien en avoit mestier. Et le landemain passa à quatre lieues de là monseigneur de Bourgoingne qui venoit de Picardie et tiroit en Bourgoingne et avoit avecques lui environ troys mille combatans, et ne tint à gueres qu'il ne trouva les Françoys en ung village qui repaissoient. Et bientost après quant ilz furent departiz il vint là logier.

Et cependant que monseigneur le connestable estoit à Complaine lui vindrent nouvelles que la cité de Beauvoirs[2] estoit en dangier de perdicion, et que La Hyre et ceulx de la ville estoient en grant dissencion, dont il fut bien desplaisant. Car les Angloys estoient venuz lui offrir la bataille, et encores estoient ilz à Verbric[3] logez, et là entour. Et convint que mon dit seigneur print certain nombre de gens pour le conduire, et que les autres demourassent à Complaine pour la garde d'icelle; et si avoit il les Angloys près luy; et avoit son armée en troys parties, c'est assavoir ceulx qu'il avoit envoyé à Lan, et ceulx qu'il menoit à Beauvoirs lui et monseigneur le chancellier et monseigneur le bastard et le marechal de Rieux, et certain nombre de gens demouroit à Complaine pour la garde de la ville. Et si y avoit il ung traitre qui l'avoit vendu es Angloys, et tout enseigné le chemin qu'il devoit tenir; mais les Angloys ne se fierent point en lui ainsi comme Dieu le vouloit. Et tira son chemin à Beauvoirs, et fist l'apointement; puis s'en retourna à Complaine, et manda ses gens qui estoient à Lan.

Et aussitost qu'ilz furent venuz, il fist l'entreprinse de prendre Han en Vermendays[1], et y envoya ceulx qui avoient esté à Lan qui faisoient l'avant garde. Et arriverent au point du jour au dit lieu de Han; et aussitost donnerent l'assault et fut prinse la ville et le chasteau qui gueres ne valoit à l'eure.

Puis arriva la bataille où estoient monseigneur le connestable, monseigneur le bastard d'Orleans, monseigneur le mareschal de Rieux, Poton, La Hyre, Blanchefort et pluseurs autres capitaines qui furent bien joyeux de trouver leur logeis fait. Et fist mon dit seigneur le connestable delivrer tous les gens de la ville de Han, exceptés ceulx qui estoient Angloys ou officiers d'Angloys, et fist rendre à ceulx de la ville la moitié de tous leurs biens. Et pensés qu'il y avoit beaucoup de vivres; car on y fut plus d'un moys sans aller en fourrage, bien troys mille chevaulx qui là estoient. ne vouloit, pour ce que tousjours tractoit[1] et desiroit faire la paix entre le Roy et monseigneur de Bourgoigne; et dejà avoit eu des nouvelles de l'un et de l'autre par ung poursuivant de mon dit seigneur, et de monseigneur de Bourgoigne par Pierres de Vaudré.

Et le second jour après que on eu prins Han, le bastard d'Orleans alla courir à Chauny[2] cuidant parler à ceulx de la ville; et missire Jehan de Lucembourc arrivoit au dit lieu de Chauny par l'autre costé, et y eut belle escarmousche, et soustint fors le feis le dit bastard et La Hyre, et ceulx qui estoient avecques eulx. Si le manderent à monseigneur le connestable qui estoit demouré à Han; et Dieu sache si bientost monta à cheval et toute la compaignie et vint recuillir et secourir ceulx qui estoient à Chauny, et les trouva à bien troys lieues qu'ilz s'en venoient en bonne ordennance, et n'avoient rien perdu.

Bientost après entreprindrent à faire armes à oultrance jusques à dire le mot[3] devant monseigneur le connestable Geoffroy de Saint Belin, dit La Hyre, et Charles de Boqueaux; et si en eut Charles du pis; mais mon dit seigneur leur fist faire grant chiere et lui fist des dons.

Chapitre LVII.

Comment monseigneur le connestable print la place de Han en Champaigne, et comment il donna secours au damiseau de Commercy.

Puis après s'en vint monseigneur le connestable mettre le siege à Han[3] en Champaine; et durant qu'il estoit devant Han, le duc de Bar, qui est à present Roy de Cecille[4], vint à une sienne place qui est assés près de Saint Meneho[5], et pria monseigneur qu'il voulsist aller parler à lui, lequel y alla, et parlerent ensemble à leur bon plaisir. Et le landemain s'en revint à son siege; et fut la basse court prinse d'assault, et Puis s'en vint mon dit seigneur à Chalons, et en venant ceulx de Vertuz bouterent le feu en la place. Et durant ce que monseigneur estoit au dit lieu de Chalons lui vindrent pluseurs plaintes d'un capitaine nommé Henry Bourges; et sur ce le fist prendre, et sans gehyne confessa avoir forcé x femmes, et tant d'autres maulx que c'estoit merveilles, et fist mon dit seigneur pendre le dit Bourges.

Puis arriva à Chalons le damiseau de Commercy[3] qui vint devers monseigneur lui suppliant qu'il lui pleut donner secours, et que pour ce qu'il tenoit le parti du Roy les Angloys et Bourgoingnons et ceulx qui tenoient leur parti[4] lui faisoient guerre, et que le

Et de là s'en vint l'armée en la conté de Lini en Barays[3], et firent beaucoup de maulx; puis s'en revindrent à Chalons devers mon dit seigneur, et puis s'en allerent à Vitri en Partays. Et la vint le sires de Commerci qui ne vouloit obeir au duc de Bar ne tenir ce que lui avoit promis et le fist scavoir le duc de Bar à monseigneur. Et quant le damiseau le sceut, il se rendit au duc de Bar pour lui tenir et acomplir ce que lui avoit promis.

Et en tirant devers Saint Miers[3] là où estoit le duc de Bar, les gens de monseigneur le connestable sceurent, environ le point du jour, nouvelles du baillif de Bar que les Angloys estoient devant Bar. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 72; Buchon, 378[1]) et de Denys Godefroy (Hist. de Charles VII, p. 763). C'est la première leçon qui est la bonne; on lit en effet dans Monstrelet « et laisserent en ycelle ville de Saint Denis aulcuns de leurs capitaines mors. C'est assavoir messire Loys de Waucourt, messire Rignault de Saint-Jehan, Archade de la Tour, ung nommé Joselin, et aulcuns autres ». (Douët d'Arcq, V, 186.) Josselin était parmi les défenseurs de Saint-Denis et non au nombre des assiégeants.

2. Que signifie donc cette expression « ainsi que scavés », intercalée par Gruel dans son récit, et qui se trouve dans tous les mss.? Aucune mention antérieure ne la justifie : sans doute elle montre que le chroniqueur parle de la mort de Josselin comme d'un fait bien connu de ses contemporains.

Et cependant monseigneur le connestable qui estoit [à] Arras, comme dit est, auquel tardoit moult que la paix fut faicte, aussitost qu'elle fut faicte[1], print congié de messeigneurs de Bourgoigne et de Bourbon, et manda tout ce qu'il peut trouver, et s'en vint droit à Senlis. Et incontinent que les Angloys sceurent que mon dit seigneur le connestable estoit au dit lieu de Senlis, ilz firent leur composicion à ceulx de la ville le plus amplement que faire se povoit; car ilz s'en allerent montez et armez, et emporterent tous leurs biens et toutes leurs artilleries et prisonniers. Et le jour devant, avant qu'ilz sceussent les nouvelles de mon dit seigneur le connestable, il vouloit les avoir à leur merci, ou à tout le moins ung baston en la main. Et cependant fut prins le pont de Meulanc, qui fist grant ennuy aux Angloys; puis monseigneur le connestable logea les gens d'armes aux frontieres à l'entour de Paris.

Puis après fist une entreprinse de prendre la ville de Dieppe que ses escheleurs avoient pourgetée et Charlot des Marais[2]. Si y envoya mon dit seigneur

1. La paix fut solennellement jurée le 21 septembre 1435, dans l'église de Saint-Vaast d'Arras, après une dernière restriction apportée par le duc de Bourgogne aux traités conclus la veille, dont il n'entendait pas faire profiter René d'Anjou et de Bar, son prisonnier. (Voir des analyses de cette déclaration dans le ms. fr. de la Bibl. nat., Fontanieu 118, au 21 sept. 1435, et dans le Rapport de M. Gachard sur les Archives de Dijon, p. 10, n° 172.) M. de Beaucourt a résumé les clauses du traité dans son Hist. de Chārles VII, t. II, 547-553.

2. Il est assez difficile d'admettre que Richemont ait pris une part aussi active à cette campagne; car, après la dissolution du congrès d'Arras, nous le trouvons en Bourgogne accompagnant le cardinal de Sainte-Croix et l'évêque d'Amiens. (Canat, Docu-

Comment Gerberay fut emparé.

Puis fist monseigneur le connestable une entreprinse et chargea Poton et La Hyre d'aller emparer Gerberay[2], et bailla au dit Poton VII^m^ salutz pour aider à conduire l'entreprinse; car mon dit seigneur n'y povoit estre en personne, pour ce qu'il lui convenoit venir devers le Roy quant et les autres embassadeurs pour faire le raport touchant ce qu'ilz avoient besoigné pour la paix à Arras; aussi pour prier le Roy qu'il voulsist jurer et tenir la paix ainsi qu'ilz avoient promis. Et y fist le Roy ung peu de difficulté; neantmoins tantost après les embassadeurs de monseigneur de Bourgoingne vindrent devers le Roy, lequel jura la paix, et depuis en fut bien content[1].

Puis après[2] Poton et La Hyre alerent fortifier Gerberay ainsi que avoient promis à monseigneur le connestable. Et en fortifiant la place le conte d'Esrondel le sceut et soubdainement fist grant assemblée de gens pour devoir sousprendre les ditz Poton et La Hyre; et vindrent à ung matin bien troys mille combatans pour enclorre et prendre ceulx de Gerberay. Mais Poton et La Hyre qui virent que besoign estoit de bien faire, et avoient environ VI[c] combatans firent une saillie au desesperé; et estoit Poton à pié et La Hyre à cheval, et firent tant de belles armes que ce fut merveilles et combatirent longuement et par pluseurs foiz. Et tant firent de belles armes que au derrain le conte d'Esrondel fut blecié en ung pié d'une couleuvrine, et fut prins et pluseurs de ses gens mors et prins, et les autres en fuyte. Et ainsi fut lievé le siege de Gerberay [et fut le jour de Sainct Nicolas de may, l'an que dessus][3].

1. Charles VII ratifia le traité d'Arras par acte donné à Tours, le 10 décembre 1435. Olivier de la Marche a inséré ce texte dans ses Mémoires (édit. Beaune et d'Arbaumont, I, 207-238) et bien fait connaître les considérations multiples qui eurent raison des hésitations, fort légitimes, de Charles VII. (Ibid., 239-241.)

2. Cette expression est tout à fait inexacte; car l'affaire de Gerberoy est antérieure de plusieurs mois au congrès d'Arras et Gruel se contredit lui-même à la fin de ce chapitre. Poton de Saintrailles et La Hire contraignirent le comte d'Arondel à lever le siège de Gerberoy, le 9 mai, jour de saint Nicolas d'été. (Voy. aussi la note suivante.)

3. Cette date précise, que ne donnent pas les autres chroniqueurs, est tirée des mss. S, fol. 63 v°, B, fol. 17 v°, C, fol. 79 r°, ligne 4; elle ne se trouve pas dans le ms. N, fol. 30 v°. La mention

Comment les Angloys furent desconfitz à une rencontre par monseigneur le connestable.

Monseigneur le connestable après ce qu'il eut esté devers le Roy et que la paix fut jurée, il s'en vint veoir madame de Guyenne et envoya devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne Henri de Villeblanche, qui s'en alla depuis Bourgoigne par Paris jusques à Hedin; et puis s'en vint devers monseigneur à Partenay. Et bientost après madame d'Estampes alla à Poictiers devers le Roy et passa et repassa par Partenay, et fut monseigneur le connestable la conduire devers le Roy au dit lieu de Poictiers; puis s'en retourna ma dicte dame à Cliczon.

Bientost après vindrent les nouvelles à monseigneur le connestable que missire Gilles de Saint Symon, lequel estoit son lieutenant ou païs de Caux, estoit prinsonnier et avoit esté prins devant Cauxdebec à une rencontre. Et la maniere comment il fut prins : il estoit venu courir devant la ville de Cauxdebec, et celle nuyt y estoient arrivez les sires de Talbot et de Fauconberge et pluseurs autres capitaines jusques au nombre de deux à troys mille combatans. Et estoit le dit missire Gilles de Saint Symon des premiers, et se cuidoit retirer en ordennance, et ses compaignons le laisserent et fut habandonné et prins, puis après fut délivré par la prinse d'ung Angloys.

Mon dit seigneur le connestable sejourna ung peu à Partenay; puis se partit environ le premier jour de mars, et s'en alla devers le Roy à Poictiers, et fut conclu qu'il s'en iroit es marches de France, dont avoit le gouvernement, et aussi que aucunes entreprinses se devoient faire et conduire par lui sur Paris[1]. Et fut dit que monseigneur de Bourbon et monseigneur le chancellier et monseigneur le bastard d'Orleans[2], monseigneur de Vendosme et Cristofle de Harcourt y iroient. Et prindrent tous ensemble le chemin jusques à Orleans et de là à Yanville; et au dit lieu de Yanville vindrent nouvelles que les Angloys venoient à Paris bien troys mille, qui amenoient ung convay; et venoient pour renforcer ceulx qui estoient à Paris. Et quant ces nouvelles furent ouyes, fut dit et avisé que noz ditz seigneurs n'estoient pas puissans pour combatre, car ilz n'avoient que les gens de leurs maisons. Et fut conclu que monseigneur de Bourbon, monseigneur de Vendosme, monseigneur le chancellier, [monseigneur le bastard d'Orleans[3]] et missire Christofle de Harcourt s'en retourneroient devers le Roy pour

1. Les dates données ici par Gruel sont parfaitement exactes. Richemont était à Poitiers dès le 3 mars 1436, jour où il contresigna de nouvelles lettres d'abolition accordées par le Roi aux Parisiens. (Archives nat., K 949, n° 26.)

2. Dans les mss. S, fol. 64 v°, B, fol. 18 r°, et C, fol. 79 v°, le bâtard d'Orléans est cité le quatrième, tandis que dans le ms. N, fol. 31 r°, il est le troisième; dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 76; Buchon, p. 379 2), il est nommé le second.

En laquelle embassade entre les autres estoient le chancellier de Bourgoingne et monseigneur de Crouy et autres grans parsonnages[1]. Et sur tant departirent mes ditz seigneurs de Yanville, comme dit est; les ungs allerent devers le Roy, et monseigneur le connestable qui avoit environ LX lances de sa maison alla coucher à Corbail, la vigile de Pasques Flouries[2], et le jour de Pasques Flouries[3] alla mon dit seigneur coucher à Ligné sur Marne[4], et là trouva belle compaignie de ses gens qui estoient en garnison; dont estoient les capitaines missire Jehan Fouquaut et Mahé Morillon; et de là manda toutes les garnisons de Brie et de Champaigne, et tous ceulx qui tenoient les champs qu'ilz se rendissent à Pontaise devers luy le plus tost que faire se pourroit. Et le mardi de la Sepmaine Saincte s'i rendit mon dit seigneur, et passa à travers l'Isle de France, et vint à Pontaise, et là trouva les gens

Et là sceut des nouvelles des Angloys qui estoient à Mante; et dès ce qu'ilz sceurent que mon dit seigneur estoit à Pontaise, ilz retarderent leur entreprinse. Et mon dit seigneur manda monseigneur le bastard d'Orleans et les garnisons de Beausse pour venir au dit lieu de Pontaise; et là se rendit mon dit seigneur le bastard et toutes les garnisons. Et tous les jours de la Sepmaine Saincte et le grant Vendredi[1] et le jourde Pasques[2] noz ditz gens furent tousjours armez pour devoir combatre; car les ditz Angloys amenoient ung grant convay et ung grant nombre de bestail; et quant ilz sceurent que monseigneur estoit pour les gueter, ilz laisserent tout leur convay et bestail, et s'en alerent de nuyt par les boys de l'autre costé de la riviere. Et quant monseigneur sceut qu'ilz furent passez, il delibera lui et monseigneur le bastard qu'ilz vendroient logier encontre Paris et qu'ilz feroient ung pont sur la riviere. Et le mardi des feries de Pasques[3] monseigneur le bastard print congié de monseigneur et s'en alla assembler les gens d'armes en Beausse, et se devoit rendre à monseigneur au jour qui estoit dit entr'eulx.

du Bourgeoys et Mahé Morillon, et missire Jehan Fouquaut et bien troys cens combatans. Et quant ilz vindrent au dit lieu de Saint Denis, ilz y trouverent les Angloys bien grosse compaignie, qui estoient venuz pour piller l'abbaye et la ville. Et quant le guet apparceut noz gens il sonna à tout, et les Angloys saillirent à l'escarmouche. Et quant Bourgeoys apparceut qu'ilz estoient grant compaignie, il envoya ung homme batant devers monseigneur et le trouva qu'il ne faisoit que aller à table. Si lui dist que Bourgeoys lui mandoit qu'il avoit trouvé ce que mon dit seigneur demandoit; et lors il bouta la table[1], et fist ses trompetes sonner à cheval et tous ses gens le plus tost que faire se povoit. Et aussitost qu'il fut à cheval il tira à la porte à celle fin que tous ses gens allassent après lui; mais les gens de monseigneur de Bourgoingne ne vouloient monter à cheval sans avoir argent; et convint que monseigneur le connestable se obligeast à monseigneur de Ternan de la somme de mille escuz, avant qu'il voulsist partir. Puis mon dit seigneur tira en avant, et au partir de la porte n'avoit pas six lances; mais tout le monde commencza à tirer après lui, et comme ilz venoient il envoyoit gens pour entretenir l'escarmouche. Et tantost arriva monseigneur de l'Isle Adan devers mon dit seigneur, auquel il demanda s'il congnoissoit le païs où les ditz Angloys estoient; et il respondit que bien le congnoissoit. Et lors dist à monseigneur : « Par ma foy, monseigneur, si vous avez x mille combatans, vous ne leur feres ja mal ne des-

Et en chevauchant assembla mon dit seigneur le connestable bien VIII^{xx} lances entour son enseigne; et y estoient monseigneur de la Suse et le bastard de Bourbon.

Et cependant monseigneur de Rostrelen et monseigneur de l'Isle Adan estoient descenduz à pié au bout d'une chaussée qui est près Saint Denis; ainsi comme Dieu le vouloit, qui tousjours conduist les faitz du bon Artur plus miraculeusement que autrement, les Angloys vindrent charger sur noz gens, et les firent monter à cheval bien à haste; et deut estre l'Isle Adan mort ou prins, toutesfoiz il se sauva, et les ditz Angloys laisserent leur fort et chasserent noz gens bien deux traitz d'arc.

Et cependant monseigneur le connestable venoit [par] ung chemin couvert; et quant il fut près des Angloys, il entra en ung champ de vigne, et venoit en belle bataille. Et aussitost que les ditz Angloys l'apparceurent, ilz se misdrent en desarroy pour cuider recouvrir leur pont; et incontinent noz gens et toute notre bataille chargea dedans, et bientost furent desconfitz et mors sur la place, et à la chace plus de VIII^{c}. Et là fut print missire Thomas de Beaumont, qui estoit lieutenant du Roy d'Angleterre et son parent, et le print Jehan de Rosenvinen[1]; et Henry de Ville-

Et furent chassez les Angloys jusques à la porte de Paris, et leur fist-on lever le pont, fermer la porte, et en fut tué jusques à la barriere et sur les fossés; et croyés qu'il y eut bel effroy à Paris. Puis s'en retournerent loger à Saint Denis; et au dit lieu de Saint Denis se estoient retirez en la tour du Venin, qui estoit forte, le nepveu du prévost de Paris[1], et bien VI^xx^ Angloys. Et ceste nuyt monseigneur envoya au boys de Viesaine querir deux bombardes, qui y estoient, et furent amenées le mecredi.

Et celui mecredi, la nuyt, vindrent nouvelles à monseigneur le connestable d'un homme de Paris, qui lui mandoit qu'il vint, et qu'ilz estoient une X^ne^ qui lui ouvreroient la porte. Et sur tant se partit mon dit seigneur au bien matin de Saint Denis, faignant aller parler à missire Jehan de Lucembourc; et le faisoit de paour que tous voulsissent aller avecques lui, pour ce que beaucoup avoit de gens tenant les champs, et avoit paour qu'ilz voulsissent faire quelque pillerie à la ville de Paris. Et ne mena de Saint Denis que LX lances, et alla disner à Pontaise, et là trouva monseigneur de Ternan, et monseigneur de l'Isle Adan et Varabont et les gens de monseigneur de Bourgoingne qui s'en allerent avecques mon dit seigneur, et avoit mandé monseigneur le bastard d'Orleans qu'il se rendist à luy à Pouessi[1]. Et quant mon dit seigneur fut au dit lieu de Pontaise, il envoya des gens pour se mettre en embusche encontre Nostre Dame des Champs. Et entre les autres y envoia Mahé Morillon, Geffroy son frere et leur compaignie et autres jusques à quatre cens hommes à pié. Puis se partit mon dit seigneur de Pouessi environ soleil couchant et chevaucha toute nuyt et repeut en ung boys environ mynuyt bien peu; puis chevaucha tant qu'il vint à une grange, que on appelle la grange Damemarie, devers le Vigneul, et y arriva ung petit avant jour. Et puis comme le soleil levoit, on fist les signes que on devoit faire, et Dieu sache comme mon dit seigneur et ses gens tirerent vers Paris. Et comme il fut environ demie lieue, on lui vint dire que l'entreprinse estoit descouverte, et nonobstant ce mon dit seigneur tiroit tousjours en avant sans dire mot, et venoit pour garder ses gens qui estoient à pié. Et aucuns se tirerent de la bataille pour aprocher vers les Chartreux pour mieux veoir la ville; et incontinent ung homme se monstra sur la porte devers les Chartreux, qui fist signe d'un chaperon. Et sans scavoir qui avoit perdu ou gaingné on tira vers la porte, et ycelui homme dist : « Tirez à l'autre porte, car

Et bientost après y vint Henry de Villeblanche qui apporta la banniere du Roy; et lors ceulx du portal demanderent qui estoit là; on leur dist que c'estoit monseigneur le connestable; et ilz leur requirent qu'il pleut à mon dit seigneur le connestable parler à eulx. Comment monseigneur le connestable entra dedans Paris.

Lors ilz descendirent et vindrent ouvrir la planche et mon dit seigneur entra dedans et toucha à eulx et jura de leur entretenir ce qu'il leur avoit promis. Et incontinent fist entrer par la planche les gens de pié tant que l'on rompoit les sarreures du pont. Et incontinent qu'elles furent rompues, et le pont abatu, mon

1. Avant la reddition de Paris, Charles VII accorda aux habitants, pour les engager à rentrer sous son obéissance, plusieurs lettres d'abolition le 28 février et le 3 mars 1436 : D. Godefroy a publié les premières dans son recueil des Historiens de Charles VII, p. 796; le duc de Bourgogne en concéda également aux Parisiens. Les unes et les autres se trouvent aux Archives nationales, K 949, pièces nos 24, 25, 27. Elles furent solennellement publiées dans l'église de Notre-Dame le samedi 14 avril 1436. (Archives nat., X1a 1481, fol. 120 vo; ce passage a été imprimé par D. Félibien dans son Hist. de Paris, IV, 597.)

dit seigneur monta à cheval et entra dedans la ville et s'en vint tout au long de la rue Saint Jaques, et au petit pont, et de là au pont Notre Dame. Et rencontra sur le dit pont Michau de Lagler[1], prévost des marchans, qui avoit une banniere du Roy en la main, et estoit la dicte banniere de tapisserie et son chatelet[2]. Puis vint Gauvain Le Roy[3] dire à mon dit seigneur qu'il vouloit jouir de l'abolucion, et lui dist s'il lui plaisoit

1. Michel de Lallier fut nommé prévôt des marchands le lendemain de l'entrée des troupes royales à Paris, ou le 14 avril. (Archives nat., X^{1a} 1481, fol. 120 v°; Félibien, Hist. de Paris, IV, 597.)

2. Sic dans N, fol. 34 r°, S, fol. 69 r°, C, fol. 83 v°, dernière ligne; mais on lit dans B, fol. 20 r° : « Et sous le Chastelet vint Gauvain Le Ray luy dire que il voulloit jouir de l'abollucion... » Nous ne saurions accepter la variante du ms. B, car il est peu vraisemblable que Richemont, dans son trajet du pont Notre-Dame à la place de Grève (aujourd'hui place de l'Hôtel-de-Ville), ait passé sous les murs du Châtelet; en effet, d'après cette hypothèse, Richemont se serait d'abord dirigé à gauche, vers le Châtelet, pour revenir ensuite sur ses pas. Nous croyons que Richemont, à l'issue du pont Notre-Dame, tourna à droite et se rendit directement à la place de Grève. Par « châtelet, » il faut sans doute entendre la bordure ou garniture de la bannière de Gauvain Le Roy. « Châtelé, » en terme de blason, indique une bordure ou un lambel chargé de châteaux. Ce mot a été omis par Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 83; Buchon, p. 382[1]).

3. Gauvain Le Roy, précédemment capitaine de Montlhéry, pour le Roi d'Angleterre; le 13 novembre 1434, à l'occasion de son mariage avec Marguerite de Chevreuse, Henri VI fit don aux futurs époux de la seigneurie de Bois-Malesherbes et de divers hôtels. (Archives nat., JJ 175, pièce 375.) Gauvain Le Roy dut en effet tenir sa promesse, comme le dit Gruel quelques lignes plus loin; il devint alors capitaine de Chevreuse pour Charles VII, et nous voyons, à la même époque, un Guillaume Le Roy, sans doute son parent, remplir les fonctions de capitaine de Montlhéry. (Pièce just. XXVII.)

les laisser aller qu'il mettroit en sa main Marcoursy[1], Chevereuze[2] et Montheri[3]. Et lors mon dit seigneur lui dist : « Par votre foy que ainsi ferés que le dictes. » Et lors le dit Gauvain jura que ainsi le feroit, et tint ce qu'il avoit promis. Et requist à mon dit seigneur qu'il lui pleut lui bailler ung heraut ou poursuivant pour le faire passer par les gens de mon dit seigneur; et lors il lui bailla ung heraud nommé Partenay, lequel le mena à Monthery.

Puis mon dit seigneur vint jusques en Grieve; et on lui vint dire que les Angloys estoient retirez en la Bastille, et que ses gens estoient au guet devant la dicte Bastille et que tout estoit bien, et qu'il lui pleut tirer vers le quartier des Halles pour les reconforter; et lors il y alla; et fut jusques devant Saint Innocent; et là on le fist menger des espices et boire devant l'ostel Jehan Aselin, son espicier de piecza[4]. Puis s'en vint à Notre Dame de Paris, et ouyt la messe tout armé; puis ceulx de Notre Dame lui firent menger des espices et boyre; car il jeunoit et estoit vendredi des feries de Pasques[5].

Chapitre LXV.

Comment monseigneur le connestable mist Paris en l'obeissance du Roy le xxe jour d'avril[1].

L'an mil CCCC XXXVI, en avril, s'en vint monseigneur le connestable, comme dit est, de Nostre Dame de Paris à la porte Baudes, et mist bon guet devant la Bastille; puis vint disner au Porc Espi, où il estoit logié. Et entretant qu'il disnoit, on lui vint dire que Pierres du Pan, son maistre d'ostel, estoit à la porte Saint Denis, et demandoit à entrer; et mon dit seigneur dist que on le laissast entrer. Et lors il vint à mon dit seigneur durant le disner, et lui dist que ceulx de la tour du Venin à Saint Denis se vouloient rendre à lui la vie sauve; et monseigneur lui dist qu'il les print. Et s'en retourna le dit Pierres du Pan à Saint Denis, et trouva le nepveu du prevost de Paris mort et tous ses gens bien environ VI^xx^.

Et la raison fut que quant noz gens oyrent sonner les cloches de Paris, tous ceulx qui estoient au siege de Saint Denis tirerent à Paris pour cuider entrer dedans; et quant ilz furent à la porte Saint Denis on ne les voult laisser entrer; car monseigneur le con-indiquée à cet article dans le registre; D. Lobineau et D. Morice commettent une erreur en ajoutant 1435; ce n'est pas la date exacte même d'après l'ancien style, puisque en 1436 Pâques fut le 8 avril. Les détails donnés ici par Gruel sont confirmés par l'extrait auquel nous renvoyons.

nestable l'avoit defendu, de paour qu'ilz feissent quelque mal; car c'estoient la pluspart de rotiers et de gens fort à entretenir. Et quant ceulx de la tour du Venin virent que noz gens estoient allez vers Paris, ilz se cuiderent sauver par le marays de Saint Denis; et ceulx qui avoient cuidé entrer à Paris, et avoient esté refusez, estoient tous enragés; et quant ilz arriverent au dit lieu de Saint Denis ilz trouverent que ceulx de la tour du Venin s'en alloient par le marays, lors chargerent sur eulx et n'eschapa homme qui ne fust mort.

Et celui jour qui fut le vendredi XXe d'avril l'an mil CCCC XXXVI[1] fut recouvrée en l'obeissance du Roy la bonne cité de Paris par monseigneur le connestable, et Saint Denis et Chevereuze et Marcoursy et Monthery, le pont de Saint Clou, le pont de Charanton[2].

Puis mon dit seigneur fist le guet devant la Bastille et les gens de sa maison; en laquelle Bastille estoit l'evesque de Terouanne et le sires d'Ouylebic et pluseurs autres jusques au nombre de mille à XII[c]. Et le lendemain il cuida emprunter de l'argent jusques à XV mille francs; et se vouloit obliger en telle forme que on vouloit paier dedans ung moys, et tout pour mettre le siege à la Bastille du costé devers les champs, et les gens d'armes ne se vouloient loger sans argent; et au partir il n'avoit eu que mille francs du Roy. Et ceulx de Paris lui dirent : « Monseigneur, s'ilz se veulent rendre ne les refusés pas; ce vous est belle chose d'avoir recouvré Paris; maintz connestables,

1. Gruel se trompe ici de huit jours; il a donné à la fin du chapitre précédent la date exacte de la reddition de Paris, le « vendredi des feries de Pasques », qui fut le 13 avril et non le 20.

et maintz mareschaulx ont esté autrefoiz chacés de Paris; prenés en gré ce que Dieu vous a donné. » Et quant il les ouyt parler, il les receut à composicion. Mais s'il eut eu argent de quoy souldoyer ses gens, il eut gaingné deux cens mille escuz. Puis s'en allerent par composicion, comme dit est[1]; et Dieu sache comme ceulx de Paris firent grant chiere et grant joye après qu'ilz furent delivrés des Angloys. Et croy que homme ne fut oncques mieulx amé à Paris que estoit mon dit seigneur[2].

Comment Poton, La Hyre et autres cuiderent prendre Gisors; mais Talbot les deslogea.

En celuy mois d'avril, bientost après fut faicte une entreprinse par Poton et La Hyre et Penensac et Jehan Dolon et Bouson[3] sur Gisors, et avoient soustenue[4], et le vindrent dire à monseigneur le connestable à

1. Les conditions de la capitulation de la Bastille furent réglées le dimanche 15 avril et les Anglais quittèrent la place le mardi 17 du même mois. Le Bourgeois de Paris affirme que le connétable reçut alors de fortes sommes des vaincus, ce qui ne semble pas être l'avis de Gruel. (Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, p. 318.)

2. Ce n'est pas absolument l'opinion du Bourgeois de Paris qui dit que « pour certain oncques puis l'entrée de Paris nulz des cappitaines ne fist quelque bien dont on doye aucunement parler, senon rober et pillier par nuyt et par jour ». Il n'a pas du reste une bien haute idée de la bravoure et des talents militaires du connétable. (Journal, p. 327, 340 et 346.)

3. Les éditeurs (cf. édit. Th. Godefroy, p. 85, Buchon, 383[1]) ont omis « Jehan Dolon et Bouson » qui sont mentionnés dans tous les mss. (N, fol. 35 v°; S, fol. 71 v°; B, fol. 20 v°; C, fol. 85 v°, ligne 2.)

Mais Talbot y vint qui les deslogea bien hastivement, et en y eut de mors et de prins et non gueres[1], mais ilz fuirent bien. Et mon dit seigneur s'en vint à Paris; Poton et La Hyre s'en allerent à Beauvoirs.

Et bientost après mon dit seigneur eut aucunes nouvelles de Rouan, et pour celle cause s'en alla à Beauvoirs, et assembla ce qu'il peut de gens d'armes et tira à Gerberay; et avoit mon dit seigneur le marechal de Rieux et tous ceulx de Caux; mais la chose ne se peut faire pour celle heure, et s'en revint mon dit seigneur le connestable à Beauvoirs, et de là à Pontaise; et les Angloys estoient en embusche sur le chemin et n'oserent fraper sur luy. Doncques mon dit seigneur vint à Pontaise, et de là à Paris.

Chapitre LXVII.

Comment monseigneur le connestable mist le siege à Creel.

En celuy an mil CCCC XXXVI, environ le premier jour de may fut advisé de mettre le siege a Creel, et assembla monseigneur le connestable ce qu'il peut de gens d'armes et y vint mettre le siege luy mesmes. Et avoit avecq luy monseigneur le bastard d'Orleans, et monseigneur de Rostelen, et monseigneur de l'Isle Adan et Poton et La Hyre et pluseurs autres capitaines. Toutesfoiz mon dit seigneur avoit charge du Roy de aller devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne pour le fait du Roy de Cecille, lequel estoit compaignon d'armes de monseigneur le connestable. Et pour sa delivrance laissa le siege et mist monseigneur le bastard son lieutenant, et se hasta de tirer devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne, pour ce qu'il faisoit son armée pour aller mettre le siege devant Calays ; et s'en alla en Picardie et trouva mon dit seigneur de Bourgoingne à Saint Homer, et fist tout ce qu'il peut pour le Roy de Cecille[1]. Puis print congié de monseigneur de Bourgoingne et se

1. Le voyage de Richemont en Picardie et en Artois eut lieu vers juin 1436, puisqu'il partit pendant le siège de Creil, qui dura environ un mois. Sa mission ne semble pas avoir eu de résultat immédiat ; car c'est seulement le 7 novembre 1436 que le Roi René obtint de Philippe le Bon des lettres de répit, qui lui rendaient une liberté provisoire. Richemont fit, au mois de décembre suivant, de nouvelles démarches auprès du duc de Bourgogne, et le 28 janvier 1437 fut signé à Lille le traité définitif de la délivrance du Roi de Sicile, qui dut subir les plus dures conditions.

offrit à luy pour aller au dit lieu de Calays, et de lui servir à troys mille combatans, qui pour lors estoient en Caux, et il le refusa. Et puis vint conduire monseigneur le connestable aux champs et luy monstra ses tentes et ses paveillons; et puis le mena veoir les Flamans qui estoient logez ou vau de Cassel[1]. Et Dieu saiche en quelles pompes ilz estoient quant mon dit seigneur parloit à eulx, en leur recommandant le fait de leur seigneur et les remerciant de leur bon vouloir.

Et puis s'en vint par Agincourt et devisa à ceulx qui là estoient comme la bataille avoit esté, et leur monstra en quel endroit il estoit et sa banniere et tous les grans seigneurs, et où estoient leurs bannieres, et où le Roy d'Angleterre estoit logié. Puis s'en vint à Hedin[2] et de là [à] Abeville; et là sceut que ceulx qu'il avoit laissez à Creel s'estoient levez de leur siege; puis s'en alla à Heu[3] et de là à Diepe pour mettre ordre es gens d'armes qui gastoient tout. Et tant qu'il y fut le senechal de Ponthieu manda la garnison de Heu, où estoit Olivier de Coitivi et le bastard Chapelle et Maturin Lescouet[4]. Et firent une entreprinse sur les Angloys du Et quant ilz furent près du Crotay, et la marée commencza à leur faillir, ilz faingnerent de mettre toute leur peine de recouvrer la mer. Et lors quant les Angloys les virent en ceste necessité, ilz cuiderent que ce fust à bon escient et saillirent du Crotay à toute puissance et vindrent à pié et à cheval à ce bateau, et quant ilz les trouverent ainsi garniz ilz furent bien esbahiz. Et ceulx qui estoient en embusche saillirent de tous coustés, et en effect n'en eschapa riens, et furent tous mors et prins, et les chacerent en telle maniere qu'ilz gaingnerent la ville du Crotay; car il n'estoit demouré comme riens dedans; et noz ditz gens tindrent la ville et le firent scavoir à monseigneur, lequel vint veoir la place. Les mss. C et B sont aussi pris en défaut, puisqu'ils donnent cette leçon erronée « sénéchal de Poitou ». Il s'agit de Florimond de Brimeu, sénéchal de Ponthieu, qui était admis, le 3 octobre 1439, à prêter serment en cette qualité devant le Parlement de Paris. Sur tant envoya devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne à Saint Omer, pour scavoir si c'estoit son plaisir; et il respondit qu'il ne le feroit point à celle heure, jusques après le siege de Calays. Et sur tant mon dit seigneur s'en vint à Amiens et de là à Paris. Et missire Mondoc de Lansac et bien troys cens Angloys estoient en embusche et l'atendoient en chemin, et bien scavoient sa venue; et si n'avoit mon dit seigneur que xxx lances et ses archiers de son corps, et les ditz Angloys cuiderent que ce fust l'avant-garde de mon dit seigneur, et les laisserent passer sans mot dire.

Chapitre LXVIII.

Comment monseigneur le connestable fist venir madame de Guyenne à Paris.

Bientost après monseigneur le connestable se disposa pour aller devers le Roy, et partit de Paris et laissa monseigneur de Rostrelen son lieutenant[1], et s'en vint à Orleans; et de là tira à Loches devers le Roy, et eut bonne chiere[2]. Et lui dist le Roy qu'il

1. C'est sans doute en cette qualité que, même après le retour de Richemont, le seigneur de Rostrenen assistait le 12 décembre 1436 à la prestation du serment fait par divers Parisiens, jadis exilés par ordre du connétable, d'être désormais « bons et loyaux envers le Roy ». Et bientost après le duc Jehan le manda pour aller devers luy, et que monseigneur du Maine venoit devers lui à Ancenis; et incontinent mon dit seigneur y vint; et trouva le duc et monseigneur le conte[1] et madame la contesse et monseigneur du Maine, qui les vint veoir jusques à Ancenis. Puis après monseigneur s'en retourna à Partenay pour soy disposer de s'en aler à Paris; et entre la Toussains et la Saint Martin[2] s'en partit mon dit seigneur et tira devers le Roy, et fist venir madame de Guyenne à Orleans, qui l'attendit ou dit lieu d'Orleans. Et là se rendirent les presidens et seigneurs de Parlement, qui avoient tenu à Poictiers, et leurs femmes, et tout leur mesnage pour passer quant et mon dit seigneur. Et bientost après s'en vint mon dit seigneur, et partit d'Orleans, et tira à Yanville, et de là [à] Estempes; et là vindrent au-devant de lui monseigneur de Rostelen, Antoine de Chabannes, missire Jehan Fouquaut, Mahé Morillon, et belle compaignie de gens; et de là tira à Corbail, et puis à Paris et y sejourna celuy yver jusques à Pasques[3].

Comment monseigneur le connestable fist assaillir Beauvoirs en Brie et comme la place fut prinse.

L'an mil CCCC XXXVII, le jour de Pasques[1], vindrent nouvelles à monseigneur le connestable que ung nommé maistre Migler de Saux[2] fortifioit une place en Brie, nommée Beauvoirs[3], à quatre lieux de Meaux, qui pour lors estoit Angloys. Et incontinent que mon dit seigneur le sceut il fist monter à cheval missire Jehan de Malestroit et partie des gens de sa maison[4], et les archiers de son corps et allerent coucher à Ligny sur Marne; et là trouverent la garnison de Ligny, où estoit Mahé Morillon et missire Jehan Fouquaut, et mont y arriva avec Madame de Guyenne le 23 novembre, jour de saint Clément, suivant le Bourgeois de Paris (édit. Tuetey, p. 327), et assista à l'ouverture du Parlement, le 1er décembre 1436. Nous savons, d'autre part, qu'il était dans cette ville le 17 avril 1437, date à laquelle il ordonnait de délivrer quatre muids de sel à Alain Giron, bailli de Senlis. (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1268; Bibl. nat., Pièces originales, vol. 1336, dossier Giron, pièce 8; Archives nat., X1a 1481, fol. 122 r°; X1a 1482, fol. 2 r°.)

tirerent au dit lieu de Beauvoirs en Brie. Et s'i rendit le commandeur de Giresme et missire Denis de Chagli[1]; et arriverent noz ditz gens environ huyt heures, et incontinent donnerent l'assault. Et dura le dit assault tout le jour jusques à la nuyt bien tart; et croyés qu'il y eut bel assault; car en la fin n'y avoit plus de trait ne dehors ne dedans, et se desarmoient noz gens pour gecter des pierres. Et le landemain au matin fut faicte la composicion et se rendirent ceulx de la dicte place, leur vie sauve et poyant chacun ung marc d'argent; et baillerent en ostage maistre Migler de Saux, et troys autres Angloys, et furent amenez à Paris. Et monseigneur le connestable fist coupper la teste au dit maistre Migler de Saux; et partant furent les autres, qui estoient en ostage, delivrés et quittes de leur marc d'argent.

1. Denis de Chailly, chevalier, essaya vainement, avec l'aide de Jean Foucaut, d'entrer par surprise dans la ville de Meaux au commencement de 1430 (cf. ci-dessus, p. 103, note 2). Il enleva plusieurs places aux Anglais, notamment la ville et le château de Crécy, en Brie, dont il fut nommé capitaine et qu'il défendit contre les Anglais occupant la ville de Meaux. Il ravitailla Lagny-sur-Marne, assiégé par les Anglais, et prit le château de Chinon-sur-Loire, près Nevers, qu'il livra, sur l'ordre du Roi, au connétable de Richemont. Il devint conseiller et chambellan du Roi, bailli de Meaux, et Charles VII, pour le récompenser de ses éclatants services, lui donna, le 10 avril 1441, tous les revenus de la terre et seigneurie de Crécy, dont il conserva la garde. Comment monseigneur le connestable fist assaillir le Boys Malherbes et la place rendre.

L'an que desus[1], monseigneur le connestable alla devant le Boys Malherbes[2], et logea assés près en une petite place et y envoya les gens de sa maison et les archiers de son corps, et y eut belle escarmouche. Car ceulx de la place firent une saillie et fut chargé sur eulx en telle maniere que on entra quant et eulx en la basse court; mais par la force du trait et qu'il n'y avoit où se tauder, ne rien à couvert, se faillit retirer; et y eut de bien à quatre ou cincq mors. Et le landemain y vint monseigneur de la Suse et d'autres capitaines. Puis se rendit la dicte place du Bois Malherbes; et monseigneur le connestable s'en vint à Paris et de là tira devers le Roy et fist les diligences que le Roy vint mettre le siege à Montreol Faut Ionne[3].

S, fol. 75 v°, ligne 4 : « Celluy an mesmes mil quatre cens trante sept; » C, fol. 88 v° : « Et cel an mesme environ le premier jour de may mil IIIIc XXXVIII; » B, fol. 22 v° : « Et celuy en mesme, environ le premier jour de may, mil quatre cens trente et huict. » Ces deux derniers mss., qui présentent dans la chronologie une erreur d'une année, fixent la date du mois au 1er mai, mention que l'on retrouve dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 92; Buchon, 384 2); le ms. de Tournai la donnait donc aussi, et sans erreur sur l'année; car « l'an que dessus » désigne bien 1437.

(Littré, Dictionnaire de la langue française, édit. 1869, USANCE, n° 2.) La leçon du ms. B, « car ils estoient absens, » est évidemment erronée.

1. Gruel veut ici louer l'activité déployée par son maitre; mais la phrase pourrait être interprétée d'une manière beaucoup moins élogieuse. Richemont, en effet, opéra des virements de fonds que le Parlement eut quelque peine à consentir : il se fit attribuer, le 10 mai 1437, pour la solde de ses troupes, une somme d'argent déposée entre les mains de Regnault de Thumery, changeur de Paris, par suite d'un procès pendant devant la Cour. (Pièce just. XXXI.) C'est probablement de cette source que provenaient les 637 livres 10 sols tournois délivrées le 17 mai suivant par le

Le Roy se rendit à Bray sur Seine[1] et vint du cousté devers le chasteau mettre une bastille à une petite montaigne qui y est et se logea bien; et mon dit seigneur et monseigneur de la Marche se vindrent logier devers la ville en ung beau pré, ainsi comme autour[2]. Et lors ordenna mon dit seigneur son guet à cheval et à pié, ne homme ne se desarma; et celle nuyt y avoit bien v^c^ maineuvres; et avant que le jour fust grant il avoit fait faire ung grant fossé bien long et pluseurs taudeis sur treteaux, pour garder les gens d'armes du trait, car la place estoit bien artillée. Et le landemain chacun commencza à soy loger; puis arriva monseigneur le bastard d'Orleans et pluseurs autres capitaines. Et le segond jour fut fait ung autre fossé près de la place, et puis commencza l'en à faire de grandes aproches. Et bientost après on vint logier sur les fossés, et furent faictes mines couvertes et descouvertes; et fut partie de la riviere d'Yonne destour-

Le membre de phrase « ainsi comme, autour », omis par les éditeurs (édit. 1622, p. 94; Buchon, p. 385[1]), se trouve donc dans tous les manuscrits. « Ainsi comme » est sans doute pris dans le sens moderne de « tel que », sans ordre, sans apprêt.

Et y eut ung assault, pour essayer si l'eaue estoit parfonde, et commencza pour une fusée qui fut tirée d'un des gens d'armes de monseigneur, et mist le feu en la ville très fort et brula pluseurs maisons. Et cuidoit on assaillir à bon escient; mais la riviere estoit encores trop grande, et n'y eut gueres de gens qui passassent jusques au pié du mur. Toutesfoiz monseigneur de Rostelen y passa et le grant Feré[2], et Eustache Gruel, et ung homme d'armes de monseigneur de la Marche qui fut mort et faillit se retirer.

Chapitre LXXI.

Comment le Roy fist son entrée à Paris.

L'an mil CCCC XXX huyt[2], en octobre, le Roy fist son entrée à Paris; et lui et tous ses gens estoient armez, et y fut tres bien receu et à grant joie; et lui fist on grant chiere, et là fist la feste de Toussaints. Et estoient avecques le Roy monseigneur le Daulphin, monseigneur le connestable, monseigneur du Maine, monseigneur de la Marche, monseigneur de Vandosme, monseigneur le bastard d'Orleans, et grant nombre de seigneurs et capitaines. Et monseigneur de la Marche fist le service de monseigneur le conte d'Armi-mont et de celui de Madame de Guyenne, qui en fit un de ses exécuteurs testamentaires. (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 8819, fol. 51 v°; Pièce just. XXVII; Cosneau, le Connétable de Richemont, p. 596.)

1. La ville de Montereau fut prise d'assaut le jeudi 10 octobre 1437, et le 22 du même mois le capitaine anglais Thomas Guérard rendit le château. (Pièce just. XXXIII.)

2. Sic dans N, fol. 39 v°; S, fol. 78 r°; C, fol. 90 v°; B, fol. 24 v°, et dans les éditions. Cette date est erronée; on sait que Charles VII fit son entrée à Paris le mardi 12 novembre 1437, par conséquent après la Toussaint et un an plus tôt que ne le rapporte Gruel. (D. Félibien, Preuves de l'Hist. de Paris, IV, 598; Monstrelet, V, 301; Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, p. 335; cf. Berry, dans Godefroy, p. 398, etc.)

gnac son pere, et fut à Saint Martin des Champs. Et y furent le Roy et monseigneur le Daulphin et tous les seigneurs desus nommez; puis on fist porter son dit pere en Armignac à grant solennité.

Bientost après le Roy se partit de Paris et tira à Orleans, et de là à Tours; et monseigneur le connestable demoura à Paris; et bientost après tira en Champaigne et jusques à Troyes, dont il avoit le gouvernement[1]. Et lui furent faictes pluseurs plaintes d'un capitaine nommé Bouson de Failles[2], qui avoit fait des maulx sans nombre, et leur faisoit de jour en jour. Et pour ceste cause mon dit seigneur le voult faire prendre en la ville de Troyes; et le dit Bouson fut

1. Le 1er décembre 1437, le connétable contresignait, à Paris, une ordonnance de Charles VII sur les blasphémateurs. Madame de Guyenne se trouvait également à Paris; quelques mois plus tard, le 23 avril 1438, elle adressait au Parlement une requête pour obtenir l'élargissement de son parent Philippe de Vienne, se disant évêque de Langres, et alors détenu prisonnier. Vers le mois de juillet, Richemont reçut à Paris des messagers de la ville de Troyes qui venaient se plaindre des gens de guerre. C'est sans doute peu après qu'il se rendit en Champagne. (Ordonnances, XIII, 249; Arch. nat., X1a 1482, fol. 74 r°, 75 r° et v°; Pièce just. XXXV.)

2. Bouzon de Failles, ou plutôt de Fages, écuyer gascon, qui défendit Montargis en 1427 et devint bailli de cette ville; il prit part à la défense d'Orléans en 1428-1429; il reçut 200 l. t. par lettres du Roi en date du 15 janvier 1429; dans un acte du 20 septembre 1433, qui porte sa signature originale, aux archives de Troyes, il se qualifie de bailli de Montargis et capitaine de Méry. (Vallet de Viriville, Hist. de Charles VII, t. II, p. 17-18; compte d'Hemon Raguier publié par Loiseleur dans le Compte des dépenses faites par Charles VII pour secourir Orléans pendant le siège de 1428, Orléans, 1868, in-8°, p. 177, 178, 181 et 201; document des archives de Troyes, cité dans les manuscrits Vallet de Viriville, Fr. nouv. acq. 5085, à Bouzon de Fages.)

averti et monta à cheval hastivement pour cuider recouvrer la place de Nogent; mais monseigneur le fist chacer si de près par le prevost des mareschaux et autres de sa maison qu'il fut prins et admené à Troyes. Et incontinent fut fait son procès par les gens de la justice et le prevost des mareschaux, et incontinent fut executé et gecté en la riviere.

Pareillement ung capitaine escossoys nommé Bouays Glavy, qui faisoit tous les maulx que on pourroit dire, mon dit seigneur fist prendre et faire son procès et le fist pendre[1]. Desquelz les Gascons et Escossoys firent grant plainte et grant bruyt devers le Roy et donnerent à mon dit seigneur le connestable de grans menaces en son absence; mais quant il fut arrivé devers [le] Roy, ceulx qui l'avoient menacé furent plus humbles vers lui que tous les autres et s'agenoilloient bien, et plus n'en oserent parler[2].

Puis s'en vint monseigneur à Paris, et y fut une partie de celui yver; et y eut grant famine, puis l'esté après grant mortalité. Et environ le moys d'aoust, l'an mil IIII^{c} XXXIX[3], mon dit seigneur voulut aller

2. Le duc de Bourgogne se plaignit également des ravages opérés dans ses États par les hommes d'armes. Le 15 septembre 1438, le Roi, alors à Saint-Aignan en Berry, ordonna aux capitaines de compagnies, notamment au bâtard de Bourbon, à Saintrailles, Gauthier de Brussac, Antoine de Chabannes, Floquet, Blanchefort, d'évacuer la Bourgogne et de cesser leurs pilleries. loger au boys de Viesaine[1] pour fuir la dicte mortalité; mais le lieutenant du boys de Viesaine nommé Rogier de Pierrefrite ne voult le mettre dedans, et tenoit la dicte place pour monseigneur de Bourbon. Pareillement ceulx de Beauté[2] lui firent refus de la place du dit lieu de Beauté, et y envoya mon dit seigneur des gens d'armes, et voult y faire mener de l'artillerie; et incontinent se rendirent à sa volenté; et furent admenez à Paris tous liez en ung chariot et le cordel au coul; mais madame de Guyenne leur sauva la vie à sa priere.

Puis s'en alla monseigneur et madame de Guyenne logier à Saint Mor[3], et puis au pont de Charanton[4], et y furent une piece, tant que la mort se mist es gens de sa maison et faillit desloger; et s'en alla mon dit seigneur à Saincte Menehou, et ma dicte damme après jusques à Brey sur Saine[5], et mourut sa niepce madamoiselle Ysabeau, fille de monseigneur d'Estempes. Puis s'en revint mon dit seigneur environ Noel, et estoit la mortalité cessée; et la vigile de Noel arriva ma dicte dame de Guyenne à Paris.

Et bientost après le duc Jehan envoya Jehan de Vennes devers monseigneur le connestable, luy priant qu'il voulsist venir devers luy pour aucunes suspeczons et ymaginacions qu'il avoit sur monseigneur de Laval sans cause. Et vint monseigneur le connestable devers lui au chasteau d'Auray, et fist incontinent l'apointement. Puis s'en revint à Paris et y sejourna par ung temps.

Après, le Roy de Cecille[1] lui fist prier qu'il voulsist aller devers monseigneur de Bourgoingne pour sa delivrance; aussi avoit-il charge de par le Roy de ce faire, et il le fist de bon cuer, car ilz estoient freres d'armes; et tira devers monseigneur de Bourgoigne à Lisle, et y fut longtemps. Puis s'en vint à Paris; et quant il fut à Senlis, il sceut que les Angloys avoient prins Pontaise d'eschelle sur monseigneur de l'Isle Adan, et fut le mardi gras[2], et en estoit le dit seigneur de l'Isle Adan capitaine, et y estoit monseigneur de Varanbont et beaucoup de gens de bien. CHAPITRE LXXII.

Comment le damiseau de Commercy desconfist pluseurs des gens de monseigneur le connestable, et comment le siege fut mis à Meaux.

L'an mil CCCC [trante et neuf][1], noz gens d'armes estoient allez vivre en Champaigne pour ce qu'ilz n'estoient point poyez, les uns o le Sangler d'Ardaine pour assieger Chavancy[2], c'est assavoir : missire Jehan de Malestroit, missire Geoffroy de Couvran, lesquelz avoient belle compaignie. Et Geffroy Morillon, Alain Giron et Pierres Daugi estoient es marches de Barroys; et le damiseau de Commercy les vint trouver en ung logeis sans guet, et les desconfist et tua la pluspart et fist tuer.

En celuy an[3] mesmes monseigneur le connestable assembla gens pour faire le gast à Meaux, et y alla en

1. Le ms. N, fol. 41 r°, donne : « L'an mil CCCC quarante, » leçon reproduite par Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 99; Buchon, p. 387[1]). Nous restituons la date véritable d'après les mss. S, fol. 80 v°, C, fol. 92 r°, B, fol. 26 v°. On trouve dans ce dernier ms. une singulière variante : « L'an mil quatre cens trante neuf nos gens d'armes estoient huict cens en campagne, pour ce que ilz n'estoient poinct payez. » La variante incompréhensible fournie par le ms. B dérive sans doute d'un texte où le mot « vivre » était écrit, comme dans le ms. C, avec un e suscrit, abréviation que le copiste de B a traduite par « huict cens ».

Et avoit envoyé de par luy et de par ceulx de Paris devers le Roy luy supplier que il y voulsist pourveoir, ou que la bonne ville de Paris et tout le païs auroit trop à souffrir. Et assés tost après le Roy lui envoya missire Ouachelin de la Tour[1] et Olivier Fretart qui lui vindrent dire que le Roy vouloit qu'il meist le siege à Meaux, et mandoit aux capitaines qu'ilz tirassent à Paris devers monseigneur. Et les desus nommez venoient pour faire les monstres ; et croy que ce fut une des grans joyes que je lui veisse oncques avoir. Et aussitost se partit pour aller à Courbail, où les capitaines se rendirent, et misdrent jour de se rendre à monseigneur entre Paris et Meaux. Et se partit mon dit seigneur de Paris luy et les gens de sa maison, entre lesquelz estoient monseigneur de Chasteillon, monseigneur de Rostrelen, et monseigneur de Trousy[2] et les autres

Et quant le siege y eut esté environ xx jours, monseigneur le connestable sceut au certain que les Angloys le venoient combatre; et croyés qu'il scavoit toutes les nouvelles de leur partement de Rouan; car il avoit bonnes espies, et les payoit bien, et sceut qu'ilz estoient passez à Pontaise et estoient en l'Isle de France. Et incontinent, il manda les capitaines et leur dist des nouvelles, et delibera d'assaillir dès le landemain la ville, et que chacun archier porteroit à l'assault la moitié de sa trousse, et l'autre moitié seroit pour combatre. Et avoit en volenté, ou cas qu'il ne prendroit la ville, d'aler au-devant des Angloys en Antouillet[1], et de leur garder le passage.

Le mecredi[2] environ prime fut donné l'assault et ne dura pas demie heure, et croy fermement que Dieu y fist plus pour l'amour de monseigneur et du peuple que ne firent les gens d'armes; car il ne coustoit riens à monter sur la muraille. Et tant que une foiz assembla le Conseil, et fut deliberé de se deffaire et descharger du gouvernement de France et d'entre les rivieres, et d'aller ou envoyer devers le Roy pour celle cause. Et le landemain au matin vint le prieur des Chartreux de Paris devers luy et le trouva tout seul en la chapelle de son hostel, et demanda au dit prieur : « Beau Pere que vous fault-il? » Et le prieur luy dist qu'il vouloit parler à monseigneur le connestable, et monseigneur lui dist que c'estoit il. Et le dit prieur luy dist : « Pardonnés moy, monseigneur, je ne vous congnoissoie pas; je veulx parler à vous, s'il vous plaist. » Et il luy dist que volentiers.

Et lors il commencza à luy dire : « Monseigneur, vous tenistes hier Conseil, et deliberastes de vous descharger du gouvernement et charge que avés par decza. » Et lors monseigneur s'eschauffa et lui dist : « Comment le scavés vous; qui le vous a dit? » Et cuida monseigneur que aucun du Conseil le luy eut dit. Et lors le prieur lui dist : « Monseigneur, je ne le scey point par homme de votre Conseil; je le scey par homme certain; et ne vous donnés point de malaise qui le m'a dit; car ce a esté ung de mes Freres. » Et lui dist : « Monseigneur, ne le faictes point; car Dieu vous aidera et ne vous soussiés. » Et monseigneur lui dist : « Ha, beau Pere, comment se pourroit-il faire? Le Roy ne me veult aider ne bailler gens ne argent; et les gens d'armes me héent, pour ce que j'en fais justice, et ne me veullent obeir. » Et lors le prieur luy dist : « Monseigneur, ilz feront ce que vous vouldrés ; et le Roy vous mandera que allez mettre le siege à Meaux, et vous envoyera gens et argent. » Et mon dit seigneur luy dist : « Ha, beau Pere, Meaux est si forte ; comment se pourroit-il faire? Le Roy d'Angleterre y fut IX moys devant. » Et le prieur lui dist : « Monseigneur, ne vous soussiés, vous n'y serés pas tant; ayés toujours bonne esperance en Dieu, et il vous aidera; soyés tousjours humble, et ne vous orgueillisés point ; vous le prendrés bientost ; voz gens s'enorgueilliront, puis auront ung peu à souffrir; mais vous en viendrés à votre honneur. »

Puis après monseigneur lui pria qu'il lui monstrast le Chartreux, et il luy dist que si feroit-il. Et le landemain mon dit seigneur alla ouir la messe aux Chartreux ; et le prieur fist venir touz les Freres devant luy. Puis après mon dit seigneur dist au prieur : « Vous m'avoyés promis de me monstrer celui qui vous a dit ce que m'avés dit. » Et le prieur lui dist : « Vous l'avez veu, autrement ne le voirés-vous. » Puis longtemps après mon dit seigneur fist tant que les Chartreux de Nantes furent fondez du duc Françoys et de luy ; puis y vint Frere Hervé du Pont, et fut le premier prieur ; et fut celui qui eut ceste revelacion, comme depuis a esté sceu au certain, et est enterré aux Chartreux.

Et pour revenir au propos de la ville de Meaux, qui fut prinse ainsi legierement, le dit Chartreux dist à mon dit seigneur que s'il vouloit tousjours estre bien obeissant à Dieu que Dieu luy aideroit en toutes ses necessités; mais que tousjours fust humble soubs la main de Dieu sans se orgueillir. Bien lui dist que ses gens s'enorgueilliroient, dont aucuns auroient à souffrir, et cela fut verité[1]. Si furent à cest assault mors et prins beaucoup d'Angloys. Et ce jour mesmes ceulx du Marchié offrirent de le rendre à mon dit seigneur, par ainsi qu'il delivreroit troys hommes qu'ilz demandoient, qui estoient prinsonniers de ce jour, c'est assavoir : le bastard de Tien, baillif de Meaux, et Pierre Care et ung autre; mais Blanchefort[2] qui là estoit rompit ce traictié, et La Hire et Antoyne de Chabannes qui estoient arrivez le jour de l'assault. Et

1. Le passage précédent, depuis « le dit Chartreux » (cf. p. 149, ligne 30) jusqu'à « si furent à cest assault », fait défaut dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 104; Buchon, p. 388 2), mais se trouve dans tous les manuscrits; C et B présentent néanmoins dans cet endroit une lacune considérable : après ces mots « car il ne coustoit rien à monter en hault sur la muraille » (C, fol. 93 v°; B, fol. 28 r°) viennent ceux-ci : « Et aussy avant que il entreprint de mettre le siege, le Chartreux [dont il n'y a pas de mention antérieure dans ces mss.] luy dist que... » Les copistes passent donc ce qui concerne les pilleries des gens d'armes et tout le dialogue entre Richemont et le prieur des Chartreux de Paris.

2. Jean de Blanchefort, seigneur de Fourras, capitaine de Breteuil, lieutenant du sire de Boussac en décembre 1432, fut l'un des chefs de guerre auxquels le connétable défendit expressément de ravager les domaines appartenant au chapitre de Verdun. Il obtint de Charles VII, en mars 1446, une lettre de rémission pour toutes les pilleries qu'il avait faites ou tolérées. C'est sans doute lui qui est désigné par Mathieu d'Escouchy (Chronique, édit. Beaucourt, I, 290) comme ayant trouvé la mort au siège de Saint-Sauveur-le-Vicomte en 1450. (Bibl. nat., ms. Duchesne, vol. 70, fol. 283 v°; Pièce just. XXVIII; Arch. nat., JJ 177, fol. 118 v°.) On trouve dans le ms. fr. 20685, p. 494 et 502, à la Bibl. nat., plusieurs mentions d'un autre Jean de Blanchefort, maréchal des logis du Roi vers 1470.)

failloit que les Angloys rendissent le petit Blanchefort[1], qui estoit prinsonnier, et par ainsi fut rompu le traictié. Et aussi ung traitre Gascon, nommé Jehan de la Fuyte dist aux Angloys qu'ilz ne se rendissent point, et que leur secours venoit; et puis monseigneur l'en paya bien, quant il sceut son fait au certain; car il luy fist trencher la teste. Puis fist mon dit seigneur trencher les testes au baillif de Meaux et à Pierres Care et à ung autre, cuidant que ce fussent Francoys[2], dont depuis s'en repentit.

Et le semadi ensuyvant[3] vigile Nostre Dame de my-aougst, arriverent les Angloys bien VIIIm combatans ou plus, dont les chiefz ensuivent : le conte de Sombresset, lieutenant du Roy d'Angleterre, le conte Dourset, le sire de Talbot, le sire de Scalles et missire Richard Doudeville[4], et pluseurs capitaines et baillifz,

1. Nous ne savons pas exactement quels liens de parenté unissaient le petit Blanchefort et Jean de Blanchefort; le premier fut tué à l'assaut du château de Saint-Sever en 1442. (Monstrelet, édit. Douët-d'Arcq, VI, 54.)

2. S, fol. 84 r° : « Cuydant que ce fussent tous Françoys; » B, fol. 28 v° : « Cuydant qu'ilz fussent tretous Françoys. » Cette mention, supprimée par Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 105; Buchon, p. 388 [2]), se trouve aussi dans C, fol. 94 r°, ligne 9. Le bâtard de Thien, zélé partisan de la cause bourguignonne, défendit en 1417 Senlis contre les troupes royales commandées par le comte d'Armagnac et, en 1421, la ville de Chartres contre l'armée du Dauphin. Après la mort de Charles VI, à la fin de 1422, on le trouve à Paris au service du duc de Bedford. (Geste des nobles, édit. et monseigneur n'avoit que IX^c pais. Et vindrent les ditz Angloys logier sur la riviere de Marne, et avoient des bateaux de cuir, et vindrent passer en l'isle du Marchié, et ceulx du Marchié saillirent et vindrent sur la riviere et misdrent des gens dedans le dit Marchié et ceulx du Marchié en misdrent dehors et n'y scavoit-on mettre remide. Et celle nuyt monseigneur assembla les capitaines et furent d'opinion que on mettroit des gens dedans l'isle, et monseigneur debatoit le contraire, toutesfoiz se tint-il à l'opinion des aultres. Et celle nuyt on y bouta les gens de Olivier de Coitivi et des maineuvres pour se fortifier pour le trait de ceulx de dehors, et aussi y menerent des pipes. Et le dymenche au matin La Hire estoit prest et beaucoup de gens de bien pour aller à l'escarmousche sur les Angloys.

Et cependant les ditz Angloys vindrent sur la riviere bien deux mille archiers, qui tous tiroient à une foiz sur noz gens. Et ceulx du Marchié saillirent sur noz ditz gens, et nous avions deux fonsés[1] armez, qui vindrent pour cuider secourir nos ditz gens, qui furent tellement chargez de trait qu'ilz tuerent tous ceulx qui les gouvernoient, et menerent[2] les mariniers et tous ceux qui estoient dedans les fonsés en telle maniere que les Angloys gaingnerent les ditz fonsés, et vindrent passer sur noz gens en la dicte ysle; et ceulx du Marchié saillirent à toute puissance, et furent tous noz gens mors et noyés ceulx qui estoient en l'isle[1]. Et beaucoup de gens de guerre qui estoient en la ville cuiderent s'en aller faingnans de vouloir aler à l'escarmousche, si n'eut esté monseigneur le connestable qui s'en apparceut, et fist clorre les portes, et mist es deux portes des gens de sa maison, monseigneur de Chasteillon à l'une, et à l'autre monseigneur de Rostrelen, pour garder qu'il ne saillist rien. Et au pont devers le Marchié mist Bourgeoys et Mahé Morillon, Jehan Budes, de la Barre et Guillaume Gruel. Et incontinent Le Bourgoys fist sayer le pont et les moulins[2]; puis s'en vindrent les desus nommés à la porte devers Paris, dont mon dit seigneur de Rostrelen et les gens de l'ostel de monseigneur avoient la garde, et eut belle escarmousche à pié, et y fut blecié Olivier de Coetivi.

1. « Foncet » ou « fonce » était le nom d'un bateau de rivière parfois de dimensions très grandes. (Littré, Dictionnaire de la langue française, 1863, I, 1713.) S, fol. 85 r°, ligne 3 : « ... et nous avions deux fossez armez...; » dans C, fol. 94 v°, ligne 10, on lisait d'abord « fossoiez », mot raturé et remplacé par un autre mal écrit qui parait être la leçon de B, fol. 29 v°, ligne 5 : « ... et nous avions deux fustes armées... » Dans le reste de la phrase les trois mss. S, C, B donnent la même variante « fossez ».

Les Angloys furent environ troys jours logez devant Meaux, et changerent la garnison du Marchié, et y misdrent missire Guillaume Chambrelan et bien CCCC Angloys pour ferir et leur promisdrent d'aler

Les deux lignes qui précèdent, depuis « et ceulx du Marchié... », manquent dans B, fol. 29 v°; la mention « ceulx qui estoient en l'isle », qui précise la pensée du chroniqueur, fait défaut dans les éditions (édit. Th. Godefroy, p. 106; Buchon, 389[1]) et se trouve dans S, fol. 85 r°, et dans C, fol. 94 v°.

prendre Crepi en Valays[1] et aporter tous les vivres et contre-assieger monseigneur le connestable. Puis mon dit seigneur sceut leur entreprinse et envoya dedans Crepi Olivier de Bron[2] et d'autres capitaines, et fut leur entreprinse rompue; si leur convint changer propos, et n'avoient plus nulz vivres, et leur convint s'en aller vers Normandie. Et aussitost qu'ilz furent partiz on commencza à faire grant guerre et grant diligence, et bientost firent composicion, et au bout de XV jours fut le Marchié rendu à monseigneur[3].

Puis s'en vint à Paris devers le Roy qui lui fist grant chiere, et estoient avec le Roy : monseigneur le Daulphin, monseigneur de Bourbon, monseigneur du Maine, monseigneur de la Marche, monseigneur de Heu et pluseurs autres seigneurs; et y eut fait grans chieres à Paris; et y eut quatre Angloys qui firent armes à quatre Françoys.

Assés tost après, le Roy se partit de Paris et s'en alla à Orleans[4] et y fist une assemblée des seigneurs de son sang et des prelas du Royaume; les uns pour debatre la prematique sanxion, les autres pour debatre la guerre ou la paix en la maniere que les Angloys demandoient.

Et durant ce Conseil il envoya monseigneur le connestable en Normandie pour faire la guerre, et grant nombre de gens tenans les champs, qui point n'estoient souldoyés, et s'i rendit monseigneur d'Alenczon. Et par le conseil de beaucoup de gens misdrent le siege à Avranches, sans etre pourveuz d'artillerie ne maineuvres ne argent; et estoit à Noel[1]; et y vint la puissance des Angloys estans en Normandie, et furent par troys jours les uns devant les autres; et y avoit entre les Françoys et les Angloys une riviere bien petite[2]; et tous les jours noz gens cuidoient combatre. Et y eut fait pluseurs chevaliers; et de la maison de monseigneur fut fait celui jour chevalier monseigneur le bastard de Bretaigne[3], missire Raoul Gruel et missire Bertrand Millon. Et comme noz gens cuiderent passer celle riviere, il s'i noya deux ou troys gens de bien qui s'enliserent[4], et ne peut-on passer. Et demorerent

1. D'après la Chronique du Mont-Saint-Michel, le siège fut mis dès le 30 novembre 1439 (I, 40); le connétable était certainement établi devant Avranches avant le 20 décembre; il fut obligé de lever le siège le 23 décembre. les ditz Angloys en bataille d'un costé et noz gens d'autre costé[1]. Et quant ce venoit au soir tout le monde s'en aloit aux villages coucher et loger leurs chevaulx, car vous scavés que les Françoys plaingnent moult leurs chevaulx[2]. Et vous certifie qu'il estoit telle nuyt qu'il ne demouroit pas à mon dit seigneur le connestable CCCC combatans; et Dieu sache qu'il y endura.

Et d'une nuyt les Angloys vindrent gaingner ung gué, et le trouverent endroit la ville d'Avranches, qui jamais n'avoit esté trouvé; et par la vindrent gaingner la ville, et prindrent Auffroy Prevost et aucuns de noz gens qui faisoient le guet devant la dicte ville d'Avranches; et les autres se retirerent à la bataille qui estoit loign de là. Et quant noz gens sceurent que les Angloys estoient en la ville, tout le monde commencza à tirer en Bretaigne sans ordennance, et mon dit seigneur le connestable demoura à bien peu de gens. Et lui vindrent dire Antoyne de Chabannes et Blanchefort que s'il ne s'en alloit qu'il demourroit tout seul, et que de tous leurs gens n'en avoient pas dix, et que de leurs personnes demorroient o luy, et pareillement y vindrent pluseurs capitaines. Et en la fin, malgré lui, luy convint s'en venir à Doul et n'avoit pas

N, fol. 44 v°, contient ici un membre de phrase qui a été raturé à l'encre rouge : « Et furent troys jours et troys nuytz les uns devant les autres. » Le copiste l'aura sans doute supprimé parce que cette indication a déjà été donnée quelques lignes plus haut, et nous ne l'avons pas rétabli pour la même raison, bien qu'on le retrouve, sans rature, dans S, fol. 86 v°; B, fol. 30 v°; C, fol. 96 r°.

demouré o luy cent lances; et de là tira à Angiers devers le Roy. Et là trouva monseigneur le conte[1], qui estoit venu devers le Roy, et puis se partit assés tost pour aller en France, dont il avoit le gouvernement; et ja se commenczoit la Praguerie. Et mon dit seigneur print congié du Roy et s'en alloit à Paris.

Et cependant monseigneur le Daulphin estoit à Nyort, et monseigneur de la Marche estoit avecques lui de par le Roy; et y arriva monseigneur d'Alenczon, et fut mis monseigneur de la Marche hors de l'ostel de monseigneur le Daulphin, et y demoura mon dit seigneur d'Alenczon. Et dès ce que le Roy sceut ces nouvelles il envoya hastivement après monseigneur le connestable monseigneur de Gaucourt et Poton, qui trouverent mon dit seigneur le connestable à Boysgency, qui avoit passé par Blays, et y avoit esté abroqué[2] de monseigneur de Bourbon et de monseigneur de Vandosme et du bastard d'Orleans, qui fort cuida prendre parolles à mon dit seigneur le connestable pour trouver matiere de mettre la main sur luy; toutesfois il dissimula. Et si n'eut esté Anthoine de Chabannes, qui leur dist qu'ilz faisoient mal de le prendre, et que le païs de France, dont avoit le gouvernement, seroit perdu des Angloys, ilz l'eussent prins.

En celle nuyt monseigneur de Gaucourt et Poton, comme dit est, arriverent devers monseigneur le connestable, et lui dirent que le Roy lui prioit, non pas commandoit, qu'il vint hastivement, toutes choses cessées, devers lui; et lui dirent les nouvelles telles qu'elles estoient. Et incontinent mon dit seigneur fist abiller ung bateau et bien equipper de mariniers et d'archiers, et vint passer ceste nuyt par soubs le pont de Blays, et tant fist que bientost arriva à Emboyse devers le Roy, qui pas ne dormoit. Et quant on lui dist que c'estoit monseigneur le connestable qui estoit venu, il fist grant chiere, et dist puisqu'il avoit le connestable que plus ne craingnoit riens. Et avoit fait ruer jus[1] le petit Blanchefort, et ja avoit fait faire le chanfault[2] pour lui coupper la teste; et à la priere de monseigneur le connestable, le Roy lui pardonna, et depuis le servit bien.

Mon dit seigneur le connestable incontinent qu'il fut arrivé dist au Roy qu'il print les champs, et qu'il luy souvint du Roy Richard, et qu'il ne s'enfermast point en ville ne en place[3]. Et incontinent le Roy se mist sur les champs, et tout le monde tira devers lui et s'en alla à Poictiers. Et là lui vindrent les nouvelles que monseigneur d'Alenczon et Jehan de la Roche estoient entrez par traïson dedans Saint Maixent[1] et que ung portal de la ville tenoit pour le Roy. Et incontinent le Roy et mon dit seigneur envoyerent Yvon de Beaulieu leur dire que bientost auroient secours ceulx qui tenoient pour le Roy; et monterent à cheval le plus tost qu'ilz peurent et amenerent ce qu'ilz avoient de gens. Et aussitost que monseigneur d'Alenczon et Jehan de la Roche le sceurent, ilz deslogerent bien à haste, et laisserent des gens ou chasteau, qui bientost après furent renduz; et eurent ceulx qui estoient o Jehan de la Roche les testes trenchées, et monseigneur le connestable sauva à sa priere ceulx de monseigneur d'Alenczon.

Et bientost après le bastard d'Orleans vint crier merci au Roy de ce qu'il avoit voulu mettre la main en monseigneur le connestable, lequel eut son pardon et laissa les autres. Puis monseigneur le Daulphin et monseigneur d'Alenczon tirerent en Bourbonnays, et leur vint au-devant le sennechal de Bourbonnays, et Antoyne de Chabannes et autres à belle compaignie.

Puis le Roy laissa des frontières contre Nyort, là ou estoit Jehan de la Roche qui avoit avecques luy des Angloys. Après ce, le Roy, monseigneur le connestable, monseigneur du Mayne, monseigneur de la

Marche et pluseurs capitaines tirerent en Bourbonnays et en Auvergne. Et cependant mourut monseigneur de Rostrelen à Paris, qui estoit à monseigneur le connestable lieutenant en France[1]. Et tout celuy esté dura la guerre jusques en septembre; puis fut fait l'apointement. Et tira monseigneur le connestable à Paris[2], et fut ordenné certain nombre de gens pour aller secourir Herfleu là où le siege estoit[3]; et y estoient monseigneur de Heu, le bastard d'Orleans, monseigneur de Gaucourt et pluseurs autres capitaines. Et pour conduire les gens de monseigneur le connestable fut ordenné missire Gilles de Saint Symon. Et pour Dans S, fol. 89 r°, on lit en marge, à propos de la mort de monseigneur de Rostrenen à Paris : « Ceste mort fut le 12 aoust au dit an, ainsi que porte son épitaphe aux Jacobins de Paris. » Pierre de Rostrenen, chambellan du Roi, lieutenant du connétable, eut pour femme Jeanne de Kermech, qui mourut en 1449. 2. Le connétable fit à cette époque un voyage en Bretagne; il était à Vannes le 25 août 1440 et acceptait diverses seigneuries que le duc venait de lui donner; c'est alors qu'il prit le singulier engagement « de empescher... la venue, dessente et entrée au pays et dusché de Bretaigne des gens de guerre estans au service et obeissance de monseigneur le Roy ou d'autres... »; il promettait même de venir en personne à l'appel du duc. 3. Le Roi d'Angleterre, après avoir ordonné le 30 juillet 1440 de nouvelles levées de troupes, fit assiéger Harfleur par le comte Dorset, dès le mois suivant; d'après le Bourgeois de Paris, les troupes anglaises étaient encore en octobre devant la place qui fut alors obligée de se rendre. cestui voyage ne firent rien que faire la composicion de ceulx qui estoient à Herfleu.

En ce temps là, noz gens fortifierent Loviers[1] et Conches; et celui yver se passa ainsi, excepté que mon dit seigneur mist le siege à Saint Germain en Laye[2], que les Angloys avoyent avant prins d'eschielle, et bientost fut rendu à mon dit seigneur, lequel emprès fut requis d'aler en Champaigne, dont avoit le gouvernement[3].

Le Roy tira en Champaigne en celle saison et monseigneur le connestable tira devers luy pour oster les pilleries qui s'i faisoient, et pour mettre ordre sur les gens d'armes; et furent jusques à Vaucoleur[4], à Monteclere[5] et à Langres, et par toutes les marches de Champaigne, et osterent des capitaines et en misdrent d'autres[6]. Et de là vindrent à Bar sur Aulbe; et là vint

6. Charles VII était le 26 janvier 1441 à Troyes, d'où il adressait à ses capitaines de nouvelles lettres (cf. ci-dessus, p. 140, note 2) pour leur enjoindre de cesser leurs pilleries. Les Écor-

le bastard de Bourbon devers le Roy, lequel avoit fait beaucoup de maulx et soustenu à faire à ses gens. Et entre autres choses faisoit une assemblée de rotiers et les vouloit mener hors du Royaume sans congié du Roy, dont il fut mal content. En oultre ung homme et sa femme se vindrent plaindre au Roy et à monseigneur le connestable d'un grant oultrage que le dit bastard leur avoit fait; car il avoit forcé la femme sur l'omme, et puis l'avoit fait batre et decouper tant que c'estoit pitié à veoir[1]. Puis le Roy dist à monseigneur le connestable qu'il le fist prendre; ainsi le fist-il par le prévost des mareschaulx, et incontinent fut fait son procès et gecté en la riviere[2].

1. M. Tuetey est trop exclusif lorsqu'il prétend dans son ouvrage sur les Écorcheurs (I, 78) que M. de Barante a emprunté le récit de cette anecdote au Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, et non à la Chronique de Gruel; le savant historien des ducs de Bourgogne a nécessairement puisé à l'une et à l'autre source. (Cf. Histoire des ducs de Bourgogne, édit. Gachard, II, 24; Journal d'un bourgeois de Paris, p. 356.)

2. Dans S, en marge du fol. 90 r°, se trouvent deux notes écrites par deux mains différentes. Voici la première : « Justice du bastard de Bourbon faite par le comte de Richemont. » La deuxième note, dont l'encre est plus pâle et l'écriture tout autre, offre plus d'intérêt : « Ce bastard estoit nommé Alexandre, filz de Jean premier de ce nom, duc de Bourbon, et frere naturel du duc Charles, ayant esté voué à l'Eglise et de faict chanoine à Beaujeu. Il avoit aussy parlé trop licentieusement du Roy, oultre les courses et pilleries qu'il avoit faict avec ses soldatz dictz Escorcheurs, tellement qu'il fut impossible d'avoir sa grâce. Cecy fut l'an 1441. Belleforest dict qu'il fut noyé à Bar-sur-Seine. » On lit aussi dans la Chronique de Lorraine, publiée par D. Calmet (Hist. de Lorraine, édit. 1728, III, Preuves, p. 19), que le bâtard de Bourbon « fut saisiz à Bar-sur-Seine; » mais c'est là une erreur : le bâtard de Bourbon, qui venait de piller au mois de décembre

Puis s'en vindrent le Roy et monseigneur le connestable à Laan, et là vint madame de Bourgoingne devers le Roy, et y fut bien huyt jours; puis monseigneur le conneſtable la conduisit. Et en celle saison fut mis le siege à Montagu[1] et à Marle[2]; et là fut parlé et tractié du mariage de monseigneur du Maine et de madamoiselle de Saint Paoul. Puis le Roy et monseigneur le connestable s'en vindrent pour mettre le siege à Creel[3].

Chapitre LXXIII.

Comment le siege fut mis à Pontaise par le Roy et monseigneur le connestable.

Puis s'en vindrent à Paris et se disposerent de mettre le siege à Pontaise[1], et se partirent de Paris la vigile de la Penthecoste, et s'en alla mon dit seigneur loger à Argentoil[2], qui faisoit l'avant-garde[3], et le Roy logea à Saint Denis. Et le mardi des feries de la Pentecôste vindrent loger devant Pontaise et se logerent à Maubusson[4]; et environ quatre heures après medi, le Roy s'en retourna loger à Saint Denis, et monseigneur le Daulphin, monseigneur du Maine, monseigneur de la Marche, monseigneur de Heu, et tous les autres seigneurs; et ne demoura que monseigneur le connestable et le mareschal de Jaloingnes et Joachim Roaud[5] et Pregent de Coitivi, Poton, La Hyre et monseigneur de Mouy.

Et celui jour, environ cincq heures après medi, les Angloys firent une saillie sur la chaussée et cuiderent gaingner des couleuvrines et ribaudequins[1], qui estoient sur la dicte chaussée; mais ilz furent tellement chargez que on vint jusques à prendre les chaynes du pont; et en effect ne firent dempuis gueres de saillies; et si estoient bien deux mille bons combatans, toute l'eslite de Normandie, et estoit le sires de Scalles leur chief. Et celle nuyt, mon dit seigneur le connestable fist le guet et avoit soubs son enseigne CCCC lances; et avecques ce estoient à son guet monseigneur de Coitivi, Poton, La Hyre et monseigneur de Mouy; et en effect mon dit seigneur avoit bien VI^{c} lances et les archiers et gens de pié à son guet; et croy en verité qu'il y avoit bien près de deux mille combatans, et fut le plus beau guet que je vi oncques. Et Dieu sceit comme mon dit seigneur besoigna celle nuyt avant qu'il fust jour cler; car il avoit mis ses gens en seurté du trait de la ville, et fait faire fossés et taudeis tant que le guet du jour n'avoit plus garde[2]. 1. La couleuvrine était une espèce de canon très long et portant à une plus grande distance que les pièces ordinaires. (Sur les différents sens de ce mot, cf. Littré, Dict. de la langue française, édit. 1863, I, 841; La Curne de Sainte-Palaye, Dict. historique de l'ancien langage françois, édit. Favre, 1877, IV, 314.) Le ribaudequin était, suivant Du Cange (VII, 289), un petit chariot servant d'affût, qui finit par donner son nom au canon qu'il portait. On appelait aussi de ce nom de grands arcs de 12 à 15 pieds de long qui lançaient d'énormes javelots pouvant tuer plusieurs hommes d'un seul coup. (Littré, Dict. de la langue française, IV, 1721.)

tifie que c'estoit belle chose que veoir venir au matin le guet qui venoit lever l'autre guet; car tous les champs estoient couvers de gens d'armes qui alloient et venoient. Et bientost après monseigneur fist asseoir l'artillerie pour batre le boulevert et le pont; et le dymenche fut donné ung assault en boulevert pour veoir la contenance des Angloys, et se defendirent tres bien; aussi n'avoient-ilz à defendre que celui boulevert; et avoient fait pontz de bateaux des deux costés du pont, et venoient par ung cousté refreschir leurs gens, et par l'autre costé retiroient les blecez. Et ce jour ne fut point prins le dit boulevert et convint se retirer, et perdismes beaucoup de gens mors et blecez. Les Angloys firent ce jour deux bannerés[1] et pluseurs chevaliers; puis fut la baterie si grande que le mardi après leur faillit abandonner le dit boulevert, et celui mardi entrerent noz gens dedans. Et quant le dit boulevert fut prins, le Roy et monseigneur le Daulphin, et tous les autres seigneurs vindrent loger à Maubusson. Puis monseigneur du Maine qui avoit belle compaignie y vint; et y estoit Joachim Rouaud lieutenant, qui assembla monseigneur de Coitivi, Poton, La Hyre, missire Pierres de Brezé[2], Floquet, Penen-sac et Olivier de Coitivi, qui estoit lieutenant de monseigneur le connestable, et estoient bien XII^c^ lances. Et fut fait ung pont sur la riviere d'Oyse, et deux bolevers es deux boutz du pont; puis fut fortifiée l'abbaye très bien, et fut faicte une bastille. Puis ne demoura gueres que Talbot vint pour cuider secourir la ville, et vint du cousté de la bastille, et scavoit-on bien qu'il venoit. Et monseigneur le connestable fist incontinent que tous ses gens fussent prestz en belle bataille; et cuida passer au pont. Le Roy vint defendre que homme ne passast, et à grant peine peut passer mon dit seigneur tout seul, excepté monseigneur de Coitivi, Jamet de Teglay[1] et Bourgoys. Et quant mon dit seigneur fut passé il dist au Roy qu'il laissast passer ses gens, et qu'il le laissast faire; car il ne faisoit point de doubte que les Angloys en la maniere qu'ilz estoient mis ne fussent desconfitz; et le Roy lui dist qu'il avoit conclu que point ne seroient combatuz, et ainsi ne le furent point. Et si se estoient mis ou plus beau gibier que jamais furent, ne oncques puis ne s'i misdrent, si y furent-ilz par deux ou troys foiz. Et une autre foiz revindrent et apporterent des vivres, et ne vindrent pas le chemin qu'ilz estoient venuz l'autre foiz, et tromperent les compaignons.

Puis vindrent à grosse puissance, et y vint le duc d'Yorc et toute la puissance de Normandie bien IX mille combatans, et vindrent entrer en la ville, et le lendemain nous dirent qu'ilz passeroient la riviere en despit de nous, et prindrent les champs et devant nous menoient quatre ou cincq bateaux en charetes. Et quant le Roy vit cela il ordenna ses gardes, et bailla à monseigneur le connestable la garde de tout le siege; et au desoubs du siege jusques à Conflans[1] bailla la garde à monseigneur de la Marche; et depuis le siege jusques à l'Isle Adam à monseigneur de Saint Paoul; et de l'Isle Adam jusques à Creel à monseigneur de Heu qui avoit en sa compaignie tous les gens mieulx à cheval qui fussent en la compaignie, c'est assavoir : Poton, La Hyre, Antoyne de Chabannes, Penensac, Floquet, missire Pierres de Brezé, Jehan de Brezé[2], et Guillaume du Chastel. Hellot distingue dans son édition des Cronicques de Normendie (notes 278 et 301) deux Jean de Brézé ou Bresay, l'un frère de Pierre de Brézé (cf. Anselme, VIII, 270), l'autre son parent à un degré indéterminé; c'est celui-ci, croyons-nous, qui trouva la mort, à la fin de 1442, dans une rencontre avec les Anglais, près d'Évreux; le frère de Pierre de Brézé fut capitaine de Louviers, bailli de Gisors, et prit une part active au recouvrement de la Normandie. (Monstrelet, VI, 59; Mathieu d'Escouchy, I, 163.)

à l'Isle Adam il sceut au certain que tous les Angloys estoient passez; puis s'en revint au siege, et le Roy et monseigneur le Daulphin s'en alerent coucher à la bastille[1] et monseigneur demoura au siege. Et le landemain le Roy revint, et fist du vaillant, et voult demourer le derrain, et monseigneur cuida demorer à la bastille et monseigneur du Maine; mais le Roy ne voult et les enmena quant et luy à Pouessi le samedi au soir, et celui jour les Angloys vindrent loger à Maubusson.

Le dymenche au matin monseigneur le connestable envoya cent lances porter des vivres à la bastille, et le mardi ensuivant monseigneur le connestable et monseigneur de Saint Paoul vindrent à la bastille pour faire aporter des vivres. Et Poton luy donna d'un tour; car il faisoit l'avant-garde, et au retour l'arriere-garde; puis manda à monseigneur le connestable qu'il lui sembloit que ce estoit le meilleur de s'en aller par le pont de Morlen[2]; et monseigneur print le chemin par là cuidant que tousjours tirast après lui. Et quant Poton vit que monseigneur estoit passé, et qu'il estoit bien loign de lui il retourna vers le pont de Pouessi. Et quant il fut arrivé devers le Roy, il dist que monseigneur le connestable n'avoit osé passer par là; et quant monseigneur fut venu devers le Roy, il sceut ce qu'il avoit dit de lui, et le tour qu'il luy avoit joué, et pensez qu'il fut bien mal content, et parla bien à luy devant le Roy.

Celuy jour les Angloys firent ung pont sur la riviere d'Oise entre Pontaise et Conflans et vindrent passer toute leur armée près de Pouessi. Et le landemain vindrent presenter la bataille au Roy, et y eut belle escarmouche; et pour ce que la saillie du pont estoit mauveise et dangereuse on ne laissa saillir nulles gens, exceptés ceulx qui furent ordennez, c'est assavoir Olivier de Bron et bien XX lances[1] qui s'i gouvernerent si bien qu'il n'y faillit riens. Puis les Angloys tirerent à Mante; et le lendemain le Roy passa la riviere et s'en alla à Conflans, et fist monseigneur le connestable s'en venir à Paris et beaucoup d'autres gens de guerre pour passer par la dicte ville de Paris. Puis se retira mon dit seigneur le connestable à Conflans devers le Roy. Puis revindrent les Angloys une autrefoiz pour avitailler la ville de Pontaise, et se partit mon dit seigneur le connestable et assembla tout quanqu'il peut[2] de gens pour aller au devant des ditz Angloys; et s'i rendit monseigneur du Maine et tous les autres seigneurs quant ilz sceurent qu'il y alloit. Et se vint loger mon dit seigneur aux plains champs ou chemin par où les Angloys avoient acoustumé de venir et les ditz Angloys arrivent devers le vespre et se vindrent loger à bien demie lieue de notre avant-garde en ung boys et fyrent des feuz largement, et cuidoyons estre certains de les combatre le landemain, mais ilz jouerent d'un tour, car celle nuyt ilz s'en retournerent bien à une lieue arriere et passerent sur une petite riviere et la misdrent entr'eulx et nous. Et le landemain au point du jour que nous alions nous mettre en bataille, nous les vismes de l'autre costé, et fumes bien esbahiz et desplaisans, car plus ne leur povyons nuyre, ne passer la riviere sur eulx, ne eulx sur nous, et s'en alerent ainsi à la ville et nous retournasmes à Conflans.

Et aussitost que les Angloys s'en furent allez, les gens de monseigneur le connestable qui avoient CCCC lances vindrent donner l'assault à Notre Dame de Pontaise et dura bien l'assault deux heures, et fut prinse la dicte eglise d'assault, et ceulx qui estoient dedans mors et prins; et fut à ung samedi.

Et le dymenche et le lundi on commencza à batre les murailles de la ville, et le mardi on donna l'assault, qui dura bien longuement, et retirerent toutes les ensaignes d'encontre la muraille, excepté celle de monseigneur le connestable; et y eut fait de belles armes et de gens bien batuz. Et au derrain fut prinse la dicte ville d'assault et bien VIII[c] Angloys mors et prins. Et fut prins le conte de Cliseton et Henry Fetandir; et y fut mort missire Jehan Ripelay, et beaucoup d'autres gens de grant faczon. Et fut la vigile Notre Dame de septembre mil IIII[c] XLI[1].

D'après Gruel, la ville de Pontoise aurait été prise d'assaut le 7 septembre; cette date est inexacte : la hauteur occupée par l'église Notre-Dame fut prise le 16 septembre et la ville même seulement le 19. L'église de l'Hôtel-Dieu eut particulièrement à souffrir de ce siège. Comment madame de Guyenne trespassa dont monseigneur le connestable fist grant deul.

Puis demoura Guillaume Chenu, capitaine de Pontaise soubs monseigneur du Maine; et le Roy s'en vint à Orleans et de là en Touraine, et mon dit seigneur tira à Paris, et y fut environ quinze jours. Puis s'en vint après le Roy, et laissa madame de Guyenne bien malade; toutesfoiz lui estoit-il amendé, et cuidoit qu'elle se guerist, et tint son voyage en Touraine, et fut longtemps devers le Roy. Puis s'en alla à Partenay, et y fut certain temps; puis après [alla] devers le duc Jehan et y fut jusques après la Chandeleur[1].

Et celui jour de la Chandeleur, madame de Guyenne trespassa[2]. Et lui furent mandées les nouvelles, et le duc le scavoit bien et tous les gens de mon dit seigneur, et ne lui en fut rien dit tant qu'il fut à Partenay[1], où l'en le luy dist; dont il fist très grant deul. Puis fut certain temps au dit lieu de Partenay, et après fist faire ung service à Saincte Croix du dit lieu[2]. Puis le Roy le manda pour le voyage de Tartas, et faillit qu'il tirast devers le Roy, et fut le Roy en volenté de le laisser encores pour le gouvernement de France; et puis se ravisa qu'il le menroit avecques luy.

CHAPITRE LXXV.

Du siege de Tartas.

L'an mil CCCC XLII[3], en la fin d'avril, le Roy print son voyage, et dist à monseigneur le connestable qu'il lui failloit qu'il allast ung chemin et le Roy l'autre pour faire tirer en avant les gens d'armes, ou que autrement n'yroit point[4]; et ainsi fut advisé[5]. Et le Roy alla

1. C'est-à-dire « jusqu'à ce qu'il fût à Partenay »

2. « Saincte Croix » est omis dans les mss. S, fol. 95 r°, ligne 5, C, fol. 102 r°, dernière ligne, B, fol. 37 v°, vers la fin.

3. La mention de l'année fait défaut dans S, fol. 95 r°, C, fol. 102 v°, et B, fol. 38 r°; de plus, le premier de ces trois manuscrits ne met pas de titre de chapitre à cet endroit; les autres n'en présentent jamais.

4. S (ibid.) : « ... n'yroient poinct »; C et B (ibid.) : ... « ou autrement le Roy n'yroit poinct ». D'après ces deux derniers mss., Charles VII aurait refusé de prendre part à l'expédition sans le concours de Richemont; c'est aussi ce que laisse entendre le texte de N, fol. 49 v°, que nous suivons; une telle assertion, destinée à augmenter l'importance du rôle joué par le connétable, n'est pas déplacée dans le récit de Gruel; mais la variante de S, indiquant la nécessité d'activer énergiquement la marche des gens d'armes, si l'on voulait compter sur eux, nous paraît plus conforme à la vérité.

5. Le départ des troupes royales pour le Midi avait d'abord été par Limoges, et tira de là à Tholose, et fist tirer tous les gens d'armes qui tenoient les champs en avant; et monseigneur le connestable tira par Clermont et admena tout au dit lieu de Tholose; et y furent bien XV jours pour faire passer les gens d'armes, et pour attendre ceulx qui n'estoient pas venuz. Puis se partirent et tirerent par deux chemins, pour les vivres, le Roy par ung, et mon dit seigneur par l'autre. Et lors fut refusée l'entrée d'aucunes places au Roy et à monseigneur le connestable en tirant leur chemin; puis emprès en furent pugniz. Et tout se rendit au Mont de Marsant; et celle nuyt alerent coucher aux champs à une petite place[1] à deux lieues de Tartas.

Et le landemain se rendirent en la lande de Tartas le Roy, monseigneur le Daulphin, monseigneur le connestable et tous les seigneurs et gens d'armes, non point en bataille, excepté chacun par soy, pour ce qu'ilz sceurent bien que les Angloys ne venoient point. Et se presenta ou champ monseigneur le connestable[2], et là luy furent renduz les ostages, le filx de monseigneur d'Albret, qui estoit ostage. Puis s'en alla le Roy

loger en ung petit village et monseigneur le connestable alla loger à Sombroce[1], et fut à ung samedi, vigile de Saint Jehan Baptiste. Et estoient avecques mon dit seigneur, monseigneur de la Marche, monseigneur de Lomaingne, monseigneur de Fouers[2], monseigneur de Cominge et grant nombre de capitaines, et là sejournerent le landemain qui estoit dymenche; puis deslogerent le lundi au matin et vindrent mettre le siege devant Saint Sevé. Et le mercredi ensuivant le Roy y fist donner l'assault de son costé; et manda à mon dit seigneur le connestable qu'il ne feist point assaillir ses gens, et le cuidoit prendre sans luy, dont mon dit seigneur fut moult desplaisant. Puis après, quant il vit que ses gens estoient fort batuz, le Roy lui manda qu'il laissast aller ses gens assaillir; et fut en volenté mon dit seigneur de rien n'en faire; toutesfoiz fist-il assaillir. Et vous certifie qu'ilz ne tindrent pas ung quart d'heure qu'ilz ne fussent prins d'assault; et encores combatoient contre les gens du Roy que noz gens les venoient prendre et tuer sur la muraille. Et disoit monseigneur le Daulphin que les Bretons avoient tiré les mains aux gens du Roy ou qu'ilz ne fussent ja entrez. Et y eut esté fait de grans maulx, plus qu'il ne fut, si n'eut esté monseigneur le connestable; car par lui furent gardées maintes femmes d'estre forcées. Et pour ce qu'il ouyt crier « la force », il courut lui et monseigneur de la Marche soubdainement de nuyt et deurent estre tuez de meschans gens

Du siege de Hacques.

Puis se partit le Roy et monseigneur et toute l'armée, quant ilz eurent sejourné quatre ou cincq jours, pour tirer devant Hacques[1]; et monseigneur coucha aux champs et fut son charroy destroussé. Et vous certifie qu'il n'avoit gueres de vivres, et n'avoit pour lui que une petite bouteille de vin qui ne tenoit pas ung pot, et souppa sur une fontaine qui bien y servit. Et le landemain, qui estoit vendredi, misdrent le siege à Hacques; et y eut belle escarmouche, et bien petit à menger, car il n'avoit que des oignons et du pourpié[2], et bien petit de pain et de vin. Toutesfoiz lui vint le landemain une pipe de vin qui lui cousta bon pris et lui dura plus que jamais vin lui avoit duré; car tout homme qui en envoioit[3] querir avoit sa bouteille emplie, mais qu'il apportast une bouteille d'eaue pour mettre par la bonde. Et pour certain les gens de guerre eurent là moult à souffrir, et dura le siege bien troys sepmaines ou plus, et firent ceulx de la ville de grans saillies sur noz gens et nous firent de grans dommages; car ilz avoient de bons arbalestriers et nous venoient tirer jusques à la pointe de la lance, car nous n'avions nulz archiers, fors bien peu, et n'avions point de trait et estoient les plus orgueilleuses gens que l'en peut trouver; mais après furent en telle necessité qu'ilz se fussent laissez prendre d'assault, sans cop ferir; et jà se rendoient par les tours et par les gardes où ilz estoient; et mon dit seigneur le connestable et monseigneur de la Marche les en garderent pour les grans maulx qui se font quant on prent une place d'assault ou d'emblée[1].

1. Hacques, l'ancienne « Aquæ Tarbellicæ ». Ce nom étant souvent précédé de la préposition « de » a fini par ne faire qu'un mot avec elle, et au lieu de la ville d'Hacques, d'Acqx (cf. Chronique de Berry, dans Godefroy, p. 421), on a dit la ville de « Dacqx » ou « Dax ». Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 123) n'a pas conservé l'ancienne forme qu'il remplace par « Dacs », terme complètement rajeuni par M. Buchon (p. 394[1]).

Et fut la dicte place rendue au Roy, et y fut le Roy et les seigneurs six ou sept jours; puis s'en vint à Saint Sevé, et laissa Regnaud Guillaume[2] capitaine; et de là s'en tira sur la riviere de la Gallonne[3] à la ville d'Agen, et monseigneur le connestable et monseigneur de la Marche tirerent au Mont de Marsant.

1. La ville fut prise le 2 ou le 3 août 1442. Il y a aux Archives de Nevers une lettre du chancelier de France aux habitants de cette ville qui semble contredire ce qu'avance ici Gruel; on lit en effet dans ce document que « le jeudi deuxiesme d'aoust la ville de Asc fut prise d'assault du Roy nostre sire, entre cinq et six heures après midi ». (Archives de Nevers, CC 45; cf. Hist. de Charles VII, par M. de Beaucourt, III, 244, note 2.) D'autres documents donnent la date du 3, qui, selon M. de Beaucourt (ibid.), est celle de la capitulation.

Chapitre LXXVII.

Du mariage de monseigneur le connestable o madame Jehanne d'Albret.

Monseigneur de la Marche avoit parlé pluseurs foiz à monseigneur le connestable du mariage de luy et de sa niepce, la fille de monseigneur d'Albret; et en ce voyage fut conclu le dit mariage. Et tira mon dit seigneur le connestable du Mont de Marsant à Nerac, où estoit monseigneur d'Albret et madame et monseigneur de la Marche. Et quant il fut à quatre lieues de là, il envoya missire Raoul Gruel et missire Guillaume de Vandel, et les attendit deux jours; puis vint au dit lieu de Nerac, et là trouva monseigneur de la Marche, et ceste nuyt souppa o les dames et les vit à son aise, et dancerent.

Puis furent bientost faictes les fiansailles et les espousailles; et fut le jour de la decollacion Saint Jehan Baptiste que mon dit seigneur espousa, an que desus[1]. Et estoient avecques lui de sa maison : monseigneur de Chasteillon, Guyon de Molac, missire Gilles de Saint Symon, missire Jehan de Broon, missire Raoul Gruel, missire Geffroy de Couvran, missire Guillaume

On lit dans S : « ... et fut le jour sainct Jehan de Colasse, » variante reproduite, avec quelques différences graphiques, dans les deux autres mss., dans l'extrait de Du Chesne et dans la Compilation de Le Baud. (D, fol. 115 r°; L, fol. 362 v°, col. 1.) Jeanne d'Albret reçut en dot le comté de Dreux. (Bibl. nat., mss. fr. 4792, fol. 28, et 4802, fol. 53.)

Puis s'en alla mon dit seigneur devers le Roy à Agen, et y fut environ troys jours, et conclut ce qu'il avoit à faire; puis s'en revint à Nerac et y fut deux ou troys jours; puis se partit et s'en alla à Chasteau-Geloux et à Saincte Basille, et de là à Mermande[1]; et

S, dont nous avons imprimé en italiques les mots ayant fait l'objet d'une correction, ne mentionne donc pas le court séjour de Richemont à Nérac avant de se rendre à Castel-Jaloux. Tous ces noms propres sont diversement orthographiés dans C, fol. 104 v°; B, fol. 40 r° : ces mss. citent après « Guillaume de Launay » un « Henry de Launay, » mentionné aussi par Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 125; Buchon, 395[1], ligne 4). De plus, le personnage appelé dans N et S « Olivier Du Val » est nommé dans C, B et dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy « Olivier de Nael », et « Olivier de Néel » dans Buchon; C, B et Th. Godefroy donnent « Darionet » au lieu de « Daouet »; enfin B,

Et là le Roy dist à monseigneur le connestable qu'il convenoit que l'un d'eulx deux alassent faire venir les gens d'armes qui estoient vers Tholose et vers Bierne[1], et tenoient les champs pour ce que point n'estoient payez en ce temps là, et mouroient de fain eulx et leurs chevaulx. Et fut dit que, si le Roy ou monseigneur le connestable n'y alloient, que point ne reviendroient; ainsi fut advisé que mon dit seigneur iroit, et lors print le chemin et vint par Nerac pour faire partir madame pour s'en aller à Partenay et l'emmena quant et luy. Et en tirant à Tholose rencontra à une ville qui a nom Guavre maistre Robert de la Riviere, qui puis fut evesque de Rennes[2], qui venoit devers le Roy de par le duc Françoys pour avoir le congié de monseigneur le connestable son oncle pour venir devers le duc Françoys à sa feste[3]. Et le dit maistre Robert fist tant qu'il eut le congié de mon dit seigneur et le trouva à Tholose; et de là se partit mon dit seigneur et tira à Partenay, et madame quant et luy[4]. Et de là mon dit seigneur tira devers le duc son nepveu, et fut à sa feste à Rennes et firent grant chiere, et y fut bien ung moys

CHAPITRE LXXVIII.

Comment les Angloys vindrent devant Angers, et, en s'en retournant, prindrent La Guerche.

L'esté après, mil CCCC XL troys, les Angloys vindrent [à] grant puissance et bien soubdainement devant Angiers, et logerent une nuyt à Saint Nicholas, et en estoit chief le duc de Sombresset, et le conte Dorset et Mathago; et estoient bien plus de sept à huyt mille combatans. Et de là allerent loger devant Pouencé et prindrent La Guerche; et furent plus de XV jours ou troys sepmaines devant Pouencé, cuidans qu'il se deut rendre. Et quant monseigneur le connestable le sceut, il fist grant diligence et tira à Angiers, et manda ce qu'il peut de gens d'armes, et de là tira à Chasteau Gontier, et là trouva monseigneur d'Alenczon. Puis y arriverent monseigneur le marechal de Loheac, monseigneur de Bueil et Loys son frere et pluseurs gens de bien, qui avoient fait une entreprinse de aller courir

Le connétable passa la première moitié de l'année 1443 à Parthenay, où sa présence est signalée par les actes, les 31 mars 1443 (Archives nat., R[1] 192, pièce 18), 2 avril (Ibid., p. 16), 20 avril (Ibid., avant-dernière chemise), 25 avril (Ibid., R[1] 187, dernière chemise, pièce 37), 10, 16 et 20 mai (Ibid., R[1] 192).

Puis après s'en allerent assés d'autres, et se partirent environ quatre heures après medi, et estoient allez repaistre en ung village, et celle nuyt Mathago, bien acompaigné de mille cincq cens Angloys, venoit courir devant Chasteau Gontier, et les trouva de nuyt dedans le logeis, et les mist en desarroy, et en fut de mors et de prins. Et fut prins Loys de Bueil et d'autres; et monseigneur le marechal[2] et monseigneur de Bueil se sauverent. Et puis demoura une piece monseigneur le connestable à Chasteau Gontier; après vint parler au Roy à Saulmur pour concluire ce qu'il avoit à faire[3].

Cependant les Angloys s'en allerent de devant Pouencé et tirerent en Normandie; et à celle heure monseigneur l'admiral de Coitivi fut esloingné de la Court sans perdre nulles de ses offices; et entra missire Pierres de Brezé en gouvernement et Jamet de

Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 128; Buchon, p. 395[2]) met « le petit Mesnil. » L'amiral de Coëtivy disparaît en effet à cette époque de la liste des principaux conseillers de Charles VII, dressée par M. Vallet de Viriville; par contre, on y voit figurer Jamet du Tillay et Jean du Mesnil-Simon, sire de Maupas, sénéchal du Limousin; ce dernier est probablement celui que Gruel appelle le « petit Mennil. » Quant à Pierre de Brézé, il était conseiller depuis 1440; mais, en 1443, son influence augmenta beaucoup. Le connétable suivait presque constamment la Cour : des conférences s'ouvrirent à Châlons-sur-Marne entre les conseillers de la duchesse de Bourgogne, venue elle-même dans cette ville, et ceux de Charles VII, pour terminer le différend relatif aux conditions onéreuses du traité qui avait rendu au roi René sa liberté. La duchesse fit connaître, le 24 juin, ses dernières concessions, et un nouveau traité fut conclu le 6 juillet 1445. Deux autres règlements furent publiés par le Roi, le 4 décembre 1445 et le 1er janvier 1446, pour assurer le logement des troupes. (Hist. de Charles VII, par Vallet de Viriville, III, 60, 61.)

der faire; mais le Roy ne vouloit entendre jusques à celle heure.

Puis s'en vint mon dit seigneur à Partenay, et en fist amener madame. Et, bientost après, vint devers le duc François et le trouva à Rieux[1]; et Dieu sache s'il lui fist grant chiere. Et y avoit entre le duc Françoys et monseigneur Gilles son frere aucun differant, et n'estoient pas bien contens l'un de l'autre. Et incontinent que monseigneur le connestable le sceut, il envoya querir monseigneur Gilles et fist l'appointement[2].

Puis le duc requist à monseigneur le connestable qu'il feist venir madame de Richemont à Nantes, pour ce qu'il la vouloit veoir en Bretaigne, et aussi qu'elle veist la duchesse; et mon dit seigneur l'envoya querir et vint à Nantes, et là fut très bien festoyée. Et y estoient monseigneur le connestable, monseigneur Gilles et monseigneur Pierres. Puis s'en retourna monseigneur le connestable à Partenay et madame, et y passerent partie de l'yver[3]. Puis alla monseigneur

1. Le connétable était à Rieux le 13 octobre, jour où il contresignait l'acte par lequel le duc François remplaçait les chanoines de la chapelle de Saint-Donatien à Nantes par douze chartreux et un prieur. (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 2708, fol. 136, 137; il fut confirmé à Nantes le 2 novembre suivant; on le trouve imprimé dans les Preuves de D. Morice, II, 1382-1385, avec les dates du 12 octobre pour 13 octobre et du 11 novembre pour 2 novembre.)

2. L'acte de réconciliation du duc François et de son frère Gilles, daté de Rieux, 19 octobre 1445, est publié dans les Preuves de l'Hist. de Bretagne, de D. Morice, II, 1386.

3. Le comte et sans doute la comtesse de Richemont étaient à Nantes dès le commencement de novembre; puis ils regagnèrent le Poitou, où un messager était expédié de Paris au connétable, au mois de janvier 1446. (Cf. l'acte cité ci-dessus, note 1; Bibl. nat., ms. lat. 9848, fol. 63 v°.)

devers le Roy à Tours, et là fut conclu de mettre le siege au Mans, ou cas que les Angloys ne le rendroient et ce qu'ilz tenoient de places en la conté. Et y envoia le Roy grant nombre de gens d'armes, et estoient chïefz : monseigneur le grant sennechal[1], monseigneur l'admiral[2], monseigneur de Bueil et pluseurs capitaines[3]. Et ne vouloit le Roy aucunement que monseigneur le connestable y allast; toutesfoiz il fut mandé, car ilz ne vouloient riens faire les uns pour les autres, et faillist que mon dit seigneur y allast. Et, bientost après, les Angloys rendirent Le Mans et tindrent ce qu'ilz avoient promis, et fut la vigile de Pasques flories, l'an mil CCCC XL [et sept[4]].

3. Parmi ces capitaines, on peut citer : Germain Braque, Jamet de Tillay, Dunois. (Cf. un extrait du dixième compte de Xaincoins, publié par M. de Beaucourt, Hist. de Charles VII, IV, 308, note 1.)

4. Nous avons remplacé une mauvaise leçon de N, fol. 54 r° : « l'an mil CCCCXL six, » par la date exacte qui nous est fournie par S, fol. 102 v°; B, fol. 44 r°; C, fol. 107 r°. Pâques fleuries ou les Rameaux tombant en 1448 (n. st.), le 17 mars, la reddition du Mans par les Anglais eut donc lieu, suivant Gruel, le 16 de ce même mois. devers le Roy, et de là à Partenay, et y fut une espace de temps. Et bientost après fut entreprins l'apointement du duc Françoys et de monseigneur de Laigle[1], qui ne voult point venir en Bretaigne, si monseigneur le connestable n'y estoit, et l'amena mon dit seigneur à Nantes devers le duc, et y fut longuement, et en la fin fut fait l'apointement, ainsi que on peut scavoir[2].

Monseigneur Gilles dist aucunes parolles à missire Jehan Hyngant, qui estoient fort rigoreuses, dont il fist le raport au duc Françoys. Et en celle saison le duc Françoys vint devers le Roy ; et cecy fist monseigneur le connestable. Et fut pourchassée devers le Roy la prinse de monseigneur Gilles, sans le sceu de monseigneur le connestable ; et fut donné à entendre moult de choses au Roy et au duc Françoys. Et fut conclu que missire Regnaud de Denesay iroit pour faire

1. Jean de Blois, comte de Penthièvre, seigneur de Laigle.

2. Le traité de paix fut conclu à Nantes, le 27 juin 1448; en voici l'analyse : « Traité de paix finale entre François, duc de Bretagne, son oncle Arthur de Richemont, ses frères Pierre, seigneur de Guingamp, Gilles, seigneur de Champtocé et de Châteaubriant, son cousin François, comte d'Étampes et seigneur de Clisson, d'une part, et Jean de Bretagne, comte de Penthièvre et vicomte de Limoges, agissant en son nom et au nom de son frère Guillaume, de leur nièce Nicolle, fille de feu Charles de Bretagne, second frère dudit Jean, d'autre part, par lequel (traité) le dit Jean de Bretagne et les siens recouvrent une partie de leurs biens confisqués, renoncent à leurs droits actuels sur le duché de Bretagne et sont reconnus comme légitimes héritiers du duché de Bretagne, dans le cas où le duc François, Arthur, Pierre, Gilles et François, comte d'Étampes, décéderaient sans lignée mâle. » On remarquera qu'il n'est pas fait mention dans cet acte d'une intervention spéciale de Richemont, qui agit au même titre que ses neveux. (Archives nat., J 246, n° 114 ; publié par D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1415-1424; D. Lobineau, II, 1085-1093; analyse insuffisante à la Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 3909, fol. 14 r°.)

l'execucion et menroit les C lances de monseigneur le grant senneschal. Et quant le duc fut parti et les gens d'armes, le Roy le dist à monseigneur le connestable, lequel parla bien à luy, en disant qu'il ne faisoit pas bien de vouloir ainsi destruire la maison de Bretaigne, et que par autre maniere povoit bien appaiser la chose, sans mettre le duc et son frere en telle maniere en guerre et dissencion; et fut mon dit seigneur très malcontent. Lors le Roy lui dist : « Pourvoyés-y, et faictes diligence, ou autrement la chose ira mal; car le duc et les autres vont touz deliberez de le prendre et mettre en la main du duc. » Et ainsi se partit monseigneur le connestable très mal content, et s'en vint en Bretaigne après le duc; mais ne le peut attaindre que la chose ne fust parfaicte; et arriva à Dynan avant que monseigneur Gilles fust amené, lequel avoit esté prins par missire Regnaud de Denesay. Car quant monseigneur Gilles sceut que c'estoient des gens du Roy, il leur fist ouvrir la porte du Guildou[1]; et ainsi estoit bien aisé à prendre; puis fut admené à Dynan, comme dit est. Et lors monseigneur le connestable requist au duc qu'il lui pleut veoir son frere; et fut amené monseigneur Gilles au chasteau de Dinan; et là vint le duc et monseigneur le connestable et mon-

1. Le 19 juin 1446, le duc de Bretagne, alors à Razilly, près Chinon, signait l'ordre d'arrestation de Gilles et chargeait l'amiral de Coëtivy d'aller s'emparer de sa personne au Guildo ou dans toute autre place où il se réfugierait. Le Guildo, qui appartenait à Gilles, du chef de sa femme, Françoise de Dinan, est aujourd'hui un port à l'embouchure de l'Arguenon, Côtes-du-Nord, arr. de Dinan, cant. de Ploubalay. seigneur Pierres; et monseigneur Gilles se mist à genoulx, et monseigneur le connestable, et monseigneur Pierres, supplians au duc qu'il lui pleut avoir merci de son frere, en plorant tous troys en toute humilité; mais le duc ne s'en fist que rire et n'en tint conte pour quelque chose qu'ilz lui peussent dire ne faire. Et quant monseigneur le connestable vit ce, il se departit et s'en vint à Rennes, puis à Nantes et à Partenay; et là sejourna jusques ad ce qu'il sceut au certain que le duc avoit assigné ses Estas à Redon; et là cuidoient condempner monseigneur Gilles par les Estas. Mais mon dit seigneur s'i rendit et parla priveement o aucuns des seigneurs de Bretaigne et autres tant que la chose fut rompue; et fut le duc malcontent de luy. Puis s'en revint mon dit seigneur à Partenay, et puis tira à Chinon devers le Roy.

CHAPITRE LXXXIV.

D'un débat qui fut entre monseigneur le connestable et monseigneur de Nevers.

L'an mil CCCC XL sept, à Chinon, y eut[1] une belle assemblée de seigneurs devers le Roy, et y vint le duc Françoys; et y estoient : monseigneur le Daulphin, le Roy de Cecille, monseigneur d'Orleans, monseigneur de Bourbon, monseigneur d'Alenczon et monseigneur du Maine. Et de là monseigneur le connestable estoit allé veoir madame à Partenay.

Et cependant monseigneur de Nevers print le logeis de mon dit seigneur le connestable, et avoit autre logeis en la ville, et mon dit seigneur n'avoit que celuy. Et quant il arriva, il voult venir à son logeis; et l'en lui dist que monseigneur de Nevers y estoit, et n'en vouloit partir. Et mon dit seigneur vint tout droit descendre au dit logeis, et trouva monseigneur de Nevers, et luy dist que c'estoit son logeis, et qu'il failloit luy laisser, et qu'il avoit autre logeis, et qu'il s'i en allast. Et l'autre dist qu'il ne bougeroit. Et mon dit seigneur dist que si feroit; et en la fin faillit que monseigneur de Nevers s'en allast assés tost. Et depuis en furent grandes parolles devant le Roy, et s'i rendit toute la seigneurie. Et dist monseigneur de Nevers que le logeis lui estoit demouré pour l'amour de l'office. Et monseigneur lui dist, quant il ne seroit que Arthur de Bretaigne qu'il le garderoit bien de le deslogier. Et furent monseigneur de Bourbon et monseigneur de Heu pour acompaigner monseigneur de Nevers; et monseigneur n'y mena que lui et ses gens, dont le Roy de Cecille et monseigneur d'Alenczon et monseigneur du Maine furent mal contens qu'ilz n'y avoient esté pour l'acompaigner. Et fut mon dit seigneur mal content du duc Françoys; car il estoit en la presence devant le Roy, et ne dist oncques mot, dont beaucoup de gens furent desplaisans; et assés tost après furent bons amys. Et bientost après monseigneur s'en vint à Partenay, et y passa la pluspart de celle saison.

CHAPITRE LXXXV.

De la prinse de la ville et chasteau de Foulgeres.

L'an mil CCCC XL huyt, la vigile Notre Dame de mars, furent prins la ville et chasteau de Foulgeres[1] d'eschielle par les Angloys, dont estoit chief missire Françoys de Surienne, dit l'Aragonnays, dont les treves furent rompues. Et le vint dire à monseigneur le connestable à Partenay, Michel Machefer, et pareillement le Roy l'escripst à mon dit seigneur. Et le plus

L'an mil quatre cens quarente neuf, la veille Nostre Dame de mars fut prins la ville et chasteau de Fougeres d'eschielle par les Angloys. » B, fol. 46 r° : « L'an mil quatre cens quarante et neuf, la veille de Nostre Dame de mars, fut prinse Fougieres d'eschelle par les Angloys. » C, fol. 108 v°: « L'an mil IIII^{c} XLIX, la veille de Nostre Dame de mars fut prinse Fougieres d'echielle par les Angloys. » En 1449 (n. st.), Pâques tomba le 13 avril. La Notre-Dame de mars est la fête de l'Annonciation; la prise de Fougères eut donc lieu le 24 mars 1449 (ou 1448, anc. st.); c'est aussi la date fournie par la Chronique du Mont-Saint-Michel, p. 44. (Cf. D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1508-1510; l'original de la lettre de Charles VII, qui mentionne la prise de Fougères, est aux Archives de la Loire-Inférieure, E 94.)

tost qu'il peut se partit de Partenay, et manda toutes ses gens et tira à Nantes, et de là à Rennes, et là trouva le duc qui fut bien aise de sa venue; si fut tout le monde. Et lors commencerent à concluire ce qu'ilz avoient à faire pour le bon advis et conseil de mon dit seigneur; et en attendant que l'armée fut preste, il conseilla à fortifier la ville de Saint Aulbin. Et lui mesmes se partit le derrain jour d'avril et alla coucher au dit lieu; et là vindrent monseigneur le marechal de Loheac, et Joachim Rouaut, et Oudet de Rie, et Denisot[1], qui par le congié du Roy vindrent servir le duc, et y avoit une belle compaignie, tant de Bretaigne que de France, et bientost fut Saint Aulbin fortifié. Puis tira mon dit seigneur à Rennes devers le duc, et bientost après vindrent le duc et mon dit seigneur à Saint Aulbin, et fut fait les courses devant Foulgeres, et à l'une des foiz saillirent les Angloys et en fut de prins et de mors.

Et cependant arriverent les cent lances de monseigneur le connestable que missire Geoffroy de Couvran et Olivier de Broon amenerent, et dura la chose une piece, et y eut fait des sommacions, tant du Roy que du duc, et embassades d'un costé et d'autre. Et puis

S, fol. 105 v° : « Et luy mesmes se partit le derrain jour d'apvril et alla couscher au dict lieu; et là vinct monseigneur le mareschal de Loheac, Jouachin Rouault, Oudet de Rie, et Denysot. » B, fol. 46 r° : « Et luy mesme se partit le dernier jour d'avril et alla couscher au dict lieu; et là vint monseigneur le mareschal de Loeac, et Joachin Rouault et Oudet d'Effie et Denizot. » C, fol. 108 v° : « Et luy mesme se partit le desrain jour d'avril et ala coucher au dict lieu; et là vint monseigneur le mareschal de Loeac et Jouachin Rouault et Oudet d'Effie et Denissot. »

quant on vit que ce n'estoient que dissimulacions, on commencza à faire guerre en Normandie, et fut prins le Pont de l'Arche et Conches par monseigneur le grant senneschal et Floquet, et crierent Bretaigne. Et le jour Saint Pierres fut prins Beuvron[1], et y estoit monseigneur Jaques de Saint Paoul, lieutenant de monseigneur, et y vint mon dit seigneur [avecques luy monseigneur de Loheac et monseigneur de Derval[2]], puis retourna devers le duc à Rennes[3].

Puis firent une entreprinse, à la requeste de mon-

1. Saint-James-de-Beuvron, Manche, arr. d'Avranches. La principale fête de saint Pierre est celle du 29 juin et c'est très vraisemblablement ce jour-là que la place fut prise; mais il y avait aussi la Saint-Pierre « en goule août, » qui se fêtait le 1er août, et il faut remarquer que Berry (dans Godefroy, p. 436) et J. Chartier (ibid., p. 148) placent la reddition de cette place vers le milieu d'août. C'est cette dernière version qui a été adoptée par M. Luce dans la Chronique du Mont-Saint-Michel, I, 46, note 2. Nous ne savons où M. Hellot a vu que Gruel faisait remonter la prise de Saint-James-de-Beuvron au 16 juin. (Cronicques de Normendie, p. 285, note 317.)

2. Le passage entre crochets manque dans N, fol. 56 r°, et dans S, fol. 106 r°; nous l'empruntons au ms. C, fol. 109 r°; il se trouve dans ce dernier ms., en marge, et a été ajouté après coup; mais le copiste de B l'a intercalé dans le texte même (fol. 46 v°, 3e ligne avant la fin). Les éditions placent ce membre de phrase avant « et y vint mon dit seigneur » et non après, comme dans notre texte, ce qui semble indiquer qu'il était aussi en renvoi dans le ms. de Tournai. (Édit. 1622, p. 136; Buchon, p. 398[1], dernière ligne.)

3. Le 18 juillet 1449, Richemont signait une procuration datée du Gavre et donnant plein pouvoir à Guillaume Papin, son châtelain de Parthenay, d'accepter en son nom la curatelle de François d'Étampes. Le 13 août suivant, il était encore en Bretagne, à Redon, et prenait alors le titre de lieutenant général de Bretagne pour le duc son neveu. (Pièce just. XLII; D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1510, 1511.)

seigneur d'Etouteville, sur Tombelaine[1]; et y fut donné l'assault, et par faulte d'eschielles fut faillie à prendre d'assault, et en devoit monseigneur d'Etouteville fournir. Puis firent une autre entreprinse sur Saint Guillaume de Mortain, et y allerent pour faire l'execucion monseigneur le mareschal de Loheac, monseigneur Jaques de Saint Paoul, lieutenant de mon dit seigneur le connestable, monseigneur de Montauban, mareschal de Bretaigne, monseigneur de la Hunaudoye, monseigneur de Derval et Joachim Roaut, et pluseurs autres. Et fut donné l'assault qui dura depuis sept heures au matin jusques à la nuyt, et vous certifie qu'ilz se defendirent très bien; et le landemain se rendirent, et n'avoit plus homme en la place que cincq qui ne fussent blecez, et beaucoup de mors, et y eut fait de belles armes. Puis s'en retourna l'armée à Saint Jame de Beuvron, et de là à Saint Aulbin, et demoura pour monseigneur de Loheac, monseigneur de la Mervoille à XV lances, et pour Joachim, Micheau Guarangier à XV lances.

Et puis après le duc et mon dit seigneur firent leur armée, et fist tant monseigneur que le duc entra en Normandie, malgré tout son conseil, et vindrent mettre le siege à Coutances, et y arriva l'avant garde dès le soir devant[2]; en laquelle estoient : le mareschal

Voir l'étymologie, fantaisiste il est vrai, mais néanmoins curieuse, donnée par l'auteur de la Chronique des quatre premiers Valois, qui fait venir ce mot de Tombe-Hélène (édit. donnée par M. Luce en 1862, p. 226-229).

2. L'armée ducale entra en Normandie au commencement de de Loheac, monseigneur Jaques de Saint Paoul, lieutenant de monseigneur le connestable, monseigneur de Bossac, monseigneur de Briquebec et les c lances de mon dit seigneur le connestable et partie des gens de sa maison, et Joachim Rouault, Oudet de Rie et Denisot et pluseurs autres. Et le landemain arriva le duc et monseigneur le connestable, acompaignez de monseigneur de Laval, de monseigneur de la Hunaudaye, de monseigneur de Malestroit, de monseigneur de Coesquen et de monseigneur du Pont, et la pluspart des seigneurs, chevaliers et escuiers de Bretaigne. Et l'autre partie estoit o monseigneur Pierres pour mettre le siege à Foulgeres. Et celuy soir fut faicte la composicion, et le landemain fut rendue; et partit l'avant garde pour aller à Saint Lo et vindrent gaingner le logeis. Et le landemain arriva le duc et monseigneur le connestable à tout la bataille, et dedans deux jours fut faicte la composicion, et se rendit Saint Lo. Et bientost après on alla devant Karentan, qui gueres ne dura, et fut print par composicion[1], et

1. Carentan se rendit le mardi 30 septembre 1449. Le 2 octobre, le connétable y signait le traité de reddition de Neuilly, place qui appartenait à l'évêque de Bayeux. François de Bretagne était encore à Carentan le 4; par acte daté de ce jour, il autorisa le receveur Jean de Saint-Fromont à lever les deniers qui lui étaient dus « par la maniere qu'il eust peu faire en precedant d'icelle reducion. » (M. Cosneau a publié la confirmation par Charles VII du traité de reddition de Neuilly dans son Connétable de Richemont, p. 622, n° XC; Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 20405, pièce 43; Chronique du Mont-Saint-Michel, I, 51.)

aussi le Pont d'Ove[1] et la bastille de Beusiville[2], et La Haye du Puyz[3], et Briquebec[4], et Le Hommet[5] et Lausne[6], et fut le siege mis à Valoingnes, qui gueres ne dura.

Puis le duc et son Conseil taschèrent à s'en revenir au siege qu'il avoit fait mettre devant Foulgeres, qui lui tenoit au cuer; car c'estoit son païs, et s'en voult revenir. Et en s'en revenant, par le conseil de monseigneur le connestable fist mettre le siege devant Gavray[7], et y vint monseigneur Jaques de Lucembourc, acompaigné de beaucoup de gens de bien, et y fut deux jours. Puis monseigneur de Blot alla querir monseigneur le connestable, et le lendemain il vint; et à sa venue fut prins le boulevert par monseigneur Jaques et ceulx qui estoient avecques luy. Et le jour après fut la place rendue par composicion et demoura en la main de monseigneur Jaques de Saint Paoul[8].

Chapitre LXXXVI.

Comment monseigneur le connestable print congié du duc pour aller en Normandie.

L'an que desus mil CCCC XLIX, monseigneur le connestable environ la Chandeleur[2] se partit de Partenay pour venir devers le duc, et pour tirer en Normandie vint à Nantes, et furent les eaues si grandes que ce fut merveilles, et sejourna huyt ou dix jours. Et la cause estoit pour ce que maistre Roland Le Coisic lui dist qu'il y avoit ung sorcier, et sur toutes choses desiroit à faire justice de tous sorciers et erreurs contre la foy; et dès l'eure l'eut fait brûler si n'eut esté l'evesque Guillaume de Malestroit; et lors y eut grant question entr'eulx desus ce sorcier. Puis après se partit et tira à Dinan devers le duc; et là vindrent les nouvelles que les Angloys estoient descenduz à Chierbourc, et qu'ils avoient assiegé Valoingnes et y furent le caresme jusques à la Sepmaine Saincte[1].

Puis se partit monseigneur le connestable et à son partement monseigneur de Montauban[2] lui vint dire : « Monseigneur, je vous avertis, car on veult faire mauveise compaignie à monseigneur Gilles votre nepveu, et je m'en descharge. » Et incontinent monseigneur le vint dire au duc, et y eut grant altercacion, et lui demanda qui le lui avoit dit; et il dist que ce avoit esté monseigneur de Montauban, et lors le duc se courroucza très fort o monseigneur de Montauban, et lui voult courir sus, qui ne l'eut destourbé.

Monseigneur le connestable avoit cuidé mener le duc en Normandie, lequel avoit grant desir d'y aller, si n'eut esté son Conseil, par qui il fut destourbé. Et

1. En 1450, Pâques fut le 5 avril. Le duc de Bretagne était non à Dinan, mais à Rennes, et le comte de Richemont au port de Messac, lorsque leur parvinrent deux messagers chargés de leur annoncer que les Anglais allaient assiéger Valognes. (Cosneau, le Connétable de Richemont, p. 628, n° XCIV.)

2. Il s'agit ici de Jean de Montauban, à qui fut confiée la garde de Gilles de Bretagne : sans être resté complètement étranger aux préparatifs du meurtre de ce dernier, il ne semble pas y avoir pris une part directe; c'est son frère puîné Arthur qui conseilla ce fratricide au duc François et en dirigea l'exécution. (Cf. la « Déclaration ... touchant la mort de Gilles de Bretagne » et notamment celle de Jean Raiart, dans les Preuves de D. Morice, II, 1551-1554; Biographie bretonne, par P. Levot, II, 484, 485.)

quant monseigneur vit cela, il print congié, et s'en alla faire ses Pasques à Doul ; et au partir le duc lui fist promettre qu'il l'attendroit à Doul jusques au lundi après Pâques ; et ainsi le fist mon dit seigneur. Et le duc se voult rendre à Doul ainsi qu'il avoit promis ; mais les gens de son Conseil le garderent de y aller ; et demorerent beaucoup de gens qui avoient grant fain de aller o mon dit seigneur, et dirent au duc qu'il les laissast aller, et que si mon dit seigneur auroit grant nombre de gens, qu'il combatroit les Angloys, et mettroit tout à l'aventure ; ainsi demorerent dont depuis s'en repentirent.

Monseigneur s'en partit de Doul acompaigné de monseigneur de Laval, de monseigneur le mareschal de Loheac, de monseigneur Jaques de Saint Paoul, de monseigneur de Bossac, de monseigneur de Derval, et des autres gens de sa maison et autres, une belle compaignie et bonne, et vindrent pluseurs le conduire, et entre les autres Le Bourgoys, auquel il dist : « Jamais je ne teins demouré de bonne besoigne jusques à ceste fois. » Et Bourgoys lui respondit tout en lermoiant : « Je scey, monseigneur, que vous ne combatrés point. » Et lors monseigneur lui dist : « Je veu à Dieu, je les voiray, o la grâce de Dieu, avant retourner. » Et ainsi tira son chemin, et alla coucher à Grantville, et le landemain à Coutances. Et là eut des lettres de monseigneur de Clermont, de monseigneur de Kastres[1], de l'admiral de Coitivi, et du grant senneschal ; et en effect lui escripvoient que les Angloys avoient prins Valoingnes, et que encores estoient au dit lieu, et qu'il leur sembloit qui devoit tirer à Saint Lo; dont monseigneur fut bien malcontent; et toutesfoiz le fist-il pour qu'ilz le luy avoient rescript; et tira à Saint Lo.

Et celle nuyt lui envoierent ung poursuivant qui arriva à Saint Lo au point du jour, qui luy vint dire que les Angloys estoient passez Les Vez[1], et qu'ilz tiroient à Bayeux, et qu'il se rendist à Trivieres, et qu'ils les chargeroient tousjours en l'attendant, et là se rendroient à luy. Et au point du jour, mon dit seigneur fut le premier qui ouyt appeller le guet et fist lever gens pour ouvrir la porte[2]. Et incontinent fist sonner ses trompetes à cheval, et se arma bien diligemment; puis ouyt la messe.

CHAPITRE LXXXVII.

De la journée de Fremyny.

Le XVe jour d'avril l'an mil CCCC cinquante, après que monseigneur le connestable eut ouy la messe à Saint Lo, il alla à la porte de l'eglise et monta à cheval, et n'avoit pas six hommes avecques lui au partir.

1. Les Veys, Manche, arr. de Saint-Lô, cant. de Carentan.

2. Ici on lit dans N, fol. 58 r°: « Et incontinent le poursuivant lui dist que les seigneurs luy mandoient que les Angloys estoient passés et qu'il se rendist à Trivieres et qu'ilz les chargeroient toujours en l'attendant. » Cette phrase, qui est la répétition de quelques-unes des lignes précédentes, a été rayée dans ce même ms. N; mais il faut noter qu'on la retrouve dans S, fol. 108 r°; C, fol. 111 r° et v°; B, fol. 50 r°.

Puis chevaucha environ une lieue et se arresta pour mettre ses gens en bataille; puis fist ses ordennances et mist le bastard de la Trimouille à bien XV ou XX lances devant. Après envoya son avant-garde, en laquelle estoient monseigneur Jaques de Saint Paoul, monseigneur le mareschal de Loheac, monseigneur de Bossac et leurs archiers. Puis ordenna pour gouverner ses archiers missire Gilles de Saint Symon, missire Jehan de Malestroit et Philipes de Malestroit. Puis ordenna pour la garde de son corps certains gentilz-hommes, dont les noms ensuivent : premier Regnauld de Veluyre, Pierres du Pan, Yvon de Treenna, Jehan Budes, Hector Meriadec, Jehan du Boys, Colinet de Lignieres et Guillaume Gruel.

Puis ordenna gens pour arriere-garde et chevaucha en bonne ordennance le plus diligemment que faire se povoit. Et tant que les premiers de ses gens arriverent à Trivieres et bientost apres arriva. Et à l'eure qu'il arriva, les Angloys saillirent de leur bataille environ CCCC, qui misdrent en fuyte bien XIII^{c} archiers de ceulx qui estoient du cousté de monseigneur de Clermont, et gaingnerent des coleuvrines, dont on leur faisoit guerre; et si n'eussent été les gens d'armes qui tindrent bon, je croy qu'ilz eussent fait grant oultrage à noz gens. Et comme monseigneur arriva à ung molin à vent qui y est, tout estoit meslé, et le plus tost qu'il peut fist partir partie de son avant-garde, et ceulx qui gouvernoient ses archiers. Et les archiers allerent passer au bout de la bataille des Angloys et de ceulx qui avoient fait la saillie sur noz gens; noz ditz archiers en tuerent bien VI^{XX}. Puis après mon dit seigneur vint passer après ses archiers au plus près de la bataille des Angloys, puis s'approcherent la bataille et archiers de noz gens. Et vindrent à monseigneur le connestable monseigneur de Clermont, monseigneur de Kastres, monséigneur l'amiral de Coitivi, monseigneur le grant sennechal, missire Jaques de Chabannes, Joachim Rouault, missire Geffroy de Couvran, Olivier de Broon, Oudet de Rie, Jehan de Rousivinen[1] et toute leur bataille, et joingnerent noz batailles ensemble.

Puis monseigneur le connestable dist à monseigneur l'admiral : « Allons, vous et moy, veoir leur contenance; » et mena mon dit seigneur l'admiral entre les deux batailles, et lui demanda : « Que vous semble, monseigneur l'admiral, comment nous les devons prendre, ou par les boutz ou par le millieu? » Et lors l'admiral respondit à mon dit seigneur qu'il faisoit grand doubte qu'ilz demourroient en leur fortificacion. Et monseigneur lui dist : « Je veu à Dieu, ilz n'y demourront pas o la grace de Dieu. » Et à celle heure monseigneur le grant sennechal lui vint demander congié de faire descendre son enseigne à ung taudeis que les Angloys avoient fait; et monseigneur pensa ung pou, puis luy dist qu'il estoit content; et bientost après ses gens furent au taudeis. Et incontinent, sans plus dire, tout le monde s'assembla pour donner dedans, et ainsi fut fait; et n'arresterent point les Angloys, et touz furent desconfitz, mors et prins, et en fuyte bien six mille[1].

Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 144) : « Jehan de Roussevinen; » Buchon met par une correction maladroite « de Rostrenen » (p. 400[2]); ce dernier était, d'après une note marginale de S que nous avons reproduite à la p. 160, note 1, mort à Paris dès 1440. Jean de Rosnyvinen mourut au commencement de 1454. (P. Levot, Biographie bretonne, II, 607. Sur Jean de Rosnyvinen, Guillaume de Rosnyvinen, son neveu, et les principaux représentants de cette famille au xve siècle, voir à la Bibl. nat., les mss. fr. 26085, pièce 7209, et 22325, p. 321 à 336; aux Archives nat., JJ 185, fol. 50 v°.)

Et fut prins monseigneur Thomas Kyriel, qui estoit lieutenant du Roy d'Angleterre, et missire Henri de Norberi et Jennequin Baquier, qui fut prinsonnier à Eustache de l'Espinay, et Mathago s'enfuyt; et ainsi furent les Angloys desconfitz. Et coucherent monseigneur et les autres seigneurs et capitaines sur le champ, les uns à Fremyny et les autres à Trivieres. Puis monseigneur fist bailler de l'argent pour enterrer les mors; aussi fist monseigneur de Clermont. Et le landemain allerent coucher à Saint Lo et menerent leurs prinsonniers, et allerent eulx refreschir et faire pencer les blecez.

Et envoierent devers le Roy pour scavoir où ilz yroient mettre le siege, ou à Vire, ou à Bayeux. Le Roy leur manda qu'ilz meissent le siege à Vire; et ainsi le firent; et y vindrent tous ceulx qui avoient esté à Fremyny. Et bientost se rendirent ceulx de Vire, et leur fut donné CCCC^{m} escuz pour la renczon de leur capitaine, missire Henry de Norberi[2]; et fut pour

1. M. Cosneau, adoptant la version de Gruel, ne parle du comte de Clermont que pour le blâmer. Il n'en est pas moins vrai que ce dernier avait le commandement en chef, qu'il a seul engagé la bataille, qu'il fut obligé d'envoyer à la recherche du connétable, dont le retard pouvait amener une défaite, et que, la question de savoir à qui revenait l'honneur de la journée ayant été soulevée, on l'attribua au comte de Clermont et non à Richemont. (Cronicques de Normendie, p. 145 et s., p. 312, fin de la note 436; J. Chartier, II, 200; D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1521.)

2. S, fol. 110 v° : « Et ainsi le feirent, et y vindrent tous ceux se haster pour aller devers le duc Françoys qui venoit mettre le siege à Avranches. Et monseigneur le connestable, après qu'il eut eu la possession de Vire, il s'en partit, et avecques luy monseigneur de Laval, monseigneur Jaques[1], monseigneur le mareschal de Loheac, monseigneur de Bossac, monseigneur de Derval et tous les autres gens de sa maison, et missire Geoffroy de Couvran, Olivier de Broon et Jehan de Rosnivinen à toute leur charge. Et monseigneur de Clermont et son autre bande s'en allerent joindre o les autres gens du Roy pour mettre le siege à Bayeux.

qui avoyent esté à Fremigny; et bientost se rendirent ceux de Vire et leur fut donné quatre cens escus pour la rençon de leur cappitaine messire Henry de Norbery. » C, fol. 112 v° : « Et ainsi le firent touz ceulx qui avoient esté à Formigné; et bientost ce rendirent ceulx de Vire, et leur fut donné IIIIe mille escuz pour la ranson de leur cappitaine missire Henry de Norbery. » B, fol. 52 r° : « Et ainsi le firent tous ceux qui avoient esté à Formigné; et bientost se rendirent ceux de Vire, et leur fut donné quatre cens mil escus pour la ranson de leur cappitaine missire Henry de Norberi. » Le chiffre de la rançon donné par les mss. nous paraît singulièrement exagéré. Mathieu d'Escouchy, qui mentionne ce fait (édit. Beaucourt, I, 287), le fixe à 4,000 francs, et Th. Godefroy (édit. 1622, p. 145; Buchon, p. 401[1]) à 4,000 écus.

1. Sic dans S, fol. 110 v°; C, fol. 112 v°; B, fol. 52 r°. Th. Godefroy pense qu'il s'agit de Jacques de Chabannes (édit. 1622, p. 145), sans doute parce que ce dernier personnage est mentionné dans le passage précédent (ci-dessus, p. 207), mais avec le simple titre de « missire » (comme p. 211), ce que n'a pas remarqué l'éditeur. Notre chroniqueur appelle habituellement « monseigneur Jaques » le frère puiné de Louis de Luxembourg, comte de Saint-Pol, et c'est de lui qu'il est ici question, de même que plus loin, lorsque Gruel parle du siège de Saint-Sauveur-le-Vicomte. (Cf. L, fol. 381 v°, col. 1; Chronique de Mathieu d'Escouchy, I, 290, et ci-dessus, p. 200, note 8.)

monseigneur le connestable à Avranches, et là trouva le duc et les seigneurs de Bretaigne, et estoit mon dit seigneur grandement acompaigné. Et celle nuyt logea à Pons soubs Avranches[1] pour ce qu'il n'avoit point encores de logeis. Puis le landemain, premier jour de may, vint au siege; et bientost lui vindrent les nouvelles que monseigneur Gilles, son nepveu, estoit mort, dont il fut bien courroucé[2]; puis le duc le lui dist, et eurent grandes parolles ensemble; toutesfoiz la chose se dissimula pour l'eure de paour de plus grant scandale. Puis fut assise l'artillerie, tant bombardes que engins volans et aultre artillerie; et fut fort batue la dicte ville d'Avranches, tant qu'elle estoit prenable d'assault, et fut faicte composicion, et la rendirent les Angloys, leur vie sauve, et perdirent tous leurs biens.

De là s'en vint le duc au Mont Saint Michel, et ja estoit malade, et monseigneur le connestable le vint conduire jusques là. Puis se disposa de s'en aller à Bayeux où estoit le siege, et mena avecques lui ceulx qui avoient esté à Fremyny, et le duc s'en retourna en Bretaigne; puis envoya après mon dit seigneur monseigneur de Montauban, mareschal de Bretaigne, qui amena cent lances, et les archiers; puis mon dit seigneur tira à Bayeux, et avant qu'il y fust il estoit rendu.

Et cependant alla monseigneur Jaques devant Saint Sauveur le Viconte[3]; puis après y alla monseigneur le mareschal de Loheac, et celui de Bretaigne et autres gens de monseigneur; puis fut la dicte place rendue; puis s'en vindrent à Bayeux devers monseigneur. Et la vigile du Sacre[1] se partit mon dit seigneur le connestable de Bayeux pour aller mettre le siege devant Caan, et alla loger sur les champs à deux lieues de Caan à ung village nommé Cheus[2], et n'en partit point jusques au landemain du Sacre; et le vendredi matin se rendirent à luy ceulx qui avoient esté à Fremyny, c'est assavoir : monseigneur de Clermont, monseigneur de Kastres, monseigneur de la Tour, monseigneur l'admiral de Coitivi, monseigneur le grant seneschal, missire Jaques de Chabannes avecques la belle compaignie qu'il avoit[3]. Et vous certifie que c'estoit belle chose à veoir que de veoir sa compaignie, et bien à doubter; et vint logier du cousté devers l'abbaye de Saint Estienne, lui et monseigneur de Clermont, et tous les autres seigneurs et capitaines, et y avoit bien VIII[c] lances et les archiers à son siege. Et de

1. Le Sacre, ou fête du Saint Sacrement, fut, en 1450, le jeudi 4 juin.

2. Dans N, fol. 60 v°, la quatrième lettre ressemble beaucoup à une n; mais il faut lire « Cheus ». Cf. S, fol. 112 r°; C, fol. 113 v°; B, fol. 53 r°; L, fol. 383 v°, col. 1. Cheux, Calvados, arr. de Caen, cant. de Tilly-sur-Seulles, à 13 kilomètres de Caen. Gruel se trompe donc en plaçant cette localité à deux lieues seulement de Caen. On lit dans les Croniques de Normendie (p. 152) : « Et... lesdis mareschaux [de France et de Bretaigne]... chevaucherent tant qu'ilz arriverent à deux lieues prez de Caen, en ung village nommé Cheux. »

3. Charles VII fit alors une nouvelle levée de troupes; sur sa demande, la ville de Rouen décida, le 28 mai 1450, d'envoyer aux sièges de Caen et de Falaise deux cents personnes, « tant arbalestriers, archers que guisarmiers. » (Extrait d'un Registre des Délibérations, publié dans les Mémoires de la Société des antiquaires de Normandie, XIV, 347.)

l'autre cousté devers Fallaise cernerent les gens du Roy; c'est assavoir : monseigneur de Dunays, qui estoit chief de celui cousté, et Poton.

Puis environ huyt ou IX jours [après], le Roy vint à passer à ung pont que on avoit fait sur la riviere[1] au desus Caan, et le Roy de Cecille et monseigneur du Maine y estoient bien acompaignez, et alla loger à une abbaye nommée Ardenne[2], et monseigneur de Heu et monseigneur de Nevers et certain nombre de gens, que on leur avoit baillé, allerent loger à l'abbaye des Dames, de l'autre cousté de la ville de Caan. Puis après on commencza du cousté de monseigneur le connestable à faire des approches couvertes et descouvertes, dont Le Bourgoys en conduisoit une et missire Jaques de Chabannes l'autre. Mais celle du Bourgois fut la premiere à la muraille, et puis l'autre arriva et fut minée la muraille en l'endroit en telle maniere que la ville eut esté prinse d'assault, si n'eut esté le Roy qui ne le voult pas, et ne voulut bailler nulles bombardes de ce cousté de paour que les Bretons ne assaillissent. Et si y avoit dedans la ville le duc de Sombresset et bien troys mille Angloys, sans ceulx de la ville. Puis fut faicte composicion, et s'en alla le duc et les dames et tous les Angloys, eulx et leurs bagages sauves[3]. Et furent amenez les ostages à monseigneur le connestable, entre lesquelz estoit ung nommé maistre Ver[1], lequel estoit parent du Roy d'Angleterre, Hus Cepancier[2] et missire Charles de Hermaville, et jusques à XII ostages, dont avoit la garde missire Gilles de Saint Symon, Guillaume Gruel et Jehan de Benays. Puis fut rendue la ville et chastel, et apporterent les clefz à monseigneur le connestable, puis alla conduire le duc et la duchesse de Sombresset.

Bientost après fut conclu que monseigneur le connestable yroit mettre le siege devant Chierbourc[3], et le Roy et son autre armée alla mettre le siege devant Fallaise. Et ainsi se partit mon dit seigneur, et avecques lui monseigneur de Clermont et l'armée qu'il avoit à Fremyny, et le mareschal de Bretaigne tira à Karantan et à Valoingnes, et de là à Chierbourc ; et fut mis le siege à Chierbourc. Et se logea mon dit sei-

3. La veille du jour où la ville de Caen devait être remise au pouvoir du Roi de France, le connétable prenait ses dispositions pour le siège de Cherbourg : le 30 juin, il invitait les officiers royaux des diverses vicomtés de Normandie à lui envoyer des charpentiers, tailleurs de pierre et manœuvres, équipés et payés pour un mois; le rendez-vous était fixé à Valognes pour le 6 juillet. La vicomté d'Avranches dut fournir 20 charpentiers, 6 maçons, 120 manœuvres et 3 sergents ; la vicomté de Vire envoya 5 charpentiers, 2 maçons, 30 manœuvres, 1 sergent et 1 commis, dont la solde pour un mois se monta à 240 livres 10 sols tournois. gneur d'un cousté et monseigneur de Clermont de l'autre, et l'admiral de Coitivi et le mareschal et Joachim de l'autre cousté devant une porte; et y fut le siege bien ung moys[1], et y fut rompu et empiré IX ou X bombardes que grandes que petites. Et y vindrent des Angloys par la mer, entre autres une grosse nef, nommée la nef Henry Escan, et y commencza ung peu de mortalité, et y eut monseigneur bien à souffrir, car il avoit toute la charge.

Puis fist mettre quatre bombardes devers la mer en la greve, quant la mer estoit retirée, et, quant la mer venoit, toutes les bombardes estoient couvertes manteaulx et tout, et estoient toutes chargées, et en telle maniere abillées que, dès ce que la mer estoit retirée retraicte, on ne faisoit que mettre le feu dedans, et faisoient aussi bonne passée comme si elles eussent esté en terre ferme; dont les Angloys furent plus esmerveillés que de nulle autre chose. Et illecq fut tué monseigneur l'admiral de Coitivi d'un canon, dont monseigneur fut très courroucé, car ce fut domage; puis environ huyt ou dix jours après fut tué Le Bourgoys d'une couleuvrine, dont ce fut grant perte et domage, et furent touz deux tuez en une trenchée qu'ilz faisoient faire.

Puis après les Angloys firent composicion et baillerent ostages à monseigneur le connestable, lequel les bailla en garde à missire Gilles de Saint Symon, Guillaume Gruel et Jehan de Benays. Et en ce temps furent apportées les nouvelles de la mort du duc Françoys. Puis après la ville et chastel de Chierbourc furent renduz en la main de mon dit seigneur, lequel les bailla à garder à monseigneur l'admiral de Bueil et à ses gens; et fut l'an mil [CCCC] L, la sourveille de my-aoust.

Puis se partit mon dit seigneur la vigile Notre Dame de my-aougst, et vint disner à Valoingnes[1], et de là tira à Quarentan[2], à Caan, et de là à Phalaise, et à Alenczon[3], et au Mans, et au Chasteau du Ler[4], où le Roy estoit, qui l'avoit attendu troys jours, et vouloit parler à luy pour aucunes choses, et aussi touchant le gouvernement de Normandie[5]. 4. C'est sans doute pendant ce voyage à la Cour que le connétable fit de pressantes démarches auprès du duc d'Orléans pour rentrer en possession d'un « scellé » ou acte de cautionnement qu'il avait confié à ce dernier pour l'aider à réunir les sommes exigées par les Anglais pour sa rançon. La lettre de réclamation du connétable est datée de Sainte-Catherine-de-Fierbois, 26 avril, et se rapporte évidemment à l'année 1452 : quatre jours plus tard, Richemont, alors à Loches, accusait au duc d'Orléans réception de l'acte en question, et lui envoyait un reçu en bonne forme. (Cosneau, le Connétable de Richemont, p. 581-583, n° LXXV.)

C, fol. 115 v° : « Puix alla devers le Roy à Loches, et le Roy luy bailla la charge de la Basse Normendye, et se y en alla, et y fut toute celle ceson; puix s'en vint à Partenay, et de là tira devers le Roy à Tours, et y fut certain temps; puix le Roy le renvoiea en Normendie, et fut l'an mil IIIIc LII, et luy bailla charge de veoir toutes les monstres de touz les gens d'armes estans en Normandie. » B, fol. 55 v° : « Puys alla devers le Roy à Loches, et le Roy luy bailla la charge de la Basse Normandye. Puys le Roy le renvoya en Normandye, et fut l'an mil quatre cens cinquante deux; et luy bailla charge de voyr touttes les montres de tous les gens d'armes estans en Normandye. » Malgré l'addition du correcteur, le ms. S reste incomplet en cet endroit, puisqu'il omet les voyages de Richemont à Parthenay et à Tours. Le texte des mss. C et B se rapproche davantage de celui de N; cependant le premier ne donne pas la date du voyage de Richemont à Loches (1451), et le second, qui n'indique pas davantage cette date, omet en outre de mentionner le séjour de Richemont en Normandie après qu'il en eut reçu le gouvernement. Il convient aussi de remarquer que les quelques lignes placées en renvoi au bas de la page dans N sont précisément celles qui font défaut dans S. Dans le texte original, il devait y avoir dans ce passage une certaine confusion.

1. En juin 1452, Richemont vint à Paris, où il signait une quittance d'une somme de 149 livres, 15 sols, 11 deniers tournois, qui lui avait été versée par Jamet Godart, vicomte de Coutances, sur les revenus de la seigneurie de Gavray donnée par le Roi au

Et, l'an mil CCCCLIIII retourna ma dicte dame en Normandie, et logea une saison à Ceix[1]; et cependant monseigneur alloit par le païs; puis s'en revindrent à Partenay et y furent jusques au temps nouveau.

Ce qui détermina ensuite le Roi à exiger la présence continuelle de Richemont en Normandie fut sans doute le bruit alors très répandu que les Anglais méditaient une descente sur les côtes de Normandie. De retour dans son gouvernement, le connétable fit ravitailler et fortifier diverses places, notamment Granville et Caen. (Pièces just. XLVII, XLVIII.)

Le registre d'hommages du bailliage de Caen, conservé aux Archives nationales, sous la cote P 271, nous permet de suivre Richemont dans ses voyages continuels à travers la Normandie pendant les années 1453 et 1454. En 1453, sa présence nous est signalée à Falaise les 2, 8, 11, 14, 17, 19, 22, 28 mai, 2 juin, 18, 21 juillet, 22 août et 19 octobre; à Bayeux, les 6, 8, 10, 11 juillet, 26 septembre; à Caen, les 24, 28 septembre, 26 octobre. En 1454, on trouve des actes d'hommages et autres datés de Falaise, 31 janvier; Parthenay, 24 avril; Rouen, 4 juillet; Dieppe, 6 juillet; Caen, 4 août; Bayeux, 8, 9 août et 10 septembre; Valognes, 21 août; le Mans, 28 septembre. Vincent Ferrier fut solennellement canonisé par le pape Calixte III, le 29 juin 1455; l'élévation de ses reliques eut lieu le 4 juin 1456. (Vie de saint Vincent Ferrier, par l'abbé J.-M. 2. Richemont était à Paris le 15 juin 1456, ainsi que le montre un acte daté de ce jour, où il rappelle les ordres jadis donnés par lui relativement à la mise en état de défense du château de Caen, dans le cas où les Anglais feraient une descente en Normandie, ainsi qu'on le craignait depuis longtemps. (Pièce just. LI; Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 20405, pièce 37, publiée par M. A. de la Borderie, dans la Revue de Bretagne de juillet 1885, p. 11 et 12.)

3. La querelle de l'Université de Paris et des Frères Mineurs, soulevée par une bulle du pape Nicolas V, qui permettait aux Ordres Mendiants de confesser, ne fut terminée qu'en 1458. Nous ne voyons pas bien quelle part d'influence personnelle le connétable de Richemont peut revendiquer dans la transaction qui mit fin à ce différend; en tous cas ce serait, à notre connaissance, le seul indice du pouvoir « presque dictatorial » que M. Vallet de

Chapitre LXXXVIII.

Comment monseigneur le connestable, avant que le duc Pierres mourut, fist prendre aucuns des gens du duc.

L'an mil CCCC cincquante six[2], se partit monseigneur le connestable d'Orleans[3], le lundi de la Sepmaine Saincte et s'en vint à Tours; et là sceut que madame sa compaigne estoit fort malade, et, malgré tout son Conseil, laissa à tirer devers le duc Pierres, qui aussi estoit fort malade[4], et tira à Partenay devers madame et y arriva le Vendredi Saint; et y fut longuement pour la maladie de ma dicte dame. Puis s'en vint à Nantes devers son

1. Le 9 avril 1457.

2. Richemont, dont nous avons signalé la présence à Paris dès le mois de juin 1456 (cf. ci-dessus p. 221, note 2), y passa vraisemblablement une grande partie de l'hiver suivant, et ne quitta cette ville qu'au commencement d'avril 1457 pour se rendre à Orléans où il arriva le 9 de ce mois, veille des Rameaux (Pâques fut en 1457 le 17 avril). Il faut donc lire dans notre texte « l'an mil CCCC cinquante sept », nouveau style.

3. « D'Orléans » fait défaut dans S, fol. 116 r°, B, fol. 57 r°, et C, fol. 117 r°.

4. Sic dans N, fol. 63 r°, S, fol. 116 r°, et dans C, fol. 117 r°, ligne 3; B, fol. 57 r°, présente une légère lacune : « L'an mil quatre cens cinquante six, mon dict seigneur se partit le lundy de la Sepmaine Saincte et s'en vint à Tours, et là sceut que madame sa compagne estoit fort malade et tira à Partenay. » Le Lundi Saint fut en 1457 le 11 avril.

nepveu, et admena quant et luy madame, et y fut longuement jusques au decès de son dit nepveu. Et cependant, deux jours avant la mort de son dit nepveu, fist prendre Henry de Villeblanche, missire Michel de Partenay, Bogier et Coethlogon, pour ce que tousjours avoit sa suspeczon que missire Henry eut esté coulpable de la mort de monseigneur Gilles son nepveu, et cuidoit attaindre la chose; et pour ceste cause les avoit fait prendre, pour en cuider scavoir la verité.

Le duc Pierres, son dit nepveu, trespassa le jeudi XXIIe jour de septembre l'an [mil quatre cens LVII][1], et est enterré à Notre Dame de Nantes[2].

quante [sept][1], se partit monseigneur le connestable de Nantes, pour aller à Rennes faire son entrée et feste; et là fist sa feste de Toussains; et y avoit belle compaignie de seigneurs, barons, chevaliers et escuiers, entre lesquelz estoient monseigneur d'Estempes, monseigneur de Marle[2], monseigneur de Laval, monseigneur de Rohan, monseigneur Jaques de Saint Paoul, monseigneur du Guavre, monseigneur de la Roche, monseigneur de Guemené, monseigneur de Malestroit, monseigneur de Derval, monseigneur de Quintin, monseigneur de la Hunaudoye, monseigneur de Coesquen, monseigneur du Pont, monseigneur l'admiral et tous les autres seigneurs, s'ilz n'estoient mors ou malades ou enfans.

Et, bientost après, s'en vint à Nantes faire son entrée et y fut jusques après la feste des Roys. Puis le Roy lui fist scavoir qu'il allast devers luy à Tours bien acompaigné tant d'evesques que d'autres seigneurs de son païs chevaliers et escuiers, pour la cause d'une grande embassade du Roy de Hongrie, qui estoient venuz devers luy, pour le mariage de madame Magdalene sa fille. Et, cependant qu'ilz estoient à Tours, vindrent les nouvelles que le Roy de Hongrie estoit mort ; et ne mena pas tant de gens comme il eust [pu] ; nonobstant, il y alla bien acompaigné, et fut l'an mil IIII^{c} L sept[1]. Et passa par Angiers où il fut bien receu, et y fut huyt jours ; car il fut malade de colerique passion ; et puis tira son chemin à Tours. Et arriva devers le Roy au dit lieu de Tours ; et vindrent au devant de lui tous les seigneurs et gens du Roy ; et vint descendre au logeis du Roy. Et faisoit porter devant luy deux espées à Philipes de Malestroit, son escuier d'escurie, l'une à cause de la duché de Bretaigne, l'autre à cause de l'office de connestable ; et eut bonne chiere de tout le monde, et y fut bien environ ung moys.

Puis voult s'en revenir en son païs, et offrit au Roy faire telle redevance qu'il demande à cause de la duché de Bretaigne. Et lui fut dit que le landemain, qui estoit dymenche, il seroit receu, et y vint cuidant estre receu. Et quant il fut venu, le Roy et ceulx de son Conseil vouloient qu'il feist hommage lige à cause de la duché ; et mon dit seigneur respondit qu'il n'en feroit rien.

1. Cette date manque dans S, fol. 117 r°, C, fol. 117 v°, et B, fol. 58 r°, mais devait se trouver dans T, puisqu'on la voit dans l'édition de Th. Godefroy. (Édit. de 1622, p. 155 ; Buchon, 404, col. 1.) L'ambassade hongroise parvint au commencement de décembre à Tours et fut admise en présence du Roi le 18 ; la veille de Noël, un messager annonça la mort du Roi de Hongrie, pour lequel les ambassadeurs venaient solliciter la main de Madeleine de France. Le duc de Bretagne, ignorant sans doute cet événement, arriva néanmoins à la Cour dans le courant de janvier 1458. (Continuation de la chronique de Berry, dans l'édition de D. Godefroy, p. 477 ; Hist. de Charles VII, par Vallet de Viriville, III, 401 et 404 ; D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1724.)

Et pour ce qu'il n'estoit pas le plus fort dissimula et dist qu'il ne le feroit pas tant qu'il eût parlé aux Estaz de son païs ; et sur ces termes s'en vint en son païs de Bretaigne. Et vous certifie que jamais ne fust retourné devers le Roy, ne ne lui eut fait nulle redevance, si n'eut esté pour sauver la vie à monseigneur d'Alenczon, son nepveu, qu'il alla à Vandosme, et là fist la redevance au Roy telle que ses predecesseurs avoient fait, et non aultrement[1] ; lequel lui tint, et paravant avoit tenu plus estranges termes que à nul de ses predecesseurs. Et me semble que c'estoit mal recongneu les grans, bons et loyaulx services, qu'il avoit fait à luy et au Royaume ; car oncques bien ne lui fist.

1. Le Conseil qui devait juger le duc Jean d'Alençon, d'abord convoqué à Montargis, fut, à cause d'une épidémie qui sévissait dans cette ville, transféré à Vendôme. Arthur refusa d'abord de se rendre au mandement du Roi qui le citait en qualité de pair. (D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1729 ; Continuation de la chronique de Berry, dans D. Godefroy, p. 478.) Il ne figure pas en effet dans la liste des hauts dignitaires présents au Conseil lors de l'ouverture des débats, le 26 août 1458 : le comte de Dunois occupait, aux pieds du Roi, à droite, la place destinée au connétable de France. (Cf. une liste des membres du conseil tenu à Vendôme, à la Bibl. nat., dans le ms. fr. 5738, fol. 17 r°, à la bibliothèque Sainte-Geneviève, dans le ms. fr. L2f, fol. 131 v°.) Richemont se rendit cependant à Vendôme, un peu plus tard, et, lorsque le 10 octobre fut prononcé le jugement condamnant à mort le duc d'Alençon, il implora en faveur du coupable la clémence de Charles VII, qui commua la peine ; Jean d'Alençon, retenu prisonnier, vit presque tous ses biens confisqués. (Chronique de Mathieu d'Escouchy, II, 359 ; cf. l'arrêt prononcé contre le duc d'Alençon, à la Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 2718, fol. 190 et s.) Le 14 octobre suivant, Arthur III faisait hommage au Roi pour son duché « en la maniere accoutumée ». (Cet acte d'hommage est publié dans les Preuves de D. Morice, II, 1732 ; il y en a des originaux aux archives de la Loire-Inférieure, E 91, et aux Archives nationales, J 245, n° 107.)

Et pour ce que aucuns dient qu'il lui donna Partenay, je le croy bien; mais ce fut malgré lui; car s'il l'eut eu en ses mains, jamais ne l'eut eu. Mais monseigneur de Partenay le fist son heritier, et lui bailla la possession et fist faire à tous ses gens le serement à mon dit seigneur de lui estre bons, loyaulx et vrays obeissans, apres sa mort; et ainsi furent ilz, et lui furent bons et loyaulx.

Puis, après la condempnacion de monseigneur d'Alenczon, le duc s'en vint en son païs; et s'en vindrent ensemble, lui et monseigneur d'Orleans, jusques à Frontevaux pour veoir madame de Frontevaux leur niepce[1]; puis prindrent congié l'un de l'autre, et s'en vint le duc en son païs. Pleust à Dieu que jamais n'eut esté à Vandosme; car oncques puis ne fut sain jusques à la mort, et pluseurs font grand doubte qu'il fut avancé : Dieu en sceit la verité. Le bon prince s'en vint à Nantes, et là fut bien receu et y trouva la duchesse et fist grant chiere.

Et, bientost après, eut question encontre l'evesque de Nantes nommé Guillaume de Malestroit; lequel lui fist du pis qu'il peut, et faisoit comme mauveis et desloyal homme; car le duc l'avoit fait evesque, et son oncle le chancelier[2] s'estoit demis en luy à la

2. En marge du fol. 118 v° de S on lit cette note : « Ce chancelier, evesque de Nantes, avoit nom Jean de Malestroict et resigna au dit Guillaume de Malestroict. » Jean de Châteaugiron, de Malestroit, sacré évêque de Saint-Brieuc en 1405, devint chanrequeste du duc. Et le dit chancellier dist au duc : « Je feroye pour vous plus que pour homme qui vive ; mais par le corps Notre Dame vous en repentirés ; car c'est le plus mauveis ribauld traître que vous veistes oncques, et si vous le congnoissoies comme moy, vous n'en parleroyes jamais. »

Et depuis la conception Notre Dame fut tousjours le bon prince malade jusques à Noel, nonobstant que tousjours estoit sur piés, et point ne se couschoit, et jeuna les Quatre Temps, et la vigile de Noel se confessa et le jour aussi, et fut à matines et à la messe de mynuyt et à la grant messe du jour et à vespres. Et le jour de saint Estienne ouyt la messe, et dist ses heures à genoulz bien et devotement, comme bon et loyal crestien ; car, je croy, en son temps n'avoit meilleur catholique que luy, ne qui plus amast Dieu et l'Eglise qu'il faisoit ; et le plus pacient homme qui fust en son temps ; car par quelque reproche ou vilennie que on deist de luy, il ne vouloit prendre vengence, et du tout s'en soubmettoit en Dieu. Aussi Dieu luy a celier de Bretagne ; il fut transféré, en 1419, à l'évêché de Nantes. En août 1440, il soutenait un procès devant le Parlement de Paris contre Adam de Cambrai. (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 22322, p. 617 ; Archives nat., X^{1a} 1482, fol. 147 v°.) Il mourut le 14 septembre 1443 et fut enterré dans la nef de la cathédrale de Nantes. (Bibl. nat., ms. fr. 22322, ibid.) Guillaume de Malestroit, successeur du précédent, refusa de faire hommage au duc pour le temporel de l'évêché de Nantes. Le duc Arthur ayant voulu exercer sur les domaines de cette église les droits de suzeraineté qu'il revendiquait, l'évêque lança contre ses officiers une excommunication, confirmée, le 16 février 1459, par le pape Pie II, et frappa d'interdit tous les domaines que le duc possédait dans les limites de l'évêché. (Archives de la Loire-Inférieure, E 74^{3}, avant-dernier cahier, fol. 1 et s.; D. Morice, Preuves, II, 1733, 1735, 1736.)

tousjours gardé sa bonne renommée, et plus après la mort que devant. Ne pour quelzques mauveis termes que luy tint le Roy Charles son maistre, oncques mal ne deist de luy ne ne le laissa à bien servir. Et scey bien qu'il estoit rempli de toutes bonnes vertus; car oncques ne ouyt blasphemer le nom de Dieu qu'il ne reprint ceulx qui le blasphemoient et les punissoit, s'ilz estoient telz qu'il le peut faire.

Oncques homme en son temps n'ayma plus justice, ne ne mist peine de la faire à son povoir, qu'il faisoit. Oncques hommes ne hayt plus hereses et sorciers et sorcieres qu'il heoit, et bien y parut; car il en fist plus bruler en France, en Poictou et en Bretaigne que nul autre en son temps. Et povoient bien dire les sorciers et sorcieres et hereses, quant il mourut, que leur ennemy mortel estoit mort.

Oncques prince en son temps ne fut plus humble, ne plus charitable, ne plus misericors, ne plus liberal ne plus large, ne plus habandonné en bonne maniere, sans prodigalité. Et pour sa doulceur, benignité et bon recueil ha plus esté obey et fait de choses que n'eut fait par cruaulté ou grans dons.

Et, oultre ce, a esté le moins avaricieux prince qui fust en son temps; et bien y a paru en pluseurs manieres; car dès l'eure qu'il print l'espée, le Roy lui offrit la duché de Touraine; mais, pour ce qu'il veoit le Roy avoir fort à besoingner et le Royaume en grant necessité, refusa pour lors la dicte duché, disant qu'il ne la prendroit point jusques ad ce qu'il eut fait quelque grant service au Roy et au Royaume, et que le Roy fut au-dessus de ses besoignes; nonobstant que le Roy Charles VIe de ce nom la lui avoit donnée, et par aucun temps vi qu'il s'en appelloit duc[1]. Et suis certain que s'il eut voulu croire aucuns de son Conseil, à

1. Il y a en effet des actes dans lesquels Richemont prend le titre de duc de Touraine, notamment dans le traité de son mariage avec Mme de Guyenne. (Pièce just. XII.) Mais on ne le trouve pas ainsi qualifié avant le 23 février 1423 et il abandonna complètement, lors de son entrée au service de Charles VII, ce titre qu'il avait reçu, non de Charles VI, mais, selon toute vraisemblance, après la mort de ce dernier, du régent anglais, son allié. Richemont figure, à la date de 1423, dans la liste des ducs de Touraine, dressée par M. J.-X. Carré de Busserolle. Mais il semble utile d'établir une distinction entre les ducs vassaux du Roi d'Angleterre et les ducs vassaux du Roi de France. Charles, plus tard Charles VII, reçut le duché de Touraine en apanage, par lettres du 15 juillet 1419. C'est à partir de son avènement au trône, en 1422, qu'il y a deux séries de ducs; tandis que le comte de Richemont porte le titre de duc de Touraine, qu'il devait évidemment, comme le comté d'Ivry, à la générosité de Henri V ou du régent Bedford, Charles VII déclare par lettres données à Bourges, le 27 mai 1423, enregistrées à la Chambre des comptes, le 2 juin suivant, la Reine Marie d'Anjou, son épouse, titulaire du duché de Touraine. Le 19 avril 1424, Charles VII, pour récompenser Archambault, comte de Douglas, d'être venu en France le servir contre les Anglais, lui confère la possession du duché de Touraine. Le comte de Douglas étant mort à Verneuil, le 17 août de la même année, le duché passa, en vertu de lettres du 21 octobre 1424, entre les mains de Louis III d'Anjou, Roi de Sicile, qui devait en jouir jusqu'à ce qu'il eût été payé d'une somme de 100,000 francs, à lui promise à l'occasion de son mariage avec Isabelle de Bretagne; d'après M. Carré de Busserolle, il rendit le duché au Roi en 1431. D'un autre côté, Richemont abandonna, vers l'époque de son entrée au service de Charles VII, le titre de duc de Touraine; mais le Roi d'Angleterre disposa de nouveau de ce duché le 8 septembre 1434, pour en transporter la possession à Jean, comte d'Arondel, seigneur de Mautravers. (Carré de Busserolle, Dictionnaire géographique, historique et biographique d'Indre-et-Loire et de l'ancienne province de Touraine, t. VI, p. 150, dans les Mémoires de la Société archéologique de Touraine, t. XXXII; notre Étude critique sur la Valeur historique de la chronique de Richemont, p. 77; Pièce just. XII;

la prinse de Paris, et avoir excedé les termes de raison, il eut gaingné deux cens mille escuz; mais il ne l'eut pour rien fait, et ne gaingna rien que bonne renommée et l'amour des gens[1].

Il estoit preudomme, chaste et vaillant autant comme prince peut estre[2]. Et me semble que homme ne devoit rien doubter en sa compaignie; car homme en son temps ne fut de meilleur conduyte [que] luy pour conduire une grant bataille ou grant siege, et pour toutes approches en toutes manieres. Et tous les jours, une foiz de journée au moins, parloit de la guerre et y prenoit plaisir plus que à nulle autre chose. Sur toutes choses amoit gens vaillans et bien renommés, et amoit et soustenoit le peuple plus que nul autre, et faisoit largement des biens aux pouvres mendians et autres pouvres de Dieu. Et quant je ne cesseroye jamais de dire, je n'en sçauroye dire la dixiesme partie de ce que je croy et pense qu'il en a fait[3].

monseigneur le Roy pour certaines causes et consideracions ad ce [le] movans nous donner, octroier, ceder et transporter les terres et seignouries de Partenay, Voulvent, Mairevent, Le Couldroy Salbart, Secondigné, Beceleu et Chastellaillon pour estre le perpetuel heritage de nous et de nos hoirs procreez en loyal mariage, et ou cas que n'averions hoirs au temps de notre trepassement, que les dites terres et seignouries feussent et soint à notre très chier et très amé neveu Pierre de Bretaigne, fils de notre très redoubté seigneur et frere monseigneur le duc de Bretaigne et [à] ses hoirs, et lequel don et transport feu notre très chier et très amé cousin et pere messire Jehan Larcevesque, jadis seigneur des dites terres et qui icelles par avant avoit transportés en certaine somme et maniere à mon dit seigneur le Roy, ait eu ferme et agreable, si comme tout ce et autres choses touchant ceste matiere apparrent plus à plain par lettres sur ce solempnement faictes; et il soit ainsi que notre dit très redoubté seigneur nous ait requis de le faire seur que notre dit neveu soit notre heritier tant des dictes terres que autres quelxconques en quelque pays qu'elles soient situées et assises, et que d'icelles nous pleust faire et instituer notre dit neveu dès à present notre heritier, tant pour l'amour singuliere que avons à notre dit neveu, comme pour consideracion de la somme de quinze mille livres qu'il nous octroia autresfois pour nous aider à certains poiemens que avons fait à notre dit feu pere et cousin, et de laquelle nous ayons jà piecza eu sept milles livres, savoir faisons que tousjours voulon obbeir à notre dit très redoubté seigneur, ainsi que en ce cas et tous autres somes desirans de faire. Et pour la très singuliere amour et dillection que avons à notre dit neveu, icelui ou cas que yrons de vie à trespassement sens heir procroié de notre char, avons fait, constitué et ordenné notre heritier seul et pour le tout de toutes et chacunes noz terres et seignouries, que aurons au jour de notre trespas quelque part et en quelque seignourie qu'elles soint situées ou assise, pour valoir à notre dit neveu en tant que touche les terres que aurons ou pais et duché de Bretaigne sur le droit d'appennage qui nous pourroit appartenir à cause de la subcession de notre feu et très redoubté seigneur et pere, que Dieu pardoint, et de toutes lesquelles terres et seignouries, incontinent après notre deceix; et ou cas que yrions de vie à trespassement sens heirs procroié de notre corps, comme dit est, voulons que notre dit neveu soit notre heritier et subcesseur, et que d'icelles il puisse prandre royaument et de fait la possession et saesine pour en joir comme notre heritier et ainsi que dit est. Et d'abundant voulons et consentons que la dite somme de sept mille livres que avons receue, avecques que recevrons d'icelle somme de quinze mille livres, vaille à notre dit très redoubté seigneur et frere sur le droit d'appennage qu'il nous doit ou pourra devoir. Et pour plus grant seurté des choses dessus dites avons signé ces presentes de notre main, et fait seeller de notre seel; et promettons en bonne foy les choses en cestes presentes contenues tenir et inviolablement garder sens faire ne venir à l'encontre.

Ce fut fait et donné à Redon, le vignt et quatriesme jour du moys d'octobre l'an de grâce mil quatre cens vignt et huict. Ainsi signé : Artur. Par monseigneur le conte connestable, messire Jehan Chevry, Guillaume Giffart, Guillaume de Broon, chevaliers, Guillaume de Vendel, le chastelain de Partenay et autres presens. Galet.

Donné cest present vidimus par notre dite Court, le premier jour de fèverier, l'an mil IIII^{c} quarante et ung.

Caen, 24 juin 1450. — Vidimus, délivré le 29 novembre 1480 par May de Houllefort, bailli de Caen, du traité de reddition de la ville et du château de Caen à Charles VII. (Copie sur papier aux Arch. nat., K 68, n° 45.)

Copie de certain vidimus fait soubz le grant séel aux causes

1. Cette date est celle des lettres de curatelle.

du bailliage de Caen, seellé en cire vert sur double queue par moy, Estienne Robin, secretaire de madame la duchesse d'Orleans et clerc de sa Chambre des comptes, veu, leu, tenu et diligemment regardé de mot à mot, duquel la teneur s'ensuit :

A tous ceulx qui ces presentes lettres verront, May de Houllefort, escuier, seigneur de Hamars et de Vienne (?), conseiller, chambellan du Roy, nostre sire, son bailli de Caen, et conservateur des droiz, privileges, franchises, libertés et choses appartenant à la dicte ville de Caen, salut.

Savoir faisons que aujourd'hui, xxixe jour de novembre, l'an mil IIII^c^ quatre-vingts, nous avons veu, tenu, leu mot apres mot, et diligeamment regardé en la maison commune de la dicte ville de Caen, ou livre escript en parchemin, ouquel sont contenues et enregistrées par ordonnance de justice les faitz et choses appartenant à la dicte ville, le traicté et appoinctement fait par le feu Roy Charles, que Dieu absoulle, avecques feu monseigneur le duc de Sommerset pour la redducion des ville et chastel du dict Caen, selon les articles, saines et entieres, desquelles la teneur ensuit :

Traictié et appoinctement fait par le Roy avecques monseigneur le duc de Somerset pour la redducion des ville et chastel de Caen.

Premierement mon dit seigneur le duc baillera et delivrera reaument et de fait es mains du Roy ou de ses commis les ditz ville et chastel de Caen dedens le premier jour de juillet prouchain venant, à heure de medy, ou cas toutesvoies que dedens icelui jour les gens du Roy par puissance ne seroient levés et mis hors du logis par eulx prins au lieu de Vauceulles devant les dites villes.

Item pour ce faire et acomplir baillera mon dit seigneur le duc dix huit hostages ; c'est assavoir douze des gens de guerre et six de ceulx des ditz ville [et chastel] de Caen, lesqueulx, les dites choses faictes et acomplies, seront delivrez franchement et quictes.

Item, en faisant et acomplissant les choses dessus dites, le Roy sera content que mon dit seigneur le duc, madame sa femme, ses enffans et toutes autres manieres de gens de quelque estat, nacion ou condicion qu'ils soient s'en puissent aller ou bon leur semblera ou royaulme d'Angleterre ou ailleurs en leur party, excepté à Faloize et Dampfront, avecque tous leurs chevaulx, hernois, trousses, ars, arbelestes et autre artillerie dont homme se peult aider au coul, biens, lettres, obligacions, papiers, memoires et toutes escriptures, quelles qu'elles soient et choses quelxconques à eulx appartenant, soit par eaue, ou par terre, à pié ou à cheval. Et pour ce faire leur seront bailliez bons, sceurs et loyaulx saufz-conduitz jusques à tel novembre (?) que mestier sera durant le terme de trois mois, avecques navire, charroy, chevaulx à somme et gens pour les conduire pour mener et emporter leurs dits biens et choses dessus dites à leurs despens raisonnablement; et aussi conduit se mestier est, sans ce que aucun arrest, destourbier ou empeschement leur soit fait, mis, ou donné, pour quelconque cause que ce soit en fournissant et acomplissant les choses dessus dites.

Item, et s'il advenoit par mutacion de temps et fortune que le dit temps durant, aucuns des dites gens, leur navire ou autres choses ne peussent passer et aller au dit royaulme d'Angleterre, que leurs dits saufz-conduitz leur soient prolongués par le bailli de Caen ou autre demourant es villes de Harfleu, Honnefleu, ou Dieppe aiant à ce povoir suffisant du Roy.

Item, et pour ce qu'il y a plusieurs es ditz villes et chastel de Caen blêmez et mallades et femmes en gesine qui bonnement dedens le dit temps ne s'en pourroient aller, le Roy sera content que à ceulx et celles de telle essence et autres, qui, après la redducion d'icelles villes et chastel, voudront demourer en icelles villes ou es forsbourgz, soit baillié bon et sceur saufconduit pour eulx en aller et amener leurs ditz biens ainsi que dessus est dit, durant ung mois après leur convalescence.

Item, que s'aucuns des dessus dits vendoient ou vouloient vendre aucuns de leurs dits biens, chevaulx, hernois et autres choses, ou iceulx eschangier à autres choses quelxconques, faire le pourroient, à telles personnes que bon leur semblera, et les deniers ou autres choses emporter sceurement.

Item, et aussi demourront tous prisonniers estans es ditz ville et chastel francz et quictes de toutes les foy et promesses qu'ilz ont envers les Anglois. Et pareillement rendront les dits Anglois tous les scellés qu'ilz ont du party du Roy quictes.

Item, et pendant le dit temps de la dite reducion des ditz ville et chastel et jusques au jour d'icelle reducion les gens du Roy ne aucuns d'iceulx ne entreront par force en aucune des ditz ville et chastel sans le congié de mon dit seigneur le duc.

Item, et que pendant le temps de la dite reducion mon dit seigneur le duc pourra envoier ses heraulx et pourssuivants en Angleterre pour le fait de leur secours, navire et autres choses à eulx necessaires.

Item, le Roy sera content recepvoir en sa bonne grace tous les habitans des dites villes de Caen, tant gens d'eglise, nobles, bourgois que autres quelxconques demourans et residans en icelle, et en tant que mestier seroit leur donner abolicion et les restituer à leur bonne fame et renommée et seront restituez en leurs biens, heritages et possessions queulxconques ou qu'ilz soient en tant que touche les dits heritages; et les tendra en leurs franchises et libertez et en leurs privilleges dont ilz ont anciennement acoustumé de joir, et mesmement au temps de la descente du feu roy d'Angleterre derrain trespassé.

Item, et sera le Roy content que les dessus dits se puissent faire paier de leurs debtes mobiliaires et arrerages quelxconques à eulx loyaulment deues, reserve des debtes et arrerages qui pourroient avoir esté receues par les officiers du Roy avant la dite reducion.

Toutes lesquelles choses et chacune d'icelles de point en point et d'article en article, nous, Jehan, conte de Dunois et de Longueville, lieutenant general du Roy sur le fait de sa guerre, promettons par la foy et serment de notre corps faire avoir agreables au Roy et en baillier ses lettres à mon dit seigneur le duc, dedens le jour de demain, en baillant et delivrant par mon dit seigneur le duc le sourplus des hostages qui restent à bailler du nombre dessus dit; en baillant aussi par mon dit seigneur le duc [promesse] de tenir, attendre et acomplir ce que dessus est dit de point en point et tout sans fraulde, barat ne mal engin.

En tesmoing de ce avons signées ces presentes de nostre main le xxiiij^{e} jour de juing, l'an mil IIII^{c} cinquante[1].
